LAKE TAHOE.

A Vast Body of Water at an Enormous Elevation above the Level of the Sea.

From the Resources of California.

Lake Tahoe lies on the parallel of 120° long. west, and 39° lat. north, about three-fourths lying within the State of California, forming the eastern and southern boundary of Placer county, and the eastern and northern of El Dorado county, and the eastern boundary of the State for a distance of about fifteen miles; the remaining one-fourth lying within the limits of the State of Nevada. It is in the heart of the Sierra Nevada. By the Central Pacific Railroad it is about twelve hours eastward from San Francisco to Truckee, thence southeast by stage two hours, remaining over night at Truckee.

The altitude of the lake is 6,216 feet above the sea level. Its depth is rated at 1,525 feet, but it is claimed that later soundings have given over 2,000 feet. In form it may be classed as an irregular, nearly right-angled parallelogram; the general direction being north and south. In length it is about twenty-two miles; in breadth from eight to twelve miles, and with its various bays covers an area of about three hundred square miles. It is the largest and deepest known lake at so great an altitude, and is fed by the winters' snows and springs and streams from the adjacent mountains which surround it, rising in many parts to two thousand feet and upward above the lake. Some of the tributaries are of large size, pouring into the lake a constant volume of bright, pure and sparkling water, so nearly equivalent to the absorption, drainage, and evaporation that, as nearly as I can estimate it, the extreme rise and fall of the lake does not exceed from three to four feet.

It nearly maintains its equilibrium, never freezing except in some sheltered and shallow spots; and is always cold enough, in a depth of a few feet, for palatable and healthy drinking at any time of day in summer; while the numerous rivulets which empty into it have an almost icy coldness in the warmest weather.

There are no swamps or marshes in the region of the lake; it is one of hills, mountains, pine and fir timber, rocks, gravel, sand, and occasional spots of very productive soil, yielding in root crops and cereals abundant returns; and natural meadows furnish nutritious grasses for horses and cattle.

The water is pure and clear.

The air is generally bland; always pure, salubrious, elastic, light, and owing to the great extent of water surface, of qualified and proper humidity. During the summer there is a regular trade wind from the southwest (a sea breeze) springing up from 8 to 10 o'clock A. M., and blowing more or less fresh until nearly sunset, and occasionally later. At night the land trade wind from the northward prevails. After sunrise, the mornings are usually warm until the sea breeze commences. Very few calms days occur during summer. Nights are always cool, refreshing, and invigorating, with rare exceptions; and in the winter frequently clear and bright when the days has been otherwise. It is always warm and pleasant in the sunshine during any part of the winter.

Sarmiento to Ulysses.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The following was received today:

To President Grant:

There was general rejoicing in the United States when the first submarine cable was laid. At the close of my term of office I leave my country in communion with all nations. The Argentine Republic is at the gates of the United States. I greet President Grant. (Signed) SARMIENTO,

President of the Argentine Republic.
