MISCELLANEOUS.

A GOOD FIGHT.

BY CHARLES READE.

William Johnson blushed purple. He saw Margaret was keen, and suspected him. He did the wisest thing under the circumstances—trusted to deeds not words. He insisted on their coming home with him at once, and he would show them whether they were welcome to Rotterdam or not.

"Who doubts it, cousin? Who doubts it?" said the scholar.

Margaret thanked him graciously, but demurred to go just now; and she wanted to hear the minstrels again. In about a quarter of an hour Johnson renewed his proposal, and bitterly observe that many of the guests had left. Then her real reason came out.

"If were ill manners to our friend, and he will lose us. He knows not where we lodge in Rotterdam, and the city is large, and we have parted company once already."

"Oh!" said Johnson, "we will provide for that. My young man, Jasper! I mean my secretary, shall sit here and wait, and bring him on to my house, he shall lodge with me, and with no other."

"Cousin, we shall be too burthensome."

"Nay, nay, you shall see whether you are welcome or not—you and your friends, and your friends' friends, if need be, and I shall hear what the princess would with him."

Margaret felt a thrill of joy that Gerard should be lodged under the same roof with her; then she had a slight misgiving.

"But if your young man should be thoughtless, and go play, and Gerard miss him—"

"He go play! He leave the spot where I put him, and bid him stay? Ho! Stand forth Hans Cloterman!"

A figure clad in black serge, and dark violet hose, got up, and took two steps and stood before them without moving a muscle; a solemn, precise young man, the very statue of gravity and starchen propriety. At his aspect, Margaret, being very happy, could hardly keep her countenance. But she whispered Johnson, "I would put my hand in the fire for him! We are at your command, cousin, as soon as you have given him his orders."

Hans was then instructed to sit at the table and wait for Gerard, and conduct him to Oester-Wagen street. He replied, not in words, but by calmly taking the seat indicated, and Margaret, Peter, and William Johnson, went with the latter.

"And, indeed, it is time you were abed, father, after all your travel," said Margaret. This had been in her mind all along.

Hans Cloterman sat waiting for Gerard, solemn and business like. The minutes flew by, but excited no impatience in that perfect young man. Johnson did him no more than justice when he laughed to scorn the idea of his secretary leaving his post, or neglecting his duty, in pursuit of sport, or out of youthful hilarity and friskiness.

As Gerard was long in coming, the patient Hans—his employer's eye, being no longer on him—improved the time by quaffing solemnly, silently, and at short but accurately measured intervals, goblets of Corsican wine. The wine was strong, so was Cloterman's head; and it was not until Gerard had been gone a good hour the model secretary had imbibed the notion that creation expected of Cloterman to drink the health of all good fellows, and of the Duke of Burgundy there present. With this view, he filled bumper nine, and rose gingerly, but solemnly and slowly. Having reached his full height, he instantly rolled upon the grass, gob let in hand, spilling the cold liquor on many an ankle, but not disturbing a muscle in his own long face, which, in the total eclipse of reason, retained its gravity, primness, and infallibility.

CHAPTER V.

The seneschal led Gerard through several passages to the door of a pavilion, where some young nobleman, embroidered and feathered sat sentinel, guarding the heir apparent, and playing cards by the red light of torches their servants held. A whisper from the seneschal, and one of them rose reluctantly, stared at Gerard with haughty surprise, and entered the pavilion. He presently returned, and, beckoning the pair, led them through a passage or two and landed them in an ante-chamber, where sat three more young gentlemen, feathered, furred, and embroidered like pieces of fancy work, and deep in that instructive and edifying branch of learning, dice.

"You can't see the Princess—it is too late," said one.

Another followed suit.

"She passed this way but now with her nurse. She is gone to bed, doll and all—duece-ace again!"

Gerard prepared to retire. The seneschal, with an incredulous smile, replied:

"The young man is here by the countess's orders; be so good as to conduct him to her ladies."

On this a superb Adonis rose, with an injured look, and led Gerard into a room where sat or lolloped eleven ladies, chattering like magpies. Two, more industrious than the rest, were playing cat's cradle, with fingers as nimble as their tongues.

At the sight of a stranger, all the tongues stopped like one piece of complicated machinery, and all the eyes turned on Gerard, as if the same string that checked the tongues had turned the eyes on.

Gerard was ill at ease before, but this battery of eyes discomfited him and down went his eyes on the ground. Then the cowards finding, like the hare who ran by the pond, and the frogs scuttled into the water, that there was a creature they could frighten, giggled and enjoyed their prowess. Then a duenna said severely, "Mesdames!" and they were abashed as one woman.

