THE DUEL AT CAMP DOUGLAS

QUARREL OF CAPT. WESTERN AND DR. LE COMPTE ABOUT A LADY.

Capt. Western Seriously Wounded and Dr. Le Compte Slightly—The Doctor Finally Covers his Disarmed Antagonist with his Pistol and Puts a Stop to All Further Hostilities.

From the Salt Lake Tribune.

The quiet and repose which Camp Douglas has enjoyed since the departure of most of the soldiers for Colorado was suddenly broken yesterday morning at twenty minutes of 10 o'clock by reports of pistol shots. When the various persons who heard the exchange of shots had reached the spot from which the sounds evidently proceeded Capt. Western was lying on the ground, and in the smoke, which had not yet cleared away, stood Dr. Le Compte, holding a pistol over the prostrate man. Both men were bleeding. The excitement in the camp was most intense, and in a very short time the report reached Zion that two members of the post had been shot.

To account for the shooting there are two stories. The first is apocryphal, and is given merely as talk. It is to the effect that Capt. Western has been spying the movements of Dr. Le Compte in the city; that the latter became aware of the fact, and that thus the collision was brought about. This, however, is denied by Dr. Le Compte, and certainly Capt. Western would not wish to be thought taking a part in such sneaking proceedings. This report can be set down as in no way connected with the truth.

The true account of the unfortunate affair is as follows: On Monday night Dr. Le Compte, with other gentlemen and ladies, was the guest of a certain officer of the post. While at the table one of the ladies made a remark to the Doctor, calling his attention to something that had been said that seemed to demand an explanation from him. The officers of the post unite in the belief that the lady was mistaken in her impression that anything equivocal had been said to her, but the Doctor very politely presented his request for pardon, and the company went on chatting, not one of the guests dreaming that the matter had not been settled.

On Tuesday Dr. Le Compte and Capt. Western met. The latter addressed the Doctor and demanded that a further apology be made the lady. The Doctor told him that he had done nothing whatever for which an apology should be demanded, but even if he had, the amende honorable had been made. He was the last person to insult a lady, and if he had done any wrong he would very cheerfully make an apology. After this conversation the two parted, and nothing was done on the following day, Wednesday, concerning the matter.

About noon on Thursday a note was placed in the hands of Dr. Le Compte by Capt. Western personally, with the request to read it at his pleasure. The note read as follows:

FORT DOUGLAS, March 25, 1880.

Dr. E. D. Le Compte, Acting Assistant Surgeon.

SIR: Yesterday you promised me that an apology should be made the lady within twenty-four hours. It has not been. Resp. you are a liar, and it shall be my unpleasant duty to stigmatize you as such on all public occasions, if within six hours an apology is not made the lady and myself.

(Signed) C. B. WESTERN,
Captain Fourteenth Regiment Infantry.

This communication, the verbal correctness of which is as faithful as the recollection of those who had read the letter would permit, very naturally brought matters to such a pass that conflict must result. Before it had been sent arrangements had been perfected for a meeting of the parties, the intention being to settle the differences by the code of honor. Capt. Western had even chosen his second, who is a civilian of this city, and familiar with the rules governing the duello.

But all arrangements of this kind were ended by the meeting of the parties yesterday morning. Dr. Le Compte left his quarters shortly before 10 o'clock, and was proceeding along what is known as "Officers' row," when he saw Capt. Western coming out of his residence. Almost immediately after he noticed the doctor coming toward him, he returned to the house and quickly came out again. The supposition of the Doctor was that the Captain had returned for his pistol, and such would seem to be the case. The two advanced toward each other until they met, when Dr. Le Compte addressed his adversary in the words: "Capt. Western, who made you guardian and sponsor for Mrs. —?" The answer was, as some say, "I took it upon myself," and others have it, "None of your —— business." At all events the words were scarcely spoken before Capt. Western sprang back a few feet and reached for his revolver in his hip pocket. The intention of Dr. Le Compte was to settle the matter with the fists, but the retreating movement of his opponent prevented the Doctor from reaching Western before the revolver was drawn. All that remained, therefore, was for the Doctor to draw his own pistol, which was in the overcoat pocket.

Both men were ready about the same moment—the Doctor, however, getting the drop. Both men fired at the same time, and both shots took effect. The Doctor fired twice more, one ball missing and the other hitting. The shot from Capt. Western's revolver struck his adversary in the little finger of his right hand, in which the pistol was held, passed along the arm, inflicting a flesh wound, and pierced his outer clothing, grazed his side, and dropped into his boot. The Doctor's two shots were more serious, first caught the Captain near the shoulder joint, breaking his arm. He then evidently turned his side to his adversary, and the next shot caught him on the right side, near the small of the back. As he fell he dropped his revolver, but, full of game, he reached out for it with the intention of ending the conflict one way or the other. His movement was stopped by the Doctor's moving up to him, holding his pistol over the man, and telling him that if he picked up his revolver he would shoot him dead. "You have broken my arm," cried Capt. Western, evidently as a reason why he could not get his revolver. "And you," replied the Doctor, "have shot me through the body." Having procured the Captain's revolver, the Doctor laid it, together with his own, aside, and advancing to the wounded man, volunteered assistance. This was declined by the Captain, and nothing of a surgical nature was done until the arrival of Dr. Hamilton, who had been sent for. He found it necessary to remove a part of the humerus of the right arm, and about four inches of the bone was taken out. Dr. Benedict soon after arrived, and, being the Captain's regular doctor, superseded his brother physician. Investigation showed that the bone would need to be taken out, and that the arm would be useless in the future. The other wound in the side is by far the more serious, however, and its effects cannot yet be judged. The ball passed through the body, we understand, inflicting what the physicians admit to be a very dangerous wound.

Dr. Le Compte is only slightly injured, and will experience no inconvenience beyond the loss of his little finger. His remark that he was shot through the body was prompted by his believing such was the case.

At a late hour last night, Capt. Western was resting easy.

SPRING OPENINGS.

J. & J. Dobson's Carpets.

In the stores 40 and 42 West Fourteenth street the proprietors of the Falls of the Schuylkill Carpet Mills, Messrs J. & J Dobson, have an immense stock of carpets, embracing every popular variety, from 1-ply rag and three-ply to the more costly Brussels, Wiltons, and Axminsters. These goods, made in their own factories, under the personal supervision of a member of the firm, are manufactured from carefully selected materials, and in the different processes of the dye house and the loom great care is taken to secure an article which, while giving the best artistic effect in design and coloring, shall afford the best service in actual wear.

They also have a large assortment of Turkish and East India carpets, rugs, and mats of their own importation, the prices of which are without the goods of their own manufacture, will be found very low. The stock of goods will be found well worthy of inspection by carpet and upholstery purchasers, and special inducements will be made for the furnishing of churches and hotels.

Dry Goods on Easy Payments at Kelly's.

In 22 Park place and 17 Barclay street Mr. Thomas Kelly has opened a stock of dry goods comprising silks, cashmeres, velvets, and other dress goods, a line of silk and cashmere shawls, housekeeping goods, blankets, linens, piano and table covers, sheetings and other articles in dry goods line, that he is selling on easy terms on the instalment plan. This is a novelty, and a considerable number of the principal houses in dry goods business in New York. Indeed Kelly's is the only dry goods house in New York where goods can be bought on the instalment plan. Housekeepers are advised to give Mr. Kelly a trial before purchasing elsewhere.
