THE GREAT ROMAN HIPPODROME.

The thorough and effective manner in which this vast structure is heated has made it

THE REIGNING SENSATION OF THE CITY.

[From the Herald.]
The temperature was at summer heat.

[From the Sun.]
The temperature of the Hippodrome is kept constantly at seventy degrees.

[From the Star.]
This vast edifice during the cold spell has proved the most comfortable house in town.

[From the Daily Graphic.]
All visitors to this popular resort remark upon the warmth and comfort of the vast interior.

[From the Evening Post.]
Notwithstanding the intensely cold weather a genial and mild temperature has been maintained at Barnum's.

[From the Telegram.]
The Hippodrome, during the cold snap, is kept at a uniform temperature of seventy, which renders it exceedingly comfortable.

[From the Evening Express.]
No matter how coldly the winter blasts may blow outside, there is always a summer temperature within the walls of the Hippodrome.

[From the Times.]
Notwithstanding the extreme cold which has prevailed, the temperature of the Hippodrome has been maintained at seventy degrees.

[From the Tribune.]
Owing to the success of a new heating apparatus, the temperature throughout was maintained at the agreeable height of seventy degrees.

[From the Commercial Advertiser.]
The warm and comfortable atmosphere of the Hippodrome insures the security of ladies and children against even the possibility of taking cold.

[From the World.]
The new heating apparatus kept the atmosphere at the same warm and equable temperature which has been maintained during the intensely cold weather.

[From the Evening Mail.]
But of all the wonders of the Hippodrome nothing astonishes the vast audiences more than the unsurpassed and unsurpassable arrangements for heating.

[From the Daily News.]
It is as good as a trip to Florida, and requires a more limited outfit. There there are no trotting races to be seen in Florida twice a week, as there are here every Tuesday and Friday night.

[From the Journal of Commerce.]
Notwithstanding the extreme coldness of the weather, visitors to the Hippodrome need have no fear of discomfort; there, as the heating apparatus keeps the temperature between sixty-five and seventy degrees.

[From the Daily Bulletin.]
Mr. Barnum is equal to any emergency. He conquers the weather, as well as other things, and this he has done at the Roman Hippodrome by a system of heating that has astonished both the public and the press.
