Variety.

A sweet thing in flowers—The Confectioner's Journal.

"Constitutionally tired" is now the polite way of expressing the fact that a man is naturally lazy. We live in wonderfully refined times.

"You didn't get any chewing tobacco about your clothes, now you?" asked a Fort Scott girl of a young man who was returning to a leap year party.

It has been suggested that if young men will marry on the 29th of February they will be able to save many pennies expended on wedding anniversaries.

A New Haven tailor called in to notify in the City Court, stated that "heavy tailors generally put on about ten or fifteen dollars for style." He drew it mild.

The Chicago Tribune says that a million Americans eat with their knives. Yes, and there another million who would be glad to eat with anything.

A Chicago girl writes to the school authorities of that city to say that she "left the out of employment for a year, and could teach for $25 a month and board around."

"How much to take me to the Cathedral?" asked a tourist just arrived in Dublin of a hackman. "Half," said he, "the moment ever I see such guys as those at Kings."

"If you don't patch up those walls so that I can keep warm, I will go too," exclaimed the only remaining prisoner in the Madisonville, (Ky.) jail, the other day. His modest request was granted.

A fellow Englishman relates this story: "I am sure I beg your pardon," said a young American lady to her right-hand neighbor at a dinner table, after unwittingly violently, "I hope I didn't splash you?"

"Still-eyed and feed-footed barbarians from the trackless wastes of the Wabash." How's that for a graphic description of the Indiana editorial excursion? It's from the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Official dinners at Washington are about the same, either at the White House, at a restaurant or in a private family, the only difference being in the beverages. The edibles are all served in courses, and handed around by servants after being cut up.

A London doctor has discovered that you may cure the toothache by dissolving half a drachm of bicarbonate of soda in an ounce of water and holding the solution in your mouth. If the really is a certain remedy for the most terrible of all enlightened agonies, the donor who gave it to the world deserves to have his name written in letters of gold upon every jaw in the land to which it may bring relief.

A new claimant for a share in the estate of the late Michigan millionaire, Captain E. E. Ward, has appeared in Sandusky, Ohio, in the person of a woman who declares that she was the legal wife, and is now the widow of Captain Ward many years ago, and that she has a marriage certificate and other proofs to substantiate her claim. She demands $250,000 as her share in the estate.

Women are so to believe this new story: "A man in the town of Elm, the mother of a handsome doll, was crossing the railroad, a few days since. She had entered the last rail, when the passenger train appeared. The animal fastened toward the train. Looking back, she saw her offspring standing on the track. With a frightened look, she made a desperate but useless appeal to the foolish little creature to follow her. He came the train, but still stood the rail, by this time facing the train. The engineer tried to scare the little fool away by making the whistle scream, but he wouldn't scare. When the train was within ten rods the mother of the new made a rush for her wilfully child, caught him on her horns and bore him away in safety."

A young girl, about as pretty as they grow 'em, went into a Cedar Rapids music store and asked the clerk, impatiently, if he had "A Heart that Loves Me Only" "No," he said, "but here's 'A Health to Thee, Mary.'" That wouldn't do, but, before she turned to go, she asked: "Have you 'One Sweet Kiss Before We Part?' That Cedar Rapids clerk looked up and down the store; the bookkeeper was out, the boss was upstairs trying to sell a granger a whizzy old melodeon, and so he leaned over the counter and turned out about half a dozen of the best and most sentimentally-finished articles that the astonished young lady had ever been offered in a job lot. She didn't say much, but she went out of the store in a step and a half, and rubbed her cheeks thoroughfully all the way home.

All Sorts of Items.

A Stockton Nimrod recently killed 324 mallard ducks in four duck days.

A Berlin Barnum has secured possession of the clockwork of the Bremerhaven infernal machines and lug it on exhibition.

The advisory council of Plymouth Church is now hard at work, and prospects for a long reign are very strong.

A well grounded report from Sacramento that the opium calling infection has demoralized some of the white women in the city.

Both houses of the New York Legislature have adopted resolutions protesting against Congress granting subsidies to railroad.

