WAR BRINGS MARKED CHANGE IN BRUSSELS

Brussels, Sept. 1.—(Associated Press Correspondent.)—Visitors who knew Brussels before the war and who then were struck with its vitality and volubility of its citizens now are amazed at the quietude of the place.

What has brought about the dumbness is, in the first place, the knowledge that every one is under constant surveillance, not only by soldiers but by secret German agents and that every chance word may lead to arrest and probable deportation to a concentration camp in Germany, where the mayor of Brussels, M. Max, now is.

In the street cars, in the stores and on the streets, the citizens seldom converse even when relatives or close friends are together, and should a stranger address them the reply is usually just plain "No?" or "Yes?" "I don't know!"

On the street cars a passenger will sometimes remark about a rumored military action—for rumors of all kinds are current in the city in the absence of local newspapers—at the same time expressing in a low voice his pleasure if the German troops have suffered a slight reverse. The others in the car never respond, since many of their compatriots have fallen into the trap and, after giving utterance to their opinions to the "sympathetic" stranger, have been arrested and heavily fined or imprisoned, or both.

Many men and women immediately change seats should a German soldier take a seat next to them in the car. Others get up without a word and leave the car at the next stopping place.

Dumb hostility can be observed everywhere and the Germans notwithstanding their efforts, seem unable to gain the confidence of the Brussels people.

There appear to be as many secret German agents—some of them Belgians—as there are soldiers in Brussels. They are encountered everywhere. In the cafes it is declared they listen to every chance remark of the customers; they form into line with the Belgian applicants for passes at the official permit office; they mix with the poor people waiting for their supply of food from the relief commissions. Anything that may be said against the German authorities is certain to be overheard and reported, for the secret agents are linguists who speak French and Flemish and many of the dialects.

This constant surveillance, with the increasing poverty of the Belgian laboring classes, has a very depressing effect. Hope and conviction that at some future unknown period their country will again be free, enables them to bear patiently the discomforting presence of the German troops, but the coming winter is awaited with some trepidation. The poor, despite their habitual thrift, have almost reached the end of their resources. In consequence of the stoppage of many industries, the number of unemployed is growing rapidly and as a result savings made before the war have been in many cases exhausted.

On July 31 official figures showed that there were in the whole of Belgium 734,000 workless, including both sexes, and this number has since been added to. In Brussels and its suburbs along there were just over 88,000 without work besides nearly 27,000 women and 42,000 children under 16 years old receiving relief. Hundreds of the skilled workers have managed to leave the country to seek work elsewhere or to join the ranks of the army. Most, however, are unable to find the means to secure guides to take them over the Dutch frontier without passes, which are next to impossible to obtain.

Recent decrees issued by the German governor-general in Brussels have made life even more difficult for the laborers, who decline to carry out work which might assist the German authorities. Prosecution and punishment are threatened for all workmen who refuse work when it is offered them, while any one who by means of relief sustains a workman in his refusal also renders himself liable to severe punishment. In the last week of August the Belgian National Bank was fined 5,000 dollars because one of its clerks paid out $500 to the order of a Belgian depositor now a refugee in Holland.

LEIPSIG BUILDS ON IN SPITE OF WAR

Famous Old City Carrying Out Building Program That Would Be Credit in Peace.

Leipzig, Germany, August 22.—(Associated Press Correspondence.)—Few cities in Germany have more bravely defied the reactionary and destructive effects of the war than Leipzig. The famous old city, for decades the center of the fur trade and book business, though hard hit by the conflict, nevertheless is attempting a building program that would easily be considered ambitious in peace time.

The largest railway station in Europe, is gradually nearing completion, at a cost of more than $9,000,000. Its construction has only been slowed down by the shortage of workmen, and some time this fall it will be entirely finished.

A huge building which will house the German equivalent of the American Congressional library, an institution in which at least one copy of every German publication, as well as thousands of books printed in Austria and Switzerland, will be filed, is also under way.

The next greatest building proposition that continues notwithstanding the war is a wonderful public bath which has begun by a private concern but has since been taken over by the city. When it is completed Leipzig claims that it will rank with any similar institution in the world.

