The Autumn Bride in Her Beautiful Simplicity.

GOODS FOR WEDDING GOWNS

Fur a Most Fashionable Trimming. The Tendency of the Coat--Some Handsome Ones Described.

Truly, wedding gowns ought to have a new impetus given to them this fall, for the list of prospective brides is steadily filling up. Miss Flora Davis headed it with her brilliant Paris ceremony, and in her wake will follow maidens as equally fair. As many as three Misses Sands, but each of a different family, have plighted their troth and will be married within the next two months. Miss Draper, renowned for her beauty, will shortly become Mrs. Vaughn Clark; Miss Eleanor Duer, affianced to Joseph Larocque, Jr., will stand before the altar on October 25, and many others will step from the highest ranks of maidenhood into the sedater class of wifehood.

But, for all the interest attached to such affairs as these, more attention is given to arrangement, bonn and originality in the costuming of bridesmaids and maids of honor, than to the gown of the bride herself. A magnificent simplicity is the one essential. Satin, in the pearly shades, is still the material, the veil is still of tulle, the trimming of lace, or of pearl passementeries, if one is not superstitiously inclined, and even the orange blossom still forms part of the toilet.

The cut of the gown is either princess or a round waist with the skirt full and wide, of course. Accordion plaits appear even in the wedding gown, and the quaintness of the ordinary street and house gown is manifested to slight degree in the bridal costume.

But there is so much more of a field in which to plan your bridesmaid's costumes or the dress of your maid of honor. Here there is but little law, for coloring is left to one's own discretion, and your attendant maids may be brilliant or demur, may serve as fitting backgrounds to the pure splendor of the bride, or as showy setting to brighten her paler tints. On most occasions, however, the bridesmaids wear delicate changing silks, while upon the maid of honor, be she child or woman, greater wealth of coloring may be heaped.

But we are not all wealthy, and such suggestions would send despair into the heart of many a simpler girl, whose bridal robes must be correspondingly simple. For her there are the quieter silks, the very finest of silk and wool combinations, the dainty crepon, and other fine white stuffs. Only let her keep to the pearl tints.

Now that brown is such a general favorite, the bride need not hesitate to wear it in the fear that her bridehood may be detected. And such beautiful browns as she can procure these luxuriant days. If one tint does not suit her, numberless others are at her disposal, in soft, heavy cloth, in the rough, wiry goods, in the gentler camel's hair, in the sackings and the favorite basket cloth. Let her trim with velvet, with satin, with fur, particularly the last. For fur satisfies the yearnings of the ordinary woman's heart after the magnificent, to greater extent than any other trimming. So make an effort to procure your fur. If need be, do without an extra gown in order to have at least one richly trimmed with fur, quiet and of elegant finish. And velvet is accommodating likewise. Velvet ruffles on sleeves, velvet collars and capes are handsome, and quite as comfortable, on a chill November day. When it comes to the basques on your short bodices, the velvet will need to be added in triple effects, and quite plain, one falling simply over the other. But where the ruffle effect is desired, satin is employed in the trimming, and then the basques may be gathered in prettier fashion.

Of course the brown maiden will likewise have a shot gown or two. The bi-colored woollens, in brown and another tint, give greater latitude in trimming, for the quiet tints are then brought out more clearly. The browns and dull reds may have dull red velvet sleeves, revers and bands. The browns and greens have rich verdant shades in the minor points of the dress. And green color and black are commonly employed by rich trimmings in correspondingly tints.

But the bride who is married in traveling gown or pretty house dress is worthy of note. A wedding of a few days ago, at a country house, showed a bride that had passed her teens a number of years before, and who was suitably attired in attractive gown of gray-colored silk plaited gauze thrown over a black silk petticoat, and with a yellow ruche at the feet. A gathered bodice of soft yellow over black was partly concealed under the vest of black velvet, richly embroidered and passementeried in pearl, that fell over, with long pointed ends in front. The sleevepuffs were a little higher than is usual, and were made up of innumerable smaller puffs. Long black suedes wrinkled to the short puff. The tiny hat was all of black lace and velvet, with a Mercury wing at the side.

