HONOLULU, NOV. 17, 1868.

After some weeks of light winds and calms, we are again favored with the regular trades, which have brought along a number of whalers, chiefly from the Ochotsk Sea, whose reports will be found below.

Business has the appearance of being quite brisk. Ships are beginning to refit, and there is some little demand for provisions, although the prices are low, and we know of nothing which is likely to be source except flour.

We learn that there is likely to be a scarcity of tonnage for oil. The ships lately done so much better than the early reports indicated, found those who have formerly provided vessels for loading oil and bone not prepared with vessels, some considerable is being shipped by homeward bound vessels.

The bark Bloxing arrived yesterday from the Amoor River, and will load oil and bone for New Bedford.

The steamer Idaho sailed on Saturday, with quite a number of passengers and a fair freight. We understand the D. C. Murray will sail early next week.

The bark Cambridge, we understand, returns from San Francisco via Humboldt, and the Clara K. Sutil is fully due from Humboldt with redwood lumber.

We are indebted to Capt. Lawrence, of the Olivia, for the following report of the vessels not yet arrived from the Amoor:

Oct. 9—Helen Mar, 12 wh; James Allen, 12 wh; Oct 20—Emperor Scott, 1,300 bbls; Awashonks, 8 wh; Julian, 8 wh; Massachusetts, 8 F, 14 wh; Massachusetts, N R, 11 wh; Florida, 2,200 bbls; Oct 27—Concordia, 8 wh.

MEMORANDA.

MR. EDITOR:—Knowing that heretofore you have usually been on the alert for items, I hand you herewith a report of the last cruise of the Sea Breeze:

Left this port on the 1st of April for the Ochotsk, and had a pleasant passage to within 400 miles of the Kurile Islands, where we had encounter of gales from the westward, during which carried away the fore-topmast, and made but slow progress. On the morning of the 28th sighted land, and passed through the 4th passage same day, with heavy squalls of wind and plenty of snow.

Entered N. E. Gulf, May 4th, and fell in with the ice same day in lat 56° 17 N. Saw our first bowhead in the gulf June 21st, and had few up to the middle of August, from which time to Sept 7th, there was quite a show of whales. Took our first whale June 24th and last Sept 6, fifteen in all, making 1,750 bbls oil and 14,400 lbs bone.

The weather has been, throughout the whole time, the severest I have ever experienced, it was either a gale or a heavy fog, and sometimes both the greater part of the season. During the month of July and the best part of August, we had but few days fair weather. Left the gulf on the 10th of Sept. for Tarish bay to wood and water.

Crossed in October on right whale ground. Saw but few whales, and very wild. Came out through 50th passage Oct. 20. Have had very light and head winds the entire passage of 29 days.

On the 27th of August, while striking a whale had a head stove and taken down by the feeding of the line. Two men, Jethro D Bailey of Fairhaven, and Frank Silva, were drowned, and the balance of the crew picked up in an almost helpless condition, some of whom at the time not being able to speak. Probably had the morning boat been but a few minutes longer in reaching them all would have perished.

Respectfully yours,
JAMES A. HAMILTON,
Master bark Sea Breeze.

THE health of H. H. KEKUANAOA remains about the same, exhibiting no material change. His Highness is able to sit up occasionally for an hour, and in that position is quite comfortable.

SPECIMEN POSTAGE.—By advertisement it will be seen that specimen 13 and 3 cent postage stamps may be found at the book store.

STREET PREACHING.—On Sunday last, at the corner of Hotel and Nuuanu streets, several sermons were preached in the open street by a lately arrived preacher.

TO-MORROW an extensive credit sale at auction will take place at the store of F. A. Schaefer & Co., as per advertisement, to which we call the attention of dealers and the public generally.

SUPREME COURT—IN ADMIRALTY—Before Chief Justice Allen.—Ella vs. John Holmes, second mate of the bark Nautilus—Libel for assault and battery. Judgment for libellant, $50 and costs, $30. H. Thompson, Esq., for libellant, R. H. Stanley, Esq., for respondent.

