AN EXTRAORDINARY LETTER.

The New Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Windom, on the Power of Monopolies, the Enslavement of the Press, and the Means of Suppressing Public Wrongs.

SENATE CHAMBER, WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.

The Hon. L. E. Chittenden, President National Anti-Monopoly League.

MY DEAR SIR: I deeply regret that official duties of an imperative character prevent the acceptance of your kind invitation to address the meeting at Cooper Institute on the 21st inst. Until to-day I hoped to be able to arrange my business so as to attend the meeting, but find it will be impossible.

The purpose of your League, as I understand it, is not to wage war upon corporations or individuals, but conceding to all their just rights, to demand full protection for the rights of the citizen against the abuses and aggressions of corporate power, and to insist upon the enforcement of those principles of law and natural right defined by the Supreme Court of the United States. In this effort you have my most hearty sympathy and coöperation. Your cause is just, but in such a contest you grapple with giants. Do not underrate the power or the skill of your antagonists. Wise and conservative counsels will alone secure success. You must be as prompt to concede rights as you are determined in demanding them. No agrarian or communistic spirit must find a place in your proceedings. The character of the men who compose your organization gives assurance against danger on this point. Constitutions, natural rights, and the spirit of our institutions are on your side. Intrenched behind these, and fighting for the right, you cannot fail.

Corporate power has done much to develop our country. For its good deeds I freely accord it full credit. As an instrument to execute the will and serve the interests of the public, it is of incalculable value; but as the imperious ruler of the people it is a most cruel and relentless tyrant. Kept within the limits of proper restraint it is an invaluable servant of the public. Unrestrained by the forces of law and public opinion it will prove a most dangerous master. The individual citizen is impotent to contend with this gigantic and rapidly growing power. Governmental authority, State and national, alone is competent to restrain its aggressions and correct its abuses. I have long foreseen that the time would come when the people would be compelled to invoke the exercise of that authority for their protection. I repeat to-day, in substance, words uttered seven years ago, that "there are in this country four men who, in the matter of taxation, possess and frequently exercise powers which neither Congress nor any of our State Legislatures would dare to exert—powers which, if exercised in Great Britain would shake the throne to its very foundation. These men may at any time, and for any reason satisfactory to themselves, by a stroke of the pen reduce the value of property in the United States by hundreds of millions. They may at their own will and pleasure disarrange and embarrass business, depress one city or locality and build up another, enrich one individual and ruin his competitors, and, when complaint is made, coolly reply, 'What are you going to do about it?'"

The men who wield this stupendous corporate power have grown wiser with the passage of events. Hitherto they have been apparently content to absorb and control the great industrial and material interests of the country, by a monopoly of the channels and implements of transportation, but recently new and alarming conditions are presented. They know full well that if the people can freely communicate with each other, they will see the dangerous tendencies of this power, and organize to restrain it. Hence, in order to lay deep and sure foundations for the maintenance of their power, and to defeat the efforts of the people to curb it, they have now seized upon the channels of thought. Look at it a moment. One man, who controls more miles of railroad than any other in the world, and who is almost daily adding new lines to his colossal combination, now also controls the telegraphic system of the United States and Canada, and is reaching under the sea to grasp that of Europe. Not content with all this, and determined that no instrument of commercial and political power shall elude his grasp, he is (as I learn) also the owner of three out of the seven newspapers which constitute the Associated Press, through the agency of which the news is distributed over the entire country. He may at any time secure the fourth paper, which will give him absolute control over the news which the people shall receive. When that takes place what will be our condition? What chance will the people then have to resist the encroachments of corporate power? How shall they even communicate with each other on the subject? What opportunity will there be for a fair discussion of these questions? The daily news, supplied to the myriad of newspapers, must first pass under the supervision of one or two men, who represent the Associated Press, and who are appointed by its owner. They will have full authority, and doubtless will be required to suppress, add to, or color the information thus sent out as may best serve the interest, the ambition, or the malice of the man to whom they owe their places. Hence the twenty millions of people who read their morning papers at their breakfast tables will daily receive just such impressions as this one man shall choose to give them. Public men and affairs, and business interests and movements, will be seen in the coloring which shall best serve his interests. The legislator who shall then be bold enough to raise his voice in behalf of the people, or to strike a blow in their defence, will be misrepresented or denied a hearing before his own constituents. The business man who shall venture to question the divine right of corporate rule will be crushed, and no telegraphic wire or Associated Press will voice his woe or demand redress from his persecutors. The people will find themselves unable to communicate with each other except by the gracious will and pleasure of the autocrat of the wires. Should special correspondents undertake to supply information not deemed expedient to be sent by the Associated Press, they will find that the owner of the wires can supply a ready remedy for such presumption.

The channels of thought and the channels of commerce thus owned and controlled by one man, or by a few men, what is to restrain corporate power, or to fix a limit to its exactions upon the people? What is then to hinder these men from depressing or inflating the value of all kinds of property to suit their caprice or avarice, and thereby gathering into their own coffers the wealth of the nation? Where is the limit to such a power as this? What shall be said of the spirit of a few people who will submit without a protest to be thus bound hand and foot? I have hinted at some of the dangers which menace our future. If it be to correct these evils, and to avert these dangers your League has been organized, it will receive the benedictions of the people.