This same duenna took Gerard, and marched before him in solemn silence. The young man's heart sank, and he had half a mind to turn and run out of the place.

"What must princes be," he thought, "when their courtiers are so freezing. Of course they take their breeding from him they serve."

These reflections were interrupted by the duenna suddenly introducing him into a room where three ladies sat working, and a pretty little girl tuning a lute.

The ladies were richly but not showily dressed, and the duenna went up to the one who was hemming a kerchief, and said a few words in a low tone.

This lady then turned toward Gerard, with a smile, and beckoned him to come near her.

She did not rise, but she laid aside her work, and her manner of turning toward him, slight as the movement was, was full of grace and ease, and courtesy. She began a conversation at once.

"Margaret Van Eyck is an old friend of mine, sir, and I am right glad to have a letter from her hand, and thankful to you, sir, for bringing it to me safely. Marie, my love, this is the young gentleman who brought you that pretty miniature."

"Sir, I thank you a thousand times," said the young lady.

"I am glad you feel obliged to him, sweetheart, for our friend wishes us to do him a little service in return."

"I will do anything on earth for him," replied the young lady, with ardor.

"Anything on earth is nothing in the world," said the Countess of Charolois, quietly.

"Well, then, I will. What would you have me to do, sir?"

Gerard had just found out what high society he was in.

"My sovereign demoiselle," said he, gently, and a little tremulously, "where there have been no pains there needs no reward."

"But we must obey mamma. All the world must obey mamma."

"That is true. Then, our demoiselle, reward me, if you will, by letting me hear the stave you were going to sing and I interrupted it."

"What, you love music, sir?"

"I adore it."

The little princess looked inquiringly at her mother, and received a smile of assent. She then took her lute and sang a romaunt of the day. Although but twelve years old, she was a well-taught and pains-taking musician. Her little claw swept the chords with courage and precision, and struck out the notes of the arpeggio clear and distinct, and bright like twinkling stars; but the main charm was her voice. It was not mighty, but it was round, clear, full, and ringing like a bell. She sang with a certain modest eloquence, though she knew none of the tricks of feeling. She was too young to be theatrical, or even sentimental, so nothing was forced—all gushed. Her little mouth seemed the mouth of Nature.

The ditty, too, was as pure as its utterance. Is there was none of those false divisions—those whining slurs, which are now sold so dearly Italian songsters, though every jackal in Italy delivers them gratis to his customers all night, and sometimes gets shot for them, and ways deserves it—so there were no cadences.

MEDICINES.

AYER'S COMPOUND EXTRACT SARSAPARILLA.

No one remedy is more needed in this country than a reliable Alterative, but the idea have been so generously cheated by the worthless preparation of Sarsaparilla abroad, that they are disgusted even with the name. Yet the drug cannot be blamed for the impositions from which they have suffered. Most of the so-called Sarsaparillas in market contain little of the virtues of Sarsaparilla or anything else. They are mere slops—inert and worthless, while a concentrated extract of the active variety of Sarsaparilla compounded with Dock, Stillingia, Iodine, etc., is, as it ever will be, a powerful alterative and an effectual remedy. Such is Ayer's Extract of Sarsaparilla, as its truly wonderful cures of the great variety of complaints which require an alterative medicine, have abundantly shown. Do not, therefore, discard this invaluable medicine, because you have been imposed upon by something pretending to be Sarsaparilla, while it was not. When you have used AYER'S—then, and not till then, will you know the virtues of Sarsaparilla. For minute particulars of the diseases it cures, we refer you to Ayer's American Almanac, which the agent below named will furnish gratis to all who call for it.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS, for the cure of Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach, Dyspepsia, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Heartburn, arising from Disordered Stomach, Pain, or Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and for Purifying the Blood.

They are Sugar coated, so that the most sensitive can take them pleasantly, and they are the best Aperient in the world for all the purposes of a family physic. PRICE 25 CENTS PER BOX; FIVE BOXES FOR $1,00.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with other pecuniary objects which they make more profit on. Demand AYER'S, and take no others. The sick want the best aid there is for them, and they should have it.

READER, PERUSE THE FOLLOWING testament and then judge of its factsfor yourself.

ARMAN COLE, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a well known citizen there, had suffered from Dyspepsia for some years, without permanent relief, until he tried AYER'S PILLS, which taken according to the directions for this complaint, restored him to health in a few weeks. After an interval of some months he has had no return of the complaint.

GEO. W. CROSS, of Hancock, Texas, had an ulcer on his neck, shoulders, back and legs, which covered about one-third of his body. It kept the parts affected covered with a scab, and being often a raw sore, was of course very troublesome and distressing. It so much impaired his health as to unfit him for business and kept him in constant suffering. All medical aid failed him until he took AYER'S COMP. EXT. SARSAPARILLA, which cured him. His skin still shows some scars from the ulceration, but it is otherwise perfect as an infant's.