In planning for its railroad station, Leipzig was confronted with unusual problems, in overcoming with it has spent many millions of marks. The city has always been a big transportation center, with lines running northward into Prussia, southward into Saxony and Bavaria, and southward to the Rhine district.

With its ever growing book trade and other business it has been an increasingly difficult problem to provide the necessary freight space, and in the past, with a circular railroad system that belted the city, great tracts of valuable land have been utilized in an uneconomical manner.

When the city did decide to centralize its transportation system, it arranged for a station with connected freight terminals that is pretty sure to fit all needs for a great many years to come. From every direction except Bavaria the railroad tracks curve in and around the northern part of Leipzig and then swing in to a point almost in the center of the city. The one building accommodates the lines of the Prussian and of the Saxony state railroads with all their subsidiaries.

The building was already underway when Leipzig began to appreciate that eventually it was going to need a subway system, and that this future need might as well be attended to in connection with the station. As fast as the need comes, therefore, this tunnel line will be connected to star-shaped lines radiating to all parts of the city and its suburbs.

The new library of Deutsche Bucherei is not to be, from present appearances, such an imposing building as the Congressional Library in Washington, but it is infinitely practical, and very large. In it are to be kept the works of all authors printed in Germany, the works of German authors printed in foreign countries, the pamphlets and other societies—everything in fact except musical and political publications. All publications from 1913 on are to be kept.

The government has donated 3,000,000 marks, and guaranteed 85,000 marks a year; the city of Leipzig gives the ground and furnishes 115,000 marks a year toward the maintenance of the institution; and the German, the Austrian and the Swiss book trade agrees to furnish free of cost the books that are to be kept. The present building is so located and arranged that additions can be constructed as fast as needed. Every known up-to-date method of library administration has been provided.

One of the features of the new library is to be a complete collection of the ever-growing war literature that already has run into the thousands of volumes and that probably will increase even more rapidly when peace comes. This literature will be separately installed in quarters of its own.

Ladies! Look Young, Darken Gray Hair Use the Old-time Sage Tea and Sulphur and Nobody Will Know.

Gray hair, however handsome denotes advancing age. We all know the advantage of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance hundred-fold. Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the tonic at home or get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully and removes dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

Well, Who Cares?

An elderly bald-headed, bachelor following a volley of sharp resounding sneezes explained the manner in which he had acquired this distressing condition, relates The Indianapolis News.

"My place of business," said the sufferer, is on the top floor of a 19-story building. This building is filled with all kinds of typewriting misses and other merry maidens. Besides these I should say at least 1,000 women patrons of physicians, dentists and others who have offices in this five are continually going up and coming down by the elevators. There is here a kind of aggravated politeness which makes me a victim to every current which invades the elevator and keeps me supplied with a summer cold, which begins as early as April and continues until long after the state fair has come and gone. Absurd custom seems to demand that whenever one of these office maidens or any other feminine person puts foot into the elevator that every man must off with his hat and stand uncovered until she leaves the lift. I've been a sniffling, sneezing under-head long enough. From this time on I'll stick my hat on my head and keep it there."

Newspaper Man Recommends It. R. R. Wentworth of the St. James, (Mo.) News, writes: "Two months ago I took a severe cold which settled in my lungs and I had such pains in my lungs I feared pneumonia. I got a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar and it straightened me up immediately. I can recommend it to be a genuine cough and lung medicine." Many mothers write this reliable medicine cured their children of croup. Hay fever and asthma sufferers say it gives quick relief. Sold everywhere.

"TIZ" FOR TIRED SORE, ACHING FEET

It Always Helps. says Mrs. Sylvia Woods, of Clifton Mills, Ky., in writing of her experience with Cardui, the woman's tonic. She says further: "Before I began to use Cardui, my back and head would hurt so bad, I thought the pain would kill me. I was hardly able to do any of my housework. After taking three bottles of Cardui, I began to feel like a new woman. I soon gained 35 pounds, and now, I do all my housework, as well as run a big water mill. I wish every suffering woman would give a trial. I still use Cardui when I feel a little bad, and it always does me good." Headache, backache, side ache, nervousness, tired, worn-out feelings, etc., are sure signs of womanly trouble. Signs that you need Cardui, the woman's tonic.