The practical question is, "What are you going to do about it?" To my mind the answer is easy. This organized gigantic corporate power can only be kept under proper restraint by the organized power of the people, expressed through their State and national Governments. That such governmental power exists and may properly be exercised I have not a particle of doubt. It is plainly written in our Constitutions, and has been unequivocally declared by the Supreme Court of the United States.

The limits of this letter will not permit a discussion of the constitutional question nor a detailed statement of the practical remedy for existing evil. I may, however, venture to suggest that, in my judgment, the first and most important duty of Congress is to emancipate the people from the supervision and control of corporate monopoly, by the establishment of a system of postal telegraphy, whereby they shall be afforded a safe, sure, and cheap method of communication with each other. There is no doubt of the economy and success of such a system. It has been tried in other countries with most satisfactory results.

I am aware that it will require much care, labor, and skill to frame laws which shall successfully regulate and restrain the action of the great transportation companies, without unnecessary injury to them, and without omitting the essential elements of protection to the public, but I have no doubt it can be done. When the people demand it they will find the men to do it. I believe the time has come when this great work should be undertaken.

It will be far better for the corporations themselves that it be done now, by conservative but thorough and judicious legislation, rather than to postpone it until the people, no longer able to bear the tyranny of corporate power, shall rise in their wrath to humble and destroy their oppressors. At some convenient time I shall endeavor to state specifically some of the legislative remedies I would propose.

Excuse the great length of this letter, and believe me, very sincerely, your friend,

WILLIAM WINDOM.

ILLICIT DISTILLERY IN NEW PALTZ.

Barrels of Liquor Found Buried and Stored with Neighboring Farmers.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., March 6.—The seizure of Hiram H. Atkins's distillery at New Paltz, Ulster County, which was made on Thursday last, proves to be the most important ever made in this collection district. The investigation was promptly ordered by Collector Moses D. Stivers on the receipt of information at his office here that frauds existed there. Deputy Collector H. R. Wilcox of the Middletown office went to New Paltz, and, after a brief investigation, seized the distillery and all the property contained in and connected with it, including real estate valued at from $7,000 to $10,000, and $2,500 worth of distilled spirits and cider, all of which will undoubtedly be confiscated to the Government. Adjoining the distillery is a hotel belonging to Atkins, valued at $5,000, which may also be tainted and liable to confiscation. In the distillery, under piles of wood, were found trenches where earth had been freshly dug, and where eleven barrels had evidently been buried and only recently removed. Under the distilling apparatus was found a cask, partly filled with cider brandy, standing above proof. In the hennery evidence was found where three more barrels had lately been removed.

Deputy Wilcox, acting on information previously obtained, visited a number of farmers living in the neighborhood who had taken apples to the distillery last fall. He found and seized nine casks of unstamped applejack in the possession of the farmers. Six packages were in the cellar of a respectable farmer, whose name is withheld, he being probably an innocent holder. He said Atkins had told him that the Government required him to stamp only a certain amount of each run, and he was allowed a surplus. Two barrels the farmer took in payment for apples, four barrels his son had brought home for storage at Atkins's request, the distiller and his son loading it upon his wagon. Three packages were found in the cellar of Michael Brown, who refused to tell how he came by them. His hired man confessed to hauling barrels from the distillery a few weeks ago. On the farm of Lewis Atkins, a brother of the distiller, yesterday United States Gauger Corwin of Newburgh, who was assisting in the investigation, found a trench behind the barn where four barrels had been unearthed, probably the night before. The distiller's son was out on Thursday warning the farmers of the expected raid. The revenue officials have possession of a memorandum showing that forty-six illicit packages had been hidden, and where nineteen of them had been placed with farmers, ten of which remain to be found. The amount of tax known to have been wrongfully withheld from the Government is above $2,000.

On warrants sworn out by Deputy Wilcox in New York on Friday, Hiram H. Atkins and his son Henry, who has been associated with him in the frauds, were arrested yesterday at New Paltz by two deputy United States marshals. They began anxiously to look for bail to take to the city with them that evening to avoid being locked up. Further search is to be made for "crooked" whiskey about the distillery and among the farmers in the vicinity, and other arrests will probably be made. Disclosures show that the frauds have been long continued and carefully guarded. The "crooked" distillery is located in the division which is under the charge of Deputy Collector Alfred Tanner. It is said the frauds had been reported to him, but that he took no action. He is credited with having been deceived on account of the good record and high business standing of the distiller, Atkins, who is a leading politician, and has heretofore borne a good reputation.

The arrests have created great commotion among the citizens of New Paltz. Atkins's bondsmen are especially anxious, on account of the heavy pecuniary responsibility they may be called upon to meet. It is no secret at New Paltz that the first intimation which set the officials on the track of the frauds was given by the wife of the distiller's son, who is the defendant in a suit for divorce. The prisoners failed to find bondsmen, and they were taken to New York by train last evening.

Too Expensive a Citizen.

"I was only arrested once before, and that was six months ago," said Michael Fry to Justice Flammer, in the Jefferson Market Police Court.

"Is every one who was arrested twice in six months we would have here a thousand prisoners a day?"

"Well, you discharge me this time, Judge?"

"No, sir. You are too expensive a citizen. It costs the city three or four dollars every time you are arrested."

"I'll try and keep out."

Fry hadn't the money, and was committed for ten days.