JOHN H. BROOK, Esq., an eminent Lawyer, of Richmond, Va., took a cold which settled on his lungs. A severe pain set in on the left side, with a bad cough, which was soon followed by the unmistakable symptoms of consumption. When reduced very low he commenced taking AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which soon stopped the cough, and completely cured him.

MEDICINES.

THE SURGERY.

The following is an extract from a letter written by Rev. C. E. Weiser, to the "German Reformed Messenger" at Chambersburgh, Penn.

A SENSE ATTENDED.

"There is a woman in the public eye, whose name had all along been associated, in our mind, with the 'Yankee,' 'Quack,' and 'Humbug.' But it is so no longer, and we desire to wrest her name from all such suspicious association in all other minds. The evidence we may have of womanly feeling and propriety, we will all admit that woman at 40 is no worse—the good worse—the same worse. Whether we shall have female parsuasion or not is a question which must be decided by time and principle, as it is as a matter of taste. Pride, prejudice, aspersion, the unkind may as well behave themselves, for if the article really a want there will also be a supply—if there is no calling, there will be a 'vocation.' Nature and Human Society are always self supplying, and though Art and Fashion may hinder, they cannot prevent.

Mrs. Winslow does not want to meet you, gentlemen! nor does she prescribe a regimen for your wives, but modestly appears as a messenger of health and happiness to your infants in the cradle. Is there anything improper in that? A nurse of ten years' experience can boldly say what is or is not good for a babe—and ought to be listened to. God speed her on her humble but happy mission. She is the most successful benefactress our little ones ever enjoyed—her doting parents not excepted. Just open the door for her, and Mrs Winslow will prove the American Florence Nightingale of the nursery. Of this we are sure, that we will teach our 'Sons' to say, 'A BLESSING on Mrs. WINSLOW,' for helping her to survive and escape the griping, collicing and teething pain. We confirm every word set forth in the Prospectus. It performs precisely what it professes to perform—every part of it, nothing less. Away with your 'Cordial,' 'Paregoric,' 'Drops,' 'Laudanum,' and every other narcotic, by which the babe is drugged into stupidity, and rendered dull and idiotic for life!

We have never seen Mrs Winslow—know her only through the preparation of her SOOTHING SYRUPS FOR CHILDREN TEETHING! If we had the power we would make her, as she is, a physical saviour to the infant race.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT TO MOTHERS.—MRS WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP is the only thing that you can rely upon to give rest to yourself, relief and health to your infant.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been the means of restoring the drooping spirits of many mothers.

This is the season of the year to use MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP.

To every mother who has children suffering from any of the complaints incident to the period of teething, we say do not let your own prejudices, or those of judices of others, stand in the way of the relief that will be sure—yes, absolutely sure—to follow the use of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP.

Druggists everywhere now keep MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP for children teething. No medicine in the United States sells like it. It is a standard medicine; and its fame world-wide. Physicians order and use it wherever its magical effects have been witnessed.

During the thirty years of unprecedented and increasing popularity of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP innumerable "CORDIALS," and other nostrums, prepared by pretended M.D.'s, have sprung up and lived but a mushroom existence, while the SOOTHING SYRUP has been constantly increasing in popularity, and become a household word and thousands mothers thank MRS. WINSLOW for the health of their children by the use of her invaluable article.

When the present race of "Cordials" have followed in the footsteps of their "Illustrious predecessors," MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP will continue to be a popular favorite and a blessing to every mother.

FEMALES OF ALL AGES ARE MORE or less afflicted than men—and why? The reason is plain. Men, generally speaking, are more or less engaged in active employment, and have the benefit of more air; while women, especially those who are married, are confined in doors, attending to their household duties. If woman complains, down goes a dose of Pills or Powders, which not only weakens but often destroys the frail and feeble constitution. If man feels tired and weakly, down goes brandy, ales or wine. This is the difference between the two. Woman need strengthening remedies as well as man, and more so, but not of the same nature. In Dr. Anderson's FEMALE LIFE CORDIAL, all that could be required to give strength and energy to the female system, will be found; and for all those diseases to which the female system is subject, there is nothing which will be found more beneficial than this Cordial. It has been thoroughly tried, and in no case has it failed. It is very pleasant to the taste, and will not cause nausea to the weakest. Nothing of a deleterious nature is used in the preparation, and may be taken at all times with perfect safety. Females in the use—all that are afflicted—and before the heat of summer sets in, you will find that your health in every respect, has greatly improved. PRICE $1 PER BOTTLE.