A Hindoo, employed on the Constant Spring estate, in the Island of Jamaica, beheaded five children recently, while in "a religious frenzy."

Rabenstein, the murderer of his cousin, Sara Alexander, in New York City, has been convicted and sentenced to be hung March 24.

The Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation bill which reduces the cost of the service more than sixteen, was passed in the House 192 to 2.

Rambetta has formally protested against the exceptionally rigorous measures of the military authorities in prohibiting private meetings of Radicals.

General Sherman writes, "I have never been, am not now, and never shall be, a candidate for the high office of President before any convention of the people."

A curious lusus naturæ is shown in the garden of Mr. Kimball at Los Angeles, where a sprig of geranium grafted upon a two-year-old tomato vine is in bloom and growing finely.

The U. S. army is reduced to 25,000 men. The number of vessels of every class upon the navy register is 142. Twenty-six are iron-clads, 95 steam vessels, and 26 sailing vessels.

The Republicans have elected their Governor in New Hampshire, by about 4,000 majority and have large majorities in both houses of the Legislature. Inflation is not relished among the Granite Hills.

In Congress, Faulkner offered a resolution instructing the Committee on Foreign Affairs to inquire into the powers conferred on A. B. Steinberger, as special agent of commissioner to the Samoan Islands. Adopted.

The East river bridge, between New York and Brooklyn, will probably be completed about July 1878. The Brooklyn tower is finished, and the New York tower will be completed next summer. Thus far $6,500,000 have been expended.

During the first 18 days of January, the elevated railway, in New York, carried 82,705 persons, against 37,950 for the same period last year. The road is now complete from the Battery to Fifty-ninth street, a distance of five miles. The trip is made in 24 minutes, with 12 stops.

London, March 22nd.—The Roshi Ris says: The armistice between Mukhtar Pasha and insurgents was concluded on condition that the fortress of Nissis should be restituated. The negotiations were conducted through the Prince of Montenegro. The execution is a fact. The prohibitions relative to the provisioning of Nicsic are not yet confirmed. Eight thousand insurgents are investing Nicsic. Mukhtar Pasha has started with troops to enforce the agreement for the restocking of the place.

New York, March 27th.—A London telegram says that the terrible railway calamity at Ill, France, was caused by the breaking of a bridge, owing to heavy rain storms. The carriages fell on top of each other, and immediately disappeared in the river, where they were broken up by the strength of the stream. Those of the travelers who were not killed by the fall were unable to escape from the wagons in which they were imprisoned, and they were carried down the river and they were dashed to pieces against the rocks and slowly drowned. Over thirty bodies have already been recovered, but this unfortunately does not represent the victims of the accident.

Senator Sherman has introduced a joint resolution to the Senate, proposing a convention with Great Britain, by which until fluity in the coins and money of accounts in the two countries shall be established on a common basis. The proposed monetary unit is to be a gold dollar, of such weight that five shall be equal to one pound sterling. Other gold coins proportional in weight to this common unit, to be struck in either country, and made legal tender for debts payable in gold, except such debts in the United States as were payable in coins of the present standard. Sterling money to be converted into dollar money by computing the pound sterling as equivalent to five dollars, the shilling to 23 cents, the sixpence to 12½ cents, the penny to two cents, and the farthing to one-half cent.

The Prince of Wales has again justified his repute this as an excellent sportsman. He has brought down three elephants in Ceylon, and in attaching one of them his Royal Highness had to exhibit all the pluck and coolness of which he is master. All precautions, we are told, had been taken for the Prince's safety, as the tusker was a notoriously bad character, and had killed two men and several cattle. The Prince reached the jungle at 9 o'clock in the morning of Monday, and, attended by Lord C. Beresford, took post on a stand for six hours. Every effort to drive the elephants failed, the old tusker having led the herd through the beaters again and again, and defeated every effort to drive him. Elephants could be heard crashing through the trees with a noise like pistol shots, but only glimpses of their backs could be seen. As the beaters could not trace the elephants, the Prince, having got a shot at one, descended and advanced into the jungle on foot, with M. Varlen and Mr. Fisher, followed by Lord C. Beresford and Sheffield, with rifles. The party thus found themselves amid the elephants, and the Prince, we are told, showed the utmost coolness as he stood within ten yards of the huge tusker, who was preparing to charge, when the Prince dropped him dead. The slightest hesitation at this supreme moment, or a shot anywhere else but in the vulnerable spot on the huge beast's head, and it would have gone hard with the Prince, elephants having no respect to princes when they meet them in their native jungle.