RAN AWAY.—Ward's omnibus, or rather the horses attached to it, started to run away from the stable last Wednesday, but did not get further than say fifty yards, when they brought up against an obstacle by the roadside. Damage about $100.

TURNED ROUND.—Boyd's Family Market at the corner of Fort and Hotel streets, has been moved back to make room for a new retail establishement to be built for A. S. Cleghorn Esq. The market is to front on Hotel street.

COUGHS AND COLDS.—The unusual continuation of southerly and changeable winds at this time of the year, has caused a prevalence of the above disorders in our community, and many are confined to their houses thereby.

ON Tuesday morning, at about 11 o'clock His Imperial Majesty's Commissioner Mr. P. Bervaguer, accompanied by Lieutenant Fleuriale, who has been sent out here by the French Government on a scientific mission, went on board the U. S. S. Osiper to call on Capt. Satori.

A NEW STREET is being opened up from Emma street towards the Plains, from a point near Mr. A. S. Cleghorn's residence. When continued northerly, so as to intersect Fort and Nuuanu streets, it will greatly enhance the value of property in the upper part of the city.

THE BEND COMET,—which recently returned from a northern cruise, was sold at auction on Thursday last by Bartow, and brought $3,850. Messrs Perry and Pico were the purchasers, and we understand she will be refitted for the whaling service under the command of Capt. Reed, late first officer of the Kohola. Success to home enterprise.

THEATRE.—By public notice it will be seen that the Theatre will be opened on Thursday Friday and Saturday Evenings, for an exhibition of the magic lantern, dissolving views &c., &c. The fixtures and paraphernalia are quite new and novel, having been brought from England quite recently, and we anticipate an entertainment well worth the admission fee.

WE have to acknowledge the receipt of a communication referring to the "Honolulu Temperance Legion," which we regret to be unable to publish, there being no responsible signature attached to it. It may be just as well to mention here, once for all, that a strict compliance with this unexceptionable rule, will save much trouble to correspondents, as well as to the Editor.

The U. S. Ship Mohongo left port on Saturday, under orders for San Francisco. Her subsequent destination is undetermined. Commander Simpson and his officers have favorably impressed the whole community as accomplished and high toned gentlemen. Should the vicissitudes of service recall any of them hither, they will be welcomed as old friends. The orderly conduct of the crew has frequently been remarked upon by the police and others, and indicates efficient discipline as well as the salutary influence of well-trained officers. The visit of the Mohongo will be pleasantly remembered.

JAPANESE MAIZE.—This is one of the prettiest ornaments for a flower-garden, to be obtained, having a beautiful variegated leaf of green and white. It is similar to Indian corn in its growth, but the latter bears no comparison to the beauty of its verdure. Seeds can be had from the Old Curiosity Man, as well as a fresh assortment of splendid flower seeds, including double Balsams, variegated purple and white, and scarlet and white, double Zinnias, equal in brilliancy and size to the largest Dahlias. A fresh assortment of vegetable seeds, of this year's growth, has just been imported per Idaho.

FIRE.—On Monday last about one o'clock P. M., Mr. Deputy Marshal Dayton and Mr. Simon K. Kaai, were sitting in the Station House in converse together, when they observed a flame of fire ascending from an old unused bake-house of Meesman & Co., just across and a little in the rear of the street. Calling to one of the men in attendance to strike the alarm bell, Mr. Dayton and Mr. Kaai immediately ran up the alley by Duncan's blacksmith shop, and Kaai mounting the roof of the bake-house kept the flames from spreading by pouring on water which was handed him in buckets from below until No. 1 got her stream on from the corner of Nuuanu and King streets, which was in a very short space of time from the first tap of the bell. No estimable amount of damage beyond a few boards and shingles has been done, but had the same thing occurred at night during the "wee sma' hours ayont the twal," with a stiff trade blowing, the result might have been vastly different. The Pacific Hose Co. also got on a stream from Nuuanu street, and very promptly too, but it was not needed, as the fire had been got quite under. The other Companies did not unlimber. The conjecture is that the fire must have originated from the process of roasting coffee for the Messrs. Mossman, which has been going on in the building during the forenoon.

