THE SPOT FOR THE LADIES.—DRESS IS THE CRIterion of respectability now a-days, and nobody comprehends the fact better than the ladies. Men may be slovenly, and still retain a popular position. Women never trust to such a contingency. They always dress up to the mark of their ability, their knowledge of the philosophy of life teaching them that silks and satins endorse a reputation if they do not make one, and that few reputations would stand fair in good society if set off in homely costume. Then at balls and parties—only see the elegant trimmings from LICHTENSTEIN'S! What superb head ornaments! The black and colored ostrich feathers—the sash and hair ribbons, of choice hues—and all the other little dainty matters that go to make up a lady's magnificent tout ensemble. Lichtenstein's, at No. 90 Bowery, corner of Hester st., is a great depot of all this kind of gay material, and every lady goes there to select from its immense assortment as naturally as she goes home to dinner. Lichtenstein is, too, the prettiest trimmings in the world for evening dresses; while his stock of satins and silk velvets, moss plushes, for bonnets, his dress and cloak trimmings, are beautiful beyond all comparison, and are offered at just half the usual price.
