HONOLULU, OCT. 27, 1868.

A NUMBER of whalers have arrived since our last report, chiefly from the Arctic, a some of which have done remarkably well, but a large portion of them have done rather poorly, and the average may fall below that of last year.

Advices from San Francisco per Montana, quote coast oil at 45@50c, polar 60c, and by telegraph to San Francisco from New York, with orders to purchase, at $1.25@1.30, in currency. An advance in rice is noticeable, and quoted firm at 8½c. Pulu, 20c. Kona Coffee, 14½c.

The Montana sailed on Saturday with a fair freight and quite a number of passengers. Her cargo consisted of 280 tons of bag sugars, 54 tons bag sugars, 42 tons paddy, 10 tons rice, 12,712 gallons molasses, and a lot of bananas, limes and oranges. The greater part of bag sugars and rice was shipped for the Oregon market. We notice that a large quantity of paddy is being shipped away, and the probability is that our market will be left bare and a scarcity ensue for home consumption, hence an advance in price.

There appears to be some activity in a business way, although the ships are not doing much as yet in refitting, and but few of the crews have been paid off.

The rate of exchange is not fully established. We hear it quoted at 2½@5 per cent premium on money.

The bark Comet is ready to take in cargo and will load with dispatch.

The D C Murray with our next mail will be due here Monday or Tuesday next.

The steamer Kilauea having been used by the Government, in returning from Lahaina to Kona, has interrupted her regular trips this week. She will again resume her regular trips on Monday, Nov 2d. We notice that she is advertised for sale at auction, on Dec 2d, some of the principal shareholders wishing to dispose of their interest to close other interests. The vessel has run one year with great regularity, never having missed a trip and but once her port, as per time table, and considering the repairs put upon her, and the high price of fuel, she has done well. It is true she had liberal assistance from the Government, but at the beginning of the year she had a debt of over $6,000, so that of the subsidy of $10,000 granted by the last Legislature, only $4,000 have been applied to her running expenses. We hope she will be purchased by those who will continue to run her until such time as we can get another.

SILK.—The production of the cocoon is an agricultural industry; the winding is semi-manual, and all the other branches are entirely mechanical. England developes the latter particularly, though carrying on a great commerce in silk. The United States, Switzerland, and Northern Germany confine themselves chiefly to manufacture. Southern Russia exported 66,155 pounds, worth $412,000, in 1865, at one-half the price of the silk of France and Italy. The total production in that Empire is set down at 190,054 pounds, valued at $613,000. France, Italy and Spain are becoming manufacturers exclusively. England buys the eggs, cocoons, silk and waste, to sell to others, after supplying her own manufactures. The total value of raw silk produced annually is set down at $214,900,000. Of this, Europe produces $73,480,000: Africa, $220,000; Oceanica $120,000; America, $96,000, and Asia, $141,000,000. Of the Asiatic yield, China gives $91,000,000; Japan, $17,000,000, and India $24,000,000. Of the European, France claims $23,000,000, and Italy $30,200,000.

A century ago, nearly all the silk for French fabricants came from the Levant, Persia, Italy, Sicily and Spain, and French silk brought but 30 francs the kilogramme, other varieties commanding from 120 to 600 francs. But French silk has so improved that it now brings, and has for some time brought, more than the Levantine and Persian. This is due to the progress of silk manufacture, as great there as that of cotton in England. In 1812, France produced 600,000 pounds of raw silk, and 540,000 pounds of organzine, valued at $5,000,000, besides importing 900,000 pounds, valued at $6,750,000. In 1864, the value of French silks was $140,000,000, but could not meet the demand. The export of silk tissues to the United States was $27,000,000 in 1860, but only $5,000,000 in 1861. In 1825, England had 24,000 silk looms: in 1855, 110,000, producing goods worth $45,000,000. She then consumed $55,000,000 of her own manufactures, and imported $20,000,000 in 1860, her silk manufactures were valued at $90,000,000. The Italian product was $60,000,000 in 1861. Prussia had 9,000 looms 1837, and 40,000 in 1865. In 1858, China exported 10,000,000 pounds of silk to England alone.

FOR SAN FRANCISCO per Montana.—Mrs F Wundenburg, Miss A Wundenburg, Miss Josephine Wundenburg, Miss Annie Wundenburg, Miss M Wundenburg, Miss L Wundenburg, Miss G Wundenburg, Mr Fred Wundenburg, Mr E Richardson, H Trenger, James Dysart, W H Ennis, A Brigham, Thos Smith, Capt H Chapell, Capt W M Gibson, Dr J Mott Smith a wife, T Jackson.