The Piracy on board the Am. Bark Cayalti.

The bark Sea Breeze James A. Hamilton, Master, arrived here yesterday, at 7 A. M., from the North-East Gulf. She had the owner of the American bark Cayalti, and a Chinese boy on board, as passengers, who, alone, out of the whole crew of that ill-fated vessel, saved their lives. We are indebted to Capt. Hamilton for the following interesting report of the tragic fate of Capt Codina:

On the 30th day of June, 1868, whilst cruising in North-East Gulf, I had two boats along shore, looking for whales. They landed on Crag Island, where they found a stranger, with a Chinese coolie, (his servant), and a few natives, who were collecting the eggs and ducks which abound there. After hearing a part of their story, the first officer brought them on board, as they were in a very destitute and almost starving condition. On their arrival, and in answer to my inquiry of who he was and how he came on that island, the stranger narrated to me the following tragic tale of piracy and murder, with the incidents attending the extraordinary cruise of the vessel, which he left on the 23d day of May. At the same time, he produced a bill of sale and other papers necessary for the sale and transfer of a foreign-built vessel to the American flag, together with the crew-list, and some few other papers he had been able to preserve, in corroboration of his statements, all bearing the official seal of the American Consulate of Callao.

He informed me that his name was John C. Codina, by birth a native of Barcelona, in Spain, but a naturalized American citizen; that he had unfortunately lost his other papers as they had been taken by the pirates, together with all his effects at the time of the murders. By the bill of sale, it was manifest that he was sole owner of a bark called the Cayalti, foreign-built, but then sailing under the American flag. The vessel sailed from Callao on the 16th day of January, 1868, bound for Pacasmayo, (on my chart, San Pedro), a port some 215 miles to the northward, with a crew of 16 men, including captain and officers, also himself as passenger and supercargo, and his coolie boy as steward; also, $20,000 part in gold and silver coin, the balance in bills of the Peruvian and Providencia banks of Peru, being his private funds to purchase rice and a return cargo. She had a small freight consisting in part of 100 quintals of flour, 180 quintals of sugar, 500 quintals of hoop-iron, a number of cans of sperm and kerosene oils, 100 boxes claret, 30 baskets champagne, 30 boxes candles, 56 barrels of ale, about 100 pounds of opium for smoking, and other wines and brandies; a lot of miscellaneous and small articles, two sugar boilers, and 45 Chinese coolies, most all of which belonged to a large and wealthy sugar plantation called Cayalti, after which the vessel was named. The coolies had been transferred to the Cayalti from the Peruvian bark Presidencia, which had brought them from China, without having landed them, as is very commonly done on that coast.

On the second morning out of port, between 4 and 5 o'clock, it being about daylight, the steward having just turned out to prepare breakfast, the Chinese rose, seized and bound him to the foremast; killed the second mate, who had charge of the deck, and threw his body overboard; struck the man at the wheel with the cook's axe, severing his left arm from his body, and left him lying on deck in a helpless condition, but not dead. The other two men, comprising the watch, being aloft, escaped for the time being, but to share a worse fate.

The captain and mate being aroused by the noise on deck, and the cries of mortal agony of the poor man at the wheel, tore up the seats from the cabin table, and with them jumped through the cabin window into the sea, no doubt thinking they might possibly reach the shore, which was about 18 miles distant, and plainly visible. But with a fiendish cruelty, almost past belief, the murderers lowered a boat, and with repeated blows, and totally disregarding their supplications, killed them in the water, in full view of Mr. Codina, who was above in the cabin, preparing to follow the example of those unfortunate men, and to jump overboard himself. After witnessing the death of his companions, (with what feelings I will not attempt to portray), he concluded that they would kill him if he did so, and that he might as well die where he was; and so he remained in the cabin.