But the bride will need another wrap; and nothing could be calculated to suit her, or womankind in general, better than the beautiful garments of to-day. As the velvet collarette or revers slope gently away from drooping gigot sleeves, so the heavy mink collarette falls upon heavier coat sleeves; and the effect is even heavier in fur than in velvet. For the fur is so helpless, that it falls where it is put, with not a bit of grace; and it looks so settled and immovable that the effect might be ungainly were it not so delightfully fashionable. Then the stole, too, is a great characteristic of the winter coat. A great long one in fur is no unusual sight, falling even to the feet, over a short garment. A particularly fascinating creation of this sort was a rather short cape, of coachman's color cloth, over which hung a plaited collarette in rich gold brown velvet; over the velvet came the stole, in beautiful lynx, melting into the golden tint of the velvet, starting in a collar at the back, but widening out in front, to form a yoke, then falling in the long wide breadth.

A rich coat is a plain three-quarter length, in dark brown diagonal, plain, save for the deep, straight collarette of heavy mink that falls over.

A dark green coat has leg-o'-muttons in velvet to match. It turns back in large revers that are edged with narrow sable, and the fur continues to run down the coat's edges. The opening left by the revers is filled in with a collar that continues a short distance down the front, in bands; and where the fronts of the coat meet, a little lower down, one edge of the sable disappears for a little space, to come out a few inches below in the shape of a tiny fur head, that peeps forth from what looks like a little pocket cut into the side. The effect is very taking.

A handsome black coat has velvet sleeves again, immense revers that start upon the shoulders and that continue into a broad plastron. The revers are well-nigh hidden under the decoration that covers them—pretty black embroidery touched with jet, and, on the edge, two of those tiny plaited braid ruffles that are so popular. The skirt of the coat was also richly worked, and showed some of the tiny ruffle effect also. An astrachan collar finished itself in two bands that went half way down the front.

But a truly magnificent carriage cloak was queen of everything I saw this particular day. A rich black satin with a row of mink down the front, is a description not particularly inspiring, but it was the minor details that excited the enthusiasm. A huge, wide sleeve showed that the cloak had a lining of deep crimson velveteen, covered with satin polka dots. The neck is turned back into a plaited falling collar, showing the red of the lining and edged with the mink. In the front the collar falls in pretty coquilles, and, beneath, turns back entirely from the front to show a warm vest all of mink that fits closely and stops at the waist line. It is caught in by a shining band of open jet, laid over crimson satin.

Originality of a Scheme to Swindle the Unsophisticated in Chicago.

"That's mine!"

"It's mine!"

The two men spoke simultaneously, and reached at about the same instant for a crumpled piece of paper that lay on the sidewalk. The man with the purple necktie was a shade the quicker of the two. His hand closed over the paper just in time to be clutched itself in the grasp of the other man, a dusty, travel-stained pilgrim in a gray suit and carrying a valise, says the Chicago Tribune.

There was a momentary struggle, but the man with the purple necktie retained possession of the prize.

"I saw that first!" hotly exclaimed the traveler.

"If you saw it first, my friend," replied the other, "why didn't you pick it up?"

"You jumped in ahead of me."

"I saw it as soon as you did, if not a little sooner. I was making for it when you stooped."

"I was nearer to it! I had the best right to it! I demand—"

"Softly, my dear sir," said the man with the purple necktie, retreating as the other advanced. "Possession is nine points of the law, and the point you're trying to make is not well taken. I think I saw it first, and I certainly got it first. I am going to keep it unless—hello!" he exclaimed, as he opened the piece of green paper and looked at it. "It's a twenty-dollar bill!"

"I say it's a bloody shame and a"—

"Hold on! This is a bigger find than I expected. I thought it was a fiver. I am willing to divide it with you. Isn't that fair? Isn't it a little more than fair?"

The dusty traveler reflected a moment.

"Well," he said, "I guess that's square enough. Got a ten dollar bill?"

"No, but if you'll wait here a minute I'll take this into a cigar shop round the corner and get it changed."

"You needn't do that. I think I've got a ten."

With some alacrity he drew a leather wallet from his pocket, opened it, extracted a bill and handed it over, receiving the twenty dollars in exchange.

Two hours later, with a fierce gleam in his eye and a hickory club in his hand, he was hunting all over town for a man with a purple necktie.

The twenty dollar bill was a counterfeit.

A THOUSAND SERVANTS.

The Extensive Retinue Which Waits on the Wish of England's Queen.