VACCINATION.—Under the orders of the Board of Health a general vaccination is going on in Honolulu, and from our observation it appears to be thoroughly done by those deputed by the Board to perform the duty. Men, women and children are notified to attend on certain days, to examine the previous vaccinations, and to re-perform the operation, if it shall appear not to have been effectual. There are scarcely any Hawaiians who have never been vaccinated at some time, but we are told now-a-days by those who are presumed to know about such matters, that to be surely safe against infection from the small-pox, one must be vaccinated afresh at the end of every seven years. The natives very readily, and in fact quite eagerly, avail themselves of the provisions in regard to vaccination.

LOSS OF THE HAK HAWAII.—From Capt. Raynor of the bark Reindeer, we learn of the loss, on September 23d of the Hawaiian bark Hae Hawaii in the Arctic Ocean, during a severe gale. The crew were taken on board the ship Ohio. The Reindeer and the Active were in the same gale and seem to have had a narrow escape.

WE notice by advertisement that a choice lot of furniture belonging to B. F. Ehlers Esq. will be sold at auction by Adams & Wilder, to-morrow.

THE Kilauea may in all probability arrive to-day from Hawaii when we can expect to hear further news from Kona, in regard to the unfortunate troubles there.

DIPTHERIA.—Considerable mortality has been observed of late among children, characterized by some as diptheria, but the symptoms of which have resembled those of the disease usually known as the croup. The occurrence of this disease at this time may properly be attributed to the changeable weather we have experienced. Drafts must be guarded against, with children as well as grown persons.

LOSS OF THE SCHOONER YETTE.—By the schooner Hattie news has been received of the loss of this vessel at Moloaa, on Thursday, the 22d inst., at half-past eleven A. M., during a heavy squall from the N. N. W. The surf at the time was very heavy, and the vessel has become a total wreck. During the same squall, the schooner Nettie Merrill, at Wahiawa, had a narrow escape from going on shore. These squalls appear to be the premonitions of the coming Konas, which, undoubtedly, will clear our atmosphere.

TABLEAUX ENTERTAINMENT.—Next Tuesday evening, November 3, there will be given at the Public Hall one of those delightful entertainments, consisting of music and tableaux, for which Honolulu is justly famous. A large corps of performers have volunteered, and the programme will be varied and interesting. The proceeds will be devoted towards liquidating the balance due on the Fort Street Church organ, which arrived here safely per Ceylon.

THE WEATHER, which usually in this month is windy and rainy, has so far shown a very capricious wavering between good and bad, but mostly inclining to the indifferent. Southerly winds have been the rule, occasionally alternated with a few puffs of the trades, and the heat in the city has on some days been excessive, particularly an hour or two after meridian. As soon as the regular trades set in, or we have an old-fashioned Souther—and not till then—we may look for comfortable weather.

"THE SEASON," has fairly commenced, the whalers having begun to arrive, almost every day one and sometimes two, and on our streets we meet familiar faces of many whom we have known in former years, and who are just returned from the perilous and arduous pursuit in the extreme Northern regions, of the leviathan of the seas. We are pleased to learn that the ships have generally done very fairly and also that the price of oil and bone in the States was at last accounts on the rise.

THE AMERICAN CLUB.—An association has been formed in this city under the above title, with rules, regulations and by-laws, both written and tacitly understood. Quite a liberal fund has been subscribed by some thirty members, and paid into the treasury of the Club, so that the organization is upon a sound financial basis. The premises on Richards street, formerly the residence of the late Hon. L. Haalelea, have been leased by the Club, and renovated thoroughly, supplied with new furniture and fixtures. The appliances for convenience of cuisine and comfortable enjoyment are admirably arranged. This will be no subject for surprise when the fact is stated that D. C. Waterman, Esq., has supervised the arrangements—who, to use an Americanism, "knows how to keep a hotel."

THE following article appears in the Pall Mall Gazette, a London Newspaper of high character and standing, not at all likely to give publicity to a mere empiricism, and the importance of the subject to which it refers, and the deep interst felt in this community on which the scourge has fallen, would seem to warrant us in laying it before the public.

LEPROSY.—It is well known in India, though not so at home, that Dr. Bhau Daji, a skilled native physician in Bombay, has for many years made the cure of leprosy a special object of investigation, with so much success as to entitle him to be regarded, according to the local papers, as "one of the benefactors of the world." Latterly, Dr. Bhau has striven to establish an hospital solely for lepers, where his treatment and regimen can be strictly administered, and therefore, more thoroughly tested than heretofore. We learn from a trustworthy eyewitness, that there are at present seventy cases under treatment, "some quite cured, and others in all stages of cure." It is stated that "the cure is slow, varying with the stage of the disase, age and constitution of the patient, but that in four to eight months, wonderful effects are produced;" and that Dr. Bhau is sanguine, not without good reason, "that the worst cases may be cured in twelve months." One "bad" case instanced is that of a student, who, under very careful ordinary medical treatment for eight months, received no benefit from it whatever, but, having tried Dr. Bhau Daji's regimen and medicine for three months, says he feels sure he will be quite cured by them, and is already not unfit to appear in public. Those who know what leprosy is in India, and how totally European skill, and the ingenuity of native quacks, have failed in treating this proverbially loathesome and desperate disease, will look with intirest on Dr. Bhau Daji's very hopeful experiment.

