In bringing the Second Volume of the New Monthly Magazine to a close, the Publishers would take themselves of the occasion to express their profound appreciation of the favor with which it has been received, and their earnest wish to render it still more deserving of the enlightened patronage of the American community. They commenced the publication with the firm conviction that it could be made the medium of valuable information and mental enjoyment to the great mass of readers, and that it would accordingly be sustained by their generous and cordial support. Nor have they been deceived in their anticipations. The Magazine has found a wider circulation with every monthly issue. The encomiums with which it has been welcomed by the universal voice of the press, and the verdict of intelligent readers, are a gratifying proof that the Publishers have succeeded in their endeavor to adapt it to the wants of the public mind. Encouraged by the experience of the first year of this extensive literary enterprise, they are determined to spare no effort to insure the succeeding volumes of the Magazine a still wider and more favorable reception among all classes of readers. They intend it to be a strictly national work. Devoted to no local interest, to no religious sect or political party, connected with no favorite movement of the day, except the diffusion of intelligence, virtue, and patriotism, it will continue to be conducted with the impartiality and good faith, which it is equally the duty, the inclination, and the interest for the Publishers to maintain. In addition to the choicest productions of the English press, the Magazine will be enriched with such original matter as in their opinion will enhance its utility and attractiveness. The embellishments will be furnished by distinguished artists, and selected no less for their permanent value as works of agreeable instruction, than for the gratification of an artistic taste. With the ample literary, artistic, and mechanical resources which the Publishers have enlisted in the New Monthly Magazine, and their ambition to give it a character of genuine, substantial, reliable excellence in every department, they may assure its circle of patrons that its unsoughtaid merit will more than justify the distinguished reputation which it has attained at this early period of its existence.

Harper's New Monthly Magazine is issued invariably on the first day of the month in which it is dated. Each number will contain one hundred and forty-four octavo pages, in double columns; each year thus comprising nearly two thousand pages of the choicest miscellaneous literature of the day. Every number will contain numerous pictorial illustrations, accurate plates of the fashions, a copious chronicle of current events, and impartial notices of the important books of the month. The volumes commence with the numbers for June and December.

TERMS.—The Magazine may be obtained from booksellers, periodical agents, or from the publishers, at three dollars a year, or twenty-five cents a number. The semi-annual volumes, as completed, neatly bound in cloth, at two dollars, or the muslin covers, at twenty-five cents each, are furnished by the agents or publishers.

The publishers will supply specimen numbers gratuitously to agents and postmasters, and will make liberal arrangements with them for efforts in circulating the Magazine. They will also supply clubs on liberal terms; and mail and city subscribers, when payment is made to them in advance. Numbers from the commencement can be supplied at any time.

Those who wish to continue the Magazine, are respectfully reminded of the necessity of renewing their subscriptions when about to expire, as the work is invariably stopped at the close of the period of subscription, and is never forwarded unless payment is made in advance. There is, therefore, no necessity of ordering a discontinuance.

Under the new postage law, which goes into operation on the first day of July, the postage upon each number of the Magazine, to be paid quarterly in advance, will be

For any distance less than 500 miles ..... 4 cents.
" " from 500 to 1,500 miles ..... 8 cents.
" " from 1,500 to 2,500 miles ..... 12 cents.

From the above rates of postage, subscribers residing more than five hundred miles from New York, will perceive it to be for their interest to order the Magazine, and have it mailed to them from some responsible agent or bookseller within five hundred miles of their residence.

 The publishers would give notice that they have no agents for whose contracts they are responsible. Those ordering the Magazine from agents or dealers, must look to them for the supply of the work.
HARPER & BROTHERS, New York.