Queen Victoria's household comprises a multitude of titled and salaried officials, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. There are the lord steward, the lord chamberlain, the treasurer, the comptroller, the keeper of the privy purse, his assistants and secretaries, the coroner and the electric light engineer. Illiteracy in Various Countries.

Recent statistics state that the greatest proportion of illiterates is found in the three Slavic states of Roumania, Russia and Servia, where 80 per cent. of the population is unable to read or write. Of the Latin-speaking races Spain heads the list with 48 per cent., France and Belgium having about 45 per cent. The illiterates in Hungary number about 43 per cent.; in Austria, 30 per cent., and in Ireland, 21. In England we find 13 per cent.; Holland, 10 per cent.; United States (white population), 8 per cent., and Scotland, 7 per cent. unable to read or write. When we come to the purely Teutonic states we find a marked reduction in the percentage of illiterates. The highest is in Switzerland, 2.5. In the whole German empire it is but 1 per cent. In Sweden, Denmark, Bavaria, Baden and Wurtemburg there is not a single person over ten years of age unable to read and write.

It is Strange

That people suffering from Piles will endure them for years or submit to dangerous, painful, cruel and expensive surgical operations, when all the time there is a painless, certain, lasting cure, which gives instant relief and costs but a trifle. It is called the Pyramid Pile Cure and can be found at all drug stores. Any druggist will get it for you if you ask him.

Suffering from Nervous Prostration. Tortured by Kidney and Liver Complaint.

Mr. McCoy is a wealthy and influential citizen of Van Wert, and a man known for miles around. See what he says:—

"For years I had been a terrible sufferer from kidney and liver trouble, also nervous prostration and poor health in general. My appetite was poor, in fact, I had no desire to eat anything and consequently was thin, emaciated and all run down.

Life was a Burden

I tried physicians and every available remedy but found no relief. As a last resort I was induced to give your kidney remedy a trial and am pleased to say and today I am entirely cured and as good a man as ever. It is without question the greatest remedy in the world. Any one in doubt as regards this statement can address,"

Swamp-Root acted like magic,

MORTGAGE SALE—Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, dated the ninetieth day of December, A. D. 1892, made by Benjamin H. Hicks and Clarissa E. Hicks, his wife, to the Grand Rapids Savings Bank, and recorded in the office of the register of deeds of Kent county, Michigan, on the 20th day of December, A. D. 1892, at one o'clock in the afternoon, in Liber 191 of mortgages, on pages 632 and 633, which said mortgage contains a power of sale, which, by reason of said default, has become operative, and it is expressly provided in said mortgage, that should default be made in the payment of the principal or interest of said mortgage, or any part thereof, when the same are payable as provided therein, and should the same, or any part thereof, remain unpaid for the period of thirty days, then the principal of said mortgage, with all arrearages of interest, shall, at the option of said mortgagee, become due and payable immediately thereafter, notwithstanding the time limited in said mortgage or note, for the payment of principal and interest, shall not then have expired; that an installment of interest came due on said mortgage June 19, 1893; that the same remained unpaid and in arrears more than thirty days, and that the same is still in arrears and unpaid at the date of this notice; that said mortgagee has and hereby does elect to declare the entire principal and all arrearages of interest of said mortgage due and payable under and by virtue of said agreement; that there is claimed to be due for principal and interest at the date of this notice, the sum of two thousand six hundred and thirty-four and 79-100 dollars ($2,634.79-100), and no suit at law or in equity having been instituted to recover the money due thereon; therefore notice is hereby given that said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises at public auction, to the highest bidder, to satisfy the amount of principal and interest due thereon, and costs, including an attorney fee of thirty-five dollars, allowed by law, (attorneys being employed to foreclose said mortgage), on Monday, the 18th day of December, A. D. 1893, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at the north front door of the court house, in the city of Grand Rapids, in the county of Kent, and state of Michigan, that being the place where the circuit court for the county of Kent is holden. The said mortgaged premises are described as follows: All those certain pieces or parcels of land situate and being in the township of Ada, in the county of Kent and state of Michigan, and described as follows, towit: The west half of the south east quarter of section number twenty-three (23), and the north west quarter of the north east quarter of section number twenty-six (26), all in township seven (7), north of range ten (10) west, and containing one hundred and twenty (120) acres of land, according to the United States survey, be the same more or less.