In the present age of rapid development and marvelous discovery—when so many projects which the "boasted wisdom of our ancestors" has unhesitatingly and dogmatically pronounced as absurd impossibilities and humbugs, have taken rank in the category of established facts—it is almost hazardous to doubt that that inspiration which has heretofore been withheld from the learned and eminent of all ages, may indeed have been conferred on a Hindoo, endowed by an inscrutable decree with the power to accomplish even so mighty an achievement as the eradication and cure of that oldest and most loathsome of the "ills to which flesh is heir to." Have not even greater blessings emanated from the far East?

The fact that Dr. Daji proposes to establish an hospital for the treatment of the disease on his new principle, would seem to elevate him above the class af empirics who trade in ignorant mystery; and his readiness to make his alleged discovery available to the public, ought to inspire some confidence in the good faith of his claim.

The Troubles on Hawaii.

Since our issue of last week, some acts of violence have taken place in consequence of the assembling together of the religious fanatics in Kona, Hawaii, under Joseph Kaona. With the many flying rumors and vague reports which abound in the community, no clear understanding can be arrived at as to the actual state of affairs, although Deputy Sheriff Neville has lost his life, and it is reported that one or two others have been killed. Upon the receipt of intelligence here on Wednesday night, that there had been a violent resistance to the law, the King's Government immediately prepared to send forward an armed force to aid the civil authority in maintaining peace and serving the processes of the magistrates.

The Attorney General, who is especially charged by the laws of the last session with the care of the police, and whose further duty it is to advise the magistrates, has proceeded to the scene of trouble; the Governor of Oahu being in command of the troops. It is expected that there will be no occasion to use violence in bringing these deluded men to a sense of their duty.

It was deemed proper to make the force sent forward sufficient to prevent any probable further loss of life, and therefore 127 men and their arms were embarked on board the Kamaile and Prince on Thursday P. M. About 20 men belong to the volunteer companies and several volunteer officers accompany them. The schooners arrived at Lahaina at eleven o'clock on Friday forenoon, and meeting the Kilauea there, no time was lost in putting the troops on board of her, and in discharging her freight into the schooners. On Friday night the steamer left Lahaina for Kona, and probably arrived on the following (Saturday) noon or night. While awaiting further intelligence, we here insert two letters which have been received from intelligent and reliable gentlemen residing in Kona, addressed to two of our citizens, and which they have obligingly given us to copy:

KEALAKEKUA, HAWAII,
October 19, 1868.

"A most sad affair occurred this morning. Neville, the Sheriff, in attempting to arrest some men, was killed, and his assistants driven off. The trouble had been breeding for months, and had its origin in a religious schism under the leadership of a man named Kaona, who passed some time in the Honolulu Lunatic Asylum. Kaona is called "The Prophet" here, and has gathered a following of about two hundred persons, who located themselves on a land belonging to Lunalilo. They had the promise of a lease of the land from Kanaina (Lunalilo's father); but though the money was taken to Honolulu to pay for the first six months, yet the land was not given to them, but leased to Roy, or to parties for him. Some months ago they had trouble about a church, and Kaona was arrested, placed and kept in prison for several days, and then discharged without any trial. Their feelings have been very bitter, in consequence of their difficulties, against Mr. Paris, the missionary, and Mr. Neville. They have now put themselves entirely in the wrong, for they have set the officers of the law at defiance, though up to last Thursday, the 15th instant, a good deal might be said in their behalf. The attempt to arrest them was ill-conceived; Neville and a crowd going on horseback, and a rough and tumble fight ensued, in which Kaona's people were completely victorious. From all I can gather, Neville fired two shots from a revolver, one probably into the air, and after firing the second shot was struck in the forehead by a stone and knocked off his horse. No firearms seem to have been used by Kaona's people. They are religious fanatics, and believe themselves under the especial protection of Jehovah. Logan, Smith and myself visited them on Sunday, and I counseled Kaona to submit to the law, and if he could not get justice here, (according to his ideas) to appeal to the highest court. Yesterday, after the fight, Logan, Williamson and myself went to learn positively as to Neville's fate, and if possible to get his body. They refused to let us have the body, but, considering the circumstances, (the late fight, and their houses in ashes,) were very calm, excepting one fellow on horseback, who was armed with a lasso, and looked very wicked. Kaona may be religiously mad, probably is, but in my interviews with him there was nothing irrational in his language or behavior. The authority of the law should be enforced, but there is no one here to do it. Twenty men I believe could make the necessary arrests, and without more bloodshed than the shooting of one man; but the man in command should have had experience in such matters, and know what he was about. Nothing will be done here probably until the arrival of a force from Honolulu, unless Kaona's people should attempt to sack and burn houses. It is a sad affair; most of the men are well known to me; many in 1865-66 were in my employment, and two of the leaders were of the best men I have had. The whole history is sad to relate, but until yesterday I had some sympathy for them, and the treatment they received respecting the church and the land was calculated to make them feel aggrieved."

