Whose underwear fits him?

Why, bless you, you're so used to your misfit that you'll say "Mine" without stopping to think.

What is a misfit?

Misfit is shirt or drawers all out of shape. Find it at any "cheap" store.

Misfit is shirt-sleeves or drawer-legs too long (so you have to turn 'em up), or too short (so your wrists or ankles are cold). At all underwear stores.

Misfit is shirt or drawers too big around—in your effort to get legs and sleeves long enough. At all underwear stores.

Misfit is anything but comfort; but you are used to it, and—well—you are used to it.

All nonsense. We've done away with every one of these nuisances, and are fitting men—exactly—with first-rate underwear.

No one has done it before, but it's worth doing. We've found a maker, right here in New York, that's willing to help—at our risk; got him to make underwear just right for all shapes of men; got him to make it only for us.

There's no patent on it; but we have to invest three times as much capital as the rest of 'em, and you know how few merchants are willing to take trouble and run risks to that extent.

Send for our booklet. Free.

Stores open to-day.

We often think that possibly we boast too much about our Overcoats. But the praise they receive tends to make us feel "set up."

While our smooth surfaced Overcoats have the call this season over the rough goods, we have a happy medium in a soft black Cheviot to sell for $15—made after the same high standard so long in favor with our patrons.

Our fine display of winter Neckwear and Gloves at our lower store is the talk of the town.
