GERMANS SPENT MILLIONS IN RECONSTRUCTING ROADS

Warsaw, Dec. 24.—Something over a million and a half dollars have been expended by the Germans since their occupancy of Poland in reconstructing the unspcakably bad roads that crisscross the kingdom at more or less rare intervals, and which have been all but destroyed by artillery fire and by the transportation of big guns, ammunition and food supplies.

For those in charge of the "Reconstruction of Connections between the Armies and Home" the task has grown with each kilometer that the Germans have won from the Russians. Prior to the fall of Warsaw there were approximately 1045 kilometers (655 miles) of roads to be repaired, but when the Russians retreated to Brest Litovsk, and then abandoned that fortress, the mileage increased to 5440 kilometers (3400 miles) and the difficulties involved grew greater with each additional mile.

The Germans found, on their arrival, a few so-called "imperial roads" which were, for the most part, strips of sand. From the inhabitants—or such of them as remained—they learned that taxes for the upkeep of the thoroughfares had been collected over and over—and never spent for the purpose intended. A second class of roads, the so-called government streets, were all but impassable, and the third variety consisted of roads that not only were impassable but impossible. All three sorts were torn by shells, cut by trenches, and rutted by both Russian and German wagons bound for the front.

The Germans in charge of road rebuilding claim that they never have had any word as to the ultimate intention of their government with respect to Poland—that their work has gone on irrespective of any intention to annex the ancient kingdom, that the work has been done purely as a sort of philanthropic measure and that it will stand as a heritage for those who may in the future govern Poland.

That it has been thoroughly done, however, is attested by the fact that between 30,000 and 35,000 laborers have been employed in the various sections of Poland. Most of these men are Poles, thrown out of their ordinary occupations by a shortage of raw materials.

Throughout the length and breadth of Poland the sand stretches are being bolstered up with wood and stone—and 710,000 cubic meters (approximately 2,500,000 cubic yards) have been used thus far in making passable roads, even in districts where no military need for them exists.

For instance, a road 75 kilometers in length has been built to the south of Lodz, where there have been no armies for months, and where there is no immediate prospect of a need for good roads from a military standpoint. The work continues, and a contrast between the old and new order of things—easily obtainable in the course of a ride on the Lodz—gives a glimpse of the constructive efforts of the Germans.

The Polish population in general has proven thankful for what has been accomplished—additionally so because thousands of its men and women have received employment in the reconstruction of the Polish roads, and have in this way been saved from the starvation that otherwise stared them in the face.

It is peculiar that the women, rather than the men, have done the most toward rehabilitating their own country. The women, and grown children, have proved themselves industrious workers for the reconstruction of Poland, while the men, with few exceptions have had to be driven, and have never overcome their suspicion of the Germans. This suspicion, it is assumed, is founded on generations of experience of Russian domination. The men, rather than work, offer bribes to the Germans, as they used to offer them to the Russians, and then appear utterly dumfounded when the bribes are not accepted and they are confronted with the alternative of working or starving.

"The Millennium is No Mushroom." In the January American Magazine "Sid" says:

"The question before the country is whether this nation ought to be prepared to rear. Those who favor being prepared do not mean that they want war. What they mean is that they want protection provided against attacks, exactly as the police are provided to protect them from assaults by thieves and murderers. In other words, they do not assume that all the nations of the earth are gentle, unselfish homebodies who never go out nights to steal and murder.

"Some people feel differently. They are against preparedness. They say that preparedness breeds trouble. They think that we should go unarmed before the world, greet everybody with a smile, accept insults philosophically, turn the other cheek, and expect all nations to take counsel of our example, regenerate, and rapidly evolve into beautiful creatures like ourselves.

"This is sound theory. It is perfect brotherly love. It is Christianity. If enough people will work at it, something fine may result in a few or nine million years.

"But why do those who feel so brotherly disposed toward foreign nations treat the rest of us here at home so capotiously? Why do they trust us, too? Why do they keep their hands on their money in the subway? Why do they chain their watches to their bosoms? Why put locks on their doors?

"The fact is that their attitude toward those of us who live with them is their real attitude toward the whole human race, and that they are saying about preparedness in general what they think they think. If we were at war and our enemies were invading us, you would find these same people disturbed because of our unpreparedness. You would find them grabbing their money and their solid silver hair-brushes and dashing out the back door to safety. And nobody would blame them.

