STYLES OF THE DAY

Art of Looking Cool and Feeling Comfortable.

SOME ADVICE ON THE SUBJECT

How the Summer Girl Should Act. The Coolest of All White Fabrics. How to Make It Up.

The main object in life, at present, is to keep cool. Men have, for the nonce, abandoned their effort to make money, and are almost content to lie under the shade of some great tree, or on the shining sands, clad in their comfortable summer garment, and they are a success—they keep cool and look quite comfortable.

But let the summer girl put on her thinnest garments, and dress herself in most deliberate manner, to avoid overheating, and, in spite of all, she will suddenly spoil the work of hours by entering into animated conversation—a most heating occupation—by waving her fan vigorously, or, perhaps, by dropping her book where there is no one around to pick it up for her. These actions are reckless, and you may have noticed that the summer man is never so foolish as to be caught at any of them. His replies to your conversation are vague or dreamy or acquiescent. He never dreams of contradicting you while the sun shines. Under the evening stars it is different—there is more air then. But when the thermometer is above ninety, you can make any sort of remark to him without being challenged.

Now why should the comfort be all on one side? Why cannot the girl keep cool as well?

She can, certainly, if she will go about it in the right way.

Before she starts to dress she will, of course, take her morning rub, making every part of her body tingle with the smart application of her Turkish towelling mittens or hair mittens. The latter are far the better—after the warm sponge bath, which is more cooling in its effects than the cold bath—and imparts a lovely, healthy glow to the skin, which is quickly followed by a delightfully cool sensation.

Then the arms and neck will be lightly flecked with harmless powder, and the close-fitting under garment donned. If this is of wool, as it should be, both summer and winter, scarcely any underwear will need to be added. That is the beauty of the wool. It keeps your skin perfectly sheltered from chill or draught, and enables you to be very lightly clad. It is not the warm wool that you will fine heating, but the number and weight of garments that would need to be worn, were the wool omitted. Then, when you have donned your thin corset and pretty lace trimmed corset cover and your one skirt, you are all ready for a cool, white gown.

If this is of dotted Swiss, made in some gathered fashion, I do not believe you will have much trouble looking fresh and comfortable, even if the sun does beat fiercely down upon the earth.

How will you make your dotted muslin? A full skirt of four widths will narrow slightly at the waist, and will be simply hemmed deeply. Of course it will not be lined. The waist will be gathered at neck and yoke, and the skirt buttons up over it. You may have a girdle of white satin ribbon, narrow ribbons may tie around the armholes in a bow on each shoulder, and a ruffle or ruche of fine lace may trim the neck and run down the front.

Very fine lawns are also beautiful in white and are perhaps even cooler than the sheerer muslins.

White lawns, embroidered in deep borders of dark blue, or in the pale colors, make fresh morning gowns, trimmed with ribbons that match the embroidery.

White China silk leaves nothing to be desired for afternoon and evening gowns, made with very full fancily-trimmed skirts, all ruffles and puffs and tucks, and with fuller waists that are a mass of lace gatherings.

The organdies are coolest of all, if if you desire a gown in colors. The prettiest of them have very pale grounds covered with sprays of many colored flowers, with leaves or with big flower patterns. Made over silk of the prominent shade in the sprays, and trimmed with lime colored ribbons, they are charming. If you cannot afford silk line with sateen or batiste. Organdies are prettiest trimmed with lace, with deep flouncings or possibly nne insertion.

Even when trimmed only with ruffles and flounces of the same material, they are very pretty. Of course their chief charm lies in their fullness and puffiness. The waist is shirred or gathered, bretelles go over the shoulders, ribbons tie on the shoulders also, and in front as well, over the bust, and the belt is made of ribbon.

A pretty gown that has just left for Newport is made over pale lavender and has a bar of lavender running through the material, with the stripes between flecked with a tiny black design. The skirt is edged with three ruffles, each ruffle again edged with heliotrope ribbon of a trifle deeper tint. The waist has a broad point inserted, of sheer white mull, gathered, down each side of which fall the full bretelles, pointed at the waist and separated from the front by a broad rever of lavender. The sleeves are leg-o'-mutton.

Another very delightful gown is made of three deep ruffles—the lowest of pale yellow organdie, the second of deep guipure, sharply pointed, and the third of the organdie. The waist is but slightly gathered, and is almost covered by the flouncing of lace that falls over the shoulders, and meets in a point in front a little over the belt line.

A number of the prettiest of these gowns have yokes made separately from the bodice, so that they can be worn evenings without. They thus make suitable gowns for summer balls and room. Others have a number of guimpes made for the same gown of different colors and different materials. With a limited wardrobe such changes work wonders. Of course there must be in each case a set of ribbons to match each guimpe, and an effective change is thus wrought in a gown that might otherwise have grown tiresome, where a necessity for constant wear exists.

Spaw's Face Carved by Nature.

Curious growths on trees are often found by explorers in passing through the woods; but seldom has a greater freak nature been seen than one which is now in possession of Andrew Irvine, of Pembroke, near Ottawa. The growth bears an extraordinary resemblance to a squaw's head, and is a portion of a limb of a birch tree which grew out of an Indian grave many years ago on Allumette Island. The features of the squaw's face are well defined, a growth around the forehead and chin being raised above the features as if by a covering of cloth used for winter protection. A portion of the original bark is still on the cranium. About three feet of the branch has been sawed off, making with the head a ponderous staff. From the appearance of the grave and the growth of the tree the portrait must be at least one hundred years old, and it is believed that no person, either Indian or white, could have produced so remarkable a work.

"My little boy was very bad off for two months with diarrhœa. We used various medicines, also called in two doctors, but nothing done him any good until we used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, which gave immediate relief and soon cured him. I consider it the best medicine made and can conscientiously recommend it to all who need a diarrhœa or colic medicine. J. E. Hare, Trenton, Tex. 22 and 50 cent bottles for sale by F. J. Wurzburg, druggist, 58 Monroe.

"One of my customers came in today and asked me for the best cough medicine I had," says Lew Young, a prominent druggist of Newman Grove, Neb. "Of course I showed him Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and he did not ask to see any other. I have never yet sold a medicine that would loosen and relieve a severe cold so quickly as the Remedy does. I have sold four dozen of it within the last sixty days and do not know of a single case where it failed to give the most perfect satisfaction." 50 cent bottles for sale by F. J. Wurzburg, druggist, 58 Monroe.

For a cut, bruise, burn or scald there is nothing equal to Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It heals the parts more quickly than any other application, and unless the injury is very severe no scar is left. For sale by F. J. Wurzburg, druggist, 58 Monroe.
