Do you know, dear public, you're slippery? Not you, sir—oh, no!—nor you, nor any one in particular.

But the very day after we say to you that we have everything worn by boy or man, in comes a man, asks, where's a good place to buy hats, shoes, and furnishings; when told they're here, says: "If your hats and shoes are as good as your overcoats, let's see 'em."

Now this week we're going to tell you, and show you, as hard as we can that we keep hats—the good sorts just like our clothing.

We'll say just what it is good for you to know.