"Now, I think that some folks are led into talking against preparedness because they are afraid they won't be counted among the enemies of war. They are afraid somebody will think that they want to hold back the millennium. How ridiculous! After all, this is still an imperfect world, and in his working hours man puts in the only lick he can at the job of hastening the millennium. At night he needs sleep. And his can't sleep with one eye peeled for a burglar who may come in through a door that isn't locked. The very fact that he is apprehensive because the door is unlocked is evidence that it should be locked. It simply means that up to the present work if there is a certain show of authority in evidence to keep order. As the centuries go by, and man develops, the necessity for these demonstrations of authority ought to decrease.

"The fact is that everybody is against war, and in favor of the millennium. But there is a difference of opinion as to the speed of travel. Some think that the millennium is coming on the run. They believe that one of these days it will rush up to our door to make us all happy and glad. This isn't my idea. Personally, I don't believe the millennium can run a step. I think that it will have to be dragged by the heels and carried wherever we want to locate it. I think that you and I and our children and our children's children will have to take off our coats and pull away at it for all we are worth. And if such generation moves it a trifle we'll do well. Anyway, the millennium is not here yet, and it is foolish to act as if it were."

Pat Your Store in the Customer's "One might have a string of apple stores and operate them with mathematical certainty," said F. C. Kelly in the January American Magazine. "A definite number of men and women out of every hundred, or out of every thousand, on the average, will buy apples if they pass by where apples are temptingly offered. If more women will buy apples than men, then one or two women's footstepers predominates. It is on that basis that the best location for a cigar store in the United States happens to be at the corner of Broadway and Wall street in New York city. The trade is almost exclusively all day long, and most of the persons passing are men."

Wealth and Incomes.

It was at one time fashionable for people who had a little bit of money to make boast of it. Some were even prouder than the public thought them richer than they really were. But many income tax assessors going up and down the country to make the boasting of wealth a particularly pleasant occupation. When the reports of payments on income taxes makes its appearance the scarcity of rich men in the country comes into evidence. The report of the federal commissioner of revenue on individual income taxes for the fiscal year just closed shows there are not so many millionaires in the south as had been popularly supposed, or that somehow or another mighty few rich men succeed in drawing much of a income from all their wealth. The Richmond Journal, which has been studying the report, says that among the southern states, Virginia ties with Texas in 15 persons returning incomes of more than $100,000, but Texas has one taxpayer who returns more than $500,000, while Virginia has no single citizen so rich. Despite all the boasts of Georgia wealth, that state has but three citizens who pay on incomes of $100,000 or more; Alabama has but one; North Carolina has six; South Carolina two; West Virginia has 11; Kentucky has 6; Louisiana has 10; Maryland 41; Oklahoma 3; and Tennessee 1. We sometimes hear of a North Carolina man who is said to be worth about $15,000,000 but the federal tax collector has not been able to find one whose clear income is over $1,000,000.—Charlotte Observer.

THIRTY PER CENT PROFIT ON SPECULATION EVEN GREATER PROFIT ON INVESTMENT We have a single tract of approximately 650 acres of rich, Chattahoochee river bottom land, situated in Stewart county Georgia, within twenty-five miles of Columbus, which we will sell for SEVENTY per cent of what adjacent farm lands are selling for now. Of this entire tract there is one portion of about 300 acres which we would sell separately. Of this smaller tract there are 150 acres cleared, and under cultivation now; the balance, about 150 acres, is in woodland. On the entire plantation there are fifteen tenant houses, barns and necessary outbuildings, and one large eight room dwelling house. The Seaboard Airline railroad runs through this place, and there is a sidetrack on the farm. There are 40 acres of nut bearing Pecan trees on the plantation at present. This is a very desirable plantation, and to a practical farmer of grit, determination, some means; and who is not afraid of the work necessary in the management of such a plantation, this offers the opportunity of a lifetime. Our only reason for offering this magnificent plantation at such a tremendous sacrifice is strictly a personal one, and we will give it to all interested parties, privately. We will pay the expense of a trip to Stewart county if the investor, or his backers, buy the tract of land or any part of it. There are quite a few Anderson county people living in Stewart county Ga. now. Address "Stewart County, Ga." Care The Intelligencer, Anderson, S. C.