On the return of the boat they seized the remainder of the crew, took them into the waist, tied their hands behind their backs, and lashed them to a hawser, made fast a hedge-anchor of about 400 pounds, and threw them into the sea—six in number, the wounded man included. One of the crew being a coolie of Mr. Codina's, joined the pirates, and was not included in the massacre. He was the cause of the trouble, having seen and helped to place the money on board, and informed the Chinamen of its being there, and no doubt conniving with them in regard to the piracy.

After disposing of the crew in this inhuman and barbarous manner, about 20 of them armed with axes, knives, &c., from the cook's galley, proceeded to the cabin and burst open the door where Mr. Codina was. When they entered, being entirely defenseless, he dropped on his knees and implored their mercy. But what mercy could he expect after what had already transpired? He found a friend where he least expected one—his other coolie boy, who espoused his cause on this, and several other occasions. He told Mr. Codina to inform them where the money and opium was, and they might not kill him.

With a mind relieved he did so. They took the boxes of coin, broke them open and distributed it amongst them, together with all the clothing and other effects of Mr. C. the captain and other officers.

They now told Mr. C. he must take them and the bark to China to which he replied he could not do it, not understanding navigation or knowing the position of China. At this one of the ringleaders, formerly a pirate replied in substance, "never mind, I can find it; the sun sets back of China, steer towards that and we will find it. I know the coast," and he assumed command. They steered W. for about twenty days, W. N. W. about 12, N. W. about 15, when they lost the trades, and then went scudding to the wind and drift of the vessel, there being only six that knew anything about steering.

From their ignorance of seamanship they soon lost all the light sails, masts and yards, and the larger sails being much torn from the continual slatting to which they were subjected. When they were about 77 days out, they made land, probably the Kurile Islands, covered with snow, and drifted about for five or six days, at times close in. They passed into the Ochotsk Sea, where they got into the ice, in which they remained three days. When about 118 days out, they found themselves one morning close in shore, and anchored. Here they remained five days, and the natives coming on board, they obtained some deer. Bending some sails, they proceeded to sea, and in three days came to anchor again in another place. Here Mr. Codina obtained permission to go on shore with them in the boat, where he wisely concluded to remain, his steward also preferring to stop with him.

They saw one sail on the cruise, near the Islands, and the steward set the colors, unless down. The stranger changed her course for them, but when the coolies saw this they hauled down the colors and made all possible sail, and kept away. As the Cayalti was a very fast sailer, she soon gave up the chase, and resumed her course. I was much disappointed to learn that it was five weeks since he last saw the vessel, for, had the time been shorter I would have cruised for her, and had I fallen in with her there would have been some fun.

Where Mr. Codina landed, he found the natives very kind, sharing with him such food as they had; but it was hard fare, to judge from its appearance when he came on board.

Mr. Codina learned from his steward that four of the coolies had been pirates on the coast of China, but their haunts had been broken up by the English steamers.

I think the Cayalti could not have sailed and drifted less than 10,000 miles.

Mr. C. estimates his pecuniary loss as exceeding $60,000

WHERE ARE THE TRADES?—Old residents say that they cannot remember so long an interruption of the Trade Winds as has been experienced here during some months past. A gentleman whose occupation as well as his tastes, leads him to be a close observer of meteorological phenomena, states that from a memorandum kept by him, it appears that during the last three and a half months past there have been but six days during which the trades blew at Honolulu, and but four out of the six when they were strong enough to deserve the name. Without our trades, what would become of our boasted climate? We might as well live in Manila or even Havana. We look for an old-fashioned Kona soon, to clear up the atmosphere, and then once more for a recurrence of the bracing, life-giving trades.

Since the above was written, on Monday evening, the wind as if endeavouring to spell a first class Kona, veered round to the Northward, and during the night and yesterday blew a fresh breeze, producing a magical change in the feelings of everybody.

THE officers and members of the Honolulu Rifle Corps are requested to assemble in uniform, at the Armory, this afternoon, for the purpose of attending the funeral of one of its members.
