Stock Prices Down Despite A Late Rally

Upward Movement Toward Close Due Partly to Short Covering; Indications of New Buying Seen

The speculative markets yesterday once more reflected the uncertainty of traders over the outcome of the Near Eastern complications. Further thrusts were made against the price structure, and the tendency of quotations to decline was accelerated by the closing out of accounts whose margins had been effaced by the last fortnight. The secondary phases of the setback were accompanied by a further broadening of activity.

Toward the close prices rallied from the most depressed levels of the day, partly as a result of short covering. Although, in spite of the late recovery, both railroad and industrial shares closed slightly lower, the movement was much less drastic than on Wednesday. Forces of irregularity, indicating new buying at existing price levels, were operative.

A rally in the cotton market reduced net losses to two to ten hundredths of a cent a pound. Wheat prices, after early strength, reacted, and final prices were ⅜ of a cent net lower to 1½ cents higher. Net changes in the European exchanges were extremely slight and reflected more a disposition to wait than any definite conviction as to the trend of events in Turkey. On the whole, there was a slightly more confident tone in the financial district than on the previous day.

The investment market shared the uncertainties that affected the other markets and average prices moved a trifle lower.

The weekly statements of the Federal Reserve system revealed little change in the domestic banking situation. The system as a whole shows a trifling gain in the ratio of reserves from 78.3 per cent to 78.4 per cent, as compared with the previous week. There was a moderate expansion of borrowings by member banks against United States government obligations, which were more than offset by a reduction in rediscounts of commercial paper. The New York bank, which benefited disproportionately from the Treasury operations of the middle of the month, showed a slight loss in its ratio of reserves, despite a gain in gold holdings. Bills bought in the open market and rediscounts secured by government obligations showed increases.

Money and Credit

After renewing at 4¼ per cent yesterday, the same as the previous day, call money advanced to 5 per cent. Government withdrawals continue to be a factor in holding up the rate. Withdrawals from the banks to-day will amount to $2,800,000.

The Dollar in Foreign Exchange

Support came into foreign exchanges after early weakness yesterday and the close found changes irregular and relatively unimportant.

Cable rates on London fell off an eighth of a cent, while French francs worked a fraction of a point higher and lire dropped 2½ points.