ARCTIC COLD.—Lieutenant Payer, the Austrian Arctic Explorer, has been laying some of the results of his explorations before the Geographical Society of Vienna. Referring to the influence of extreme cold on the human organism, he related that on March 14, 1874, he and his companions made a sleigh journey over the Semilar glacier, in order to make observations of Francis Joseph Land. On that day the cold marked 58 Fahrenheit below zero. Notwithstanding this intense cold, M. Pay and Tyrolese went out before sunrise to make observations and sketch. The sunrise was magnificent; the sun appeared surrounded, as it does at a high degree of cold, by small suns, and its light appeared more dazzling from the contrast with the extreme cold. The travelers were obliged to pour some down their throats so as not to touch the edge of the metal cups, which would have been as dangerous as if it had been red hot; but the rum had lost all its strength and liquidity, and was as fat and thick as oil. It was impossible to smoke either cigar or tobacco in short pipes, for very soon nothing but a piece of ice remained in the mouth. The metal of the instruments was just like red hot iron to the touch, as were the lockets which some of the travelers, romantically, but imprudently continued to wear next to the skin. M. Payer says that so great an amount of cold paralyzes the will, and that, on her in discovery, man, from the unsteadiness of their gait, their stammering talk, and the slowness of their mental operations, seem as if they were intoxicated. Another effect was the tormenting thirst, which forces the evaporation of the moisture of the body. It is unwholesome to use snow to quench the thirst; it brings on inflammation of the throat, palate, and tongue. Besides, enough can never be taken to quench the thirst, as a temperature of 154° to 58° below zero Fahrenheit makes it taste like molten metal. Snow eaters in the North are considered as feeble and effeminate, in the same way as an opium eater in the East. The group of travelers who traversed the snow-fields were surrounded by thick vapors formed by the emanations from their bodies, which became condensed, notwithstanding the fire in which the travelers were enveloped. These vapors fell to the ground with a slight noise, frozen into the form of small crystals, and rendered the atmosphere thick, impenetrable, and dark.

Notwithstanding the humidity of the air, a disagreeable sensation of dryness was felt. Every sound diffused itself to a very long distance; an ordinary conversation could be heard at a hundred paces off, while the report of guns from the tops of high mountains could scarcely be heard. M. Payer explains this phenomena by the large quantity of moisture in the Arctic atmosphere. Meat could be chopped, and mercury used in the shape of balls. Both smell and taste become greatly enfeebled in these latitudes; strength gives way under the paralyzing influence of the cold; the eyes involuntarily close and become frozen. When locomotion stops, the sole of the foot becomes insensible. It is somewhat curious that the beard freezes! but this is explained from the air expired, falling, being immediately transformed into snow. The cold causes dark beards to become lighter; the secretion of the eyes and nose always increases, while the formation of the perspiration altogether ceases. The only possible protection against the cold is to be very warmly clothed, and to endeavor as much as possible to prevent the condensation of the atmosphere, while the mouth vaunted plans of annointing and blackening the body are pronounced to have no real value.—Medical Record.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE
IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUIN
THE PUBLIC ARE CAUTIONED AGAINST the unfounded statements frequently made, "that the composition of Chlorodyne is known to Chemists and the Medical profession." The fact is, Chlorodyne was discovered and invented by Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE (ex Army Medical Staff,) and so named by him, and it has baffled all attempts at analysis by the first Chemists of the day. The method and secret of the preparation have never been published. It is obvious, therefore, that anything sold under the name, save Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE, is a spurious imitation.
CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. Wood stated that Dr. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the inventor of Chlorodyne.
REMEDIAL USES AND ACTION.
This invaluable remedy produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp Hysteria, &c.
