FUZZY AND OF FUR

Fashionable and Fascinating Garments at Fabulous Prices.

IT HAS NUMBERLESS FORMS

The All Fur Cloak and Mantle--The Fur Collar and Band for Trimming--About the Muff.

She is warm, and gracious, and brilliant. The rich blood courses through her veins as she walks in the frosty air, and the protesting furs nestle close up to her dainty neck, keeping away the sudden little wind gusts that try to creep in. The furs—they make up half her charm; and the girl knows it, and assures herself of it half satirically, half smilingly as she notes the increased devotion of lover or friend. Take off from her that great sable collar, those soft, big sleeves of seal; bring her in from the frosty air that gives her that charming color; sit her down amid commonplace surroundings, with her regal garment gone and an ordinary gown, without puff or gather, in its place. Turn to her once more, and then, fond admirer, whoever you may be, you will find a change

SEAL AND ERMINE COMBINATIONS.

—not only in her, but in yourself. But we women know too well the secret of our power to be so caught napping. You will ever find us gay, and brilliant, and adorned with all the artifices that render us so perfectly irresistible. That is why we have taken to furs this winter. We noted that you were becoming so accustomed to our efforts that something positively heroic was imperative to force you to open your eyes. Therefore we have poured upon you a perfect flood of furs. To show your appreciation and commendation you will need simply to take out your pocketbook and cheerfully settle the bills. You are of course willing to pay to be amused.

Furs—and a host of varieties. Ermine, sable, seal, mink, chinchilla, beaver, krimmer, fox and a few more. They show themselves in so many forms—in coats, capes, collars, bands, ruffles, stoles, and victorines; under so many circumstances—on the street, in the warm, cozy afternoon tearoom; in the great ballroom, touching satins and gauzes; on the demure bridesmaid, and even in my lady's chamber, as she lounges in her white, fur-trimmed robe.

The least explosion of cold will start the fur agoing. Watch the procession slowly filing out of church. You will find many a dress of black trimmed with jet, with delicate white lace and with fur bands. Incongruous as it sounds, the combination is very pleasing. You will note that there is scarcely a costume which has not a touch of fur somewhere. It forms narrow bands on the skirt, in place of the broad band that was once popular at the foot. It trims all the coats in greater or less degree, and it turns in and out of all the hats. Fur is a wonderful decorator. All of last year's coats require remodeling. The full skirts and gigot sleeves that fashion insists upon this winter render last year's garments quite useless in their present condition. But fur steps in and does what it can. New sleeves may be made of it, and new curves and collar almost transform the coat. The full skirt is not so easy to manage; but a clever modiste can add the old sleeves and thereby considerable fullness to the back. In the case of seal coats this is much easier, for the fur will stand patching and seaming.

But let us not be disheartened if we cannot afford the all fur cloak or cape. Nay, my pretty maid; for much jauntier effects can be had with the fur band, the collar and the fur tails. The plain cloth coats that are so fashionable this winter, with their great gigot sleeves and their enchanting stand-offishness at the bottom, can be bought for a very small sum. I saw one last week of a good, fine cloth, for fifteen dollars. But if this is too much, you can get one even lower. Let me whisper to you that I saw one for eight dollars and a half that looked well. I do not pretend to guarantee its service; but in this age of fickle fashion, it is sometimes more economical in the end to buy a coat for only one season, since it often costs more than a week's salary to remodel it for the following one. Now, with your plain cloth coat you can do wonders. A fur collar, that is, a broad-shouldered piece of fur that points to the waist, will quite transform it, or, if this is beyond you, get you a coat that has big cloth revers of desirable cut, and edge them with narrow sable or other fur. Perhaps you can save enough on your coat to introduce a little fur on your best walking gown.

If so, all the better. But be sure your fur bands are of good quality. The old fashioned chinchilla is also in vogue, mostly for trimming, and there is still plenty of beaver and mink worn. A very pretty collar piece is a series of rather long sable tails, falling from a high sable collar.

A handsome fur-trimmed costume has a double skirt of terra-cotta mixed silk and wool; each skirt is edged with broad marten sable, above which runs a band of dull black passementerie. A cape falls over the bodice, to the waist, edged as is the skirt. This is again covered to the shoulders, with a black velvet collar, gathered in godets, or puckers, and falling each side of two sable bands that stop at the waist, in long points to the feet, ornamented with handsome jet pendants.

A FUR TRIMMED TERRA COTTA.

Muffs have fallen in considerably since their first appearance this winter. The great big ones are worn but little, and a muff only a trifle larger than last year's is correct. Muffs are just at present quite the fad for bridesmaids or, more particularly, the maid of honor, to carry. Such a muff is a dainty thing of brocade or handsome silks, trimmed with fur tails, with flowers, or with dainty lace.

Oddities of Taste.

Among the curiosities of taste, the Parisian passion for self-exhibition at the morgue must hold a conspicuous place. The principal keeper at the morgue is said to have had many applications from persons eager to figure as corpses on the slabs of the dead-house. They were deterred by the official announcement that the temperature of the bodies was kept some degrees below zero. If this discomfort could have been endured for twelve hours, and if the authorities could have been persuaded to lend themselves to such a fraud, what materials for a coup in journalism would have been afforded to some enterprising genius!

THREE YEARS' RENT FREE.

I will give bonds to buy my property back in three years, for the price you now pay for it, and give you the use of a new modern home, free of rent for three years, if you are not satisfied with your bargain. If you ask for more come and see me in person. I have three elegant, new homes, just being completed on my plat on wealthy avenue, that I offer at cost price on terms to suit the convenience of any desirable purchaser.

The location is acknowledged by everyone to be the best in the city, and property on my plat will increase in valuation from 25 to 100 per cent in the next two years. Lots that I am now selling at $40 per foot (all improvements paid), will bring $25 per foot by next May. Building restrictions on every lot will guarantee a desirable neighborhood. As I build and sell only on my own property I can make terms to suit you. I invite careful inspection of my houses and gladly refer to my customers anywhere. I mean business and desire to please you. Come and see me without delay. Take Ford's Lake car to Richard Terrace or telephone my residence, 1377.

INSURANCE.
323-325 Michigan Trust Company Building.

The losses of property by fire for the year 1893 have been unprecedented, amounting on round numbers to over $14,000,000 per month, or more than $112,000,000 for the eight months ending August 31st.

Presumably insurance companies will suffer to an extent that will compel many of the smaller companies to go out of the business.

Insurers should look to it in these perilous times that their property is insured in safe and reliable companies like the following:

Phenix, Brooklyn	$ 500,000
Boylston, Boston	1,000,000
London and Lancashire, England	4,000,000