SOUTH KONA, HAWAII, Oct. 21. 1868.

"It will be great grief to you, as indeed it is to us all, when the sad news of Mr. Neville's murder comes to your ears. You will no doubt hear many reports. The truth so far as I can ascertain is, that Mr. Neville, while peacably endeavoring to carry out his duty, was stoned to death by the infatuated followers of Kaona. There have been irregularities on the part of Kaona's followers for some time past with reference to a piece of land which they were occupying, and of this they were endeavoring to obtain a lease. The land, however, fell into the hands of another individual, who, willing to make some arrangement respecting it, appointed a day, of which Kaona and his people had previous notice, when the matter might be arranged in the presence of the magistrate. No one appearing, the lessee obtained a writ of ejectment against the present occupiers of the land, and Neville, I understand, read the same, or rather attempted but was hindered; accordingly he wrote two or more copies of the writ and proceeded to post them within the precincts of the camp, but was prevented—those he put up being pulled down, and he himself being jostled. Against these men who interfered with the Sheriff in the prosecution of his duty, warrants of apprehension were obtained, and constables sent to execute them. These latter were roughly handled, and it became evident that His Majesty's law was set at naught by these people. Mr. Neville sent out summonses to several natives, and also to some foreigners, commanding them to appear on Monday (the attempt of the constables to make arrest having been made on Saturday) to assist the constables in doing their duty. They came, and in company with a fair body of men Mr. Neville proceeded to the encampment. He, as well as those following, was on horseback; the rest of the story is soon told: Mr. Neville was attacked with stones and murdered; the others (only a few) who were close to him barely escaping with their lives. It is a sad story, but it is made sadder; I was informed of Mr. Neville's death about 10 o'clock on Monday morning while in school, and I could hardly believe it; nor did I until I had visited the camp, which in company with Mr. Logan and Mr. Greenwell alone I did. We asked respecting Neville, and were told he was dead. We asked for his body and were refused. Mr. Greenwell first asked in the name of the Law, and I asked in the name of the Church, but the body was not forthcoming. Is not this horrible? You may imagine that ours is not an enviable position. Kaona's followers number a great many, and they are an organized body. We are informed on good authority that they threaten the property and persons of the foreigners. At present a body has been organized to keep guard, standing entirely on the defensive. We have sent for advice and assistance from Honolulu, and anxiously wait for it."

BUSINESS apparently is improving, from the dullness which has prevailed during the summer months. Drays loaded with merchandise are passing and re-passing along our streets and everything, on Queen street especially, wears a lively appearance.

ENCKE'S COMET.—In our issue of the 7th instant we gave a description of the wanderer through space,—one of those mysterious and perhaps eccentric bodies called Comets—this one being konwn as Encke's Comet, named after the astronomer who first discovered it. Some of our unprofessional star-gazers in Honolulu have recently declared that they had seen a comet on several nights during the last week. In corroborstion of this, we have a letter at hand from an experienced shipmaster, now retired from the dangers of the sea, and living ashore at the pleasant town of Hilo, who says under date of the 19th October, that "this comet has been visible with a common telescope, and in very clear weather with the naked eye, for several nights past, situated, as I saw it, on the evening of Saturday, 17th instant, about ten degrees east of the meridian, and bearing nearly W. S. W. from the Pleiades. That is my estimation, as I have no instruments for measuring distances."

SAILING OF THE MONTANA.—The steamer for California sailed punctually from her wharf on Saturday last, at 4½ P. M. A large number of our residents, both native and foreign, ladies and gentlemen, were on the wharf to bid good-bye to departing friends who have been residing here for a more or less period, and the scene was a lively one.

—TESTIMONIALS—
We the undersigned, Ship-Masters, have used Nichols & Co.'s Hard Bread for the past four years, and find it superior to any we have had in San Francisco. For the past two seasons we have taken their Bread exclusively, and do cheerfully recommend it as the best for long sea service that we have used on this coast.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27, 1868.
My owners have been using Nichols & Co.'s Hard Bread for the past three seasons and can recommend it as being A No. 1—to keep on board ship eighteen months—also that it is as crisp and good at the end of that time as when first put on board.
