A WELCOME

—TO THE—

HON A. A. SARGENT!

—BY THE—

CITIZENS OF SAN FRANCISCO

[From the Alta California, Sept 20.]

The brilliant demonstration last evening, in honor of Hon. A. A. Sargent, must have been gratifying to that gentleman as it was pleasing to those who conceived it. It was but just tribute to pay to an honored representative on his return home after a protracted session of Congress, in which he rendered distinguished services for his constituents. The Committee of citizens who had the matter in charge wisely conclude that the reception should be under the auspices of the Hayes Invincibles, the largest political organization in the country, and of the party in whose cause the Senator has so long and worthily served, and whose principles he has so well and zealously advocated.

THE RECEPTION.

At four o'clock yesterday afternoon, the Committee of Citizens proceeded to Vallejo on the steamer New World to welcome Mr. Sargent on behalf of the citizens.

At seven o'clock the Hayes Invincibles met at their headquarters, numbering only two thousand strong, their pretty batteries and banners, and four bands of music, marched down Market street to the ferry landing, under the Marshalship of S. C. Harding. As the New World passed Angel Island, brilliant red white and blue fires were lit on Telegraph Hill, the effect being very grand. Rockets were sent to the air, and, as the steamer approached the wharf, a salute of one hundred guns was fired, and, as the steamer was made fast to the wharf, cheer after cheer was given for Senator Sargent. Colonel Barnes, acting President of the Invincibles, and Marsha Harding went on board and welcomed the Senator. He was escorted to a barouche, in which were seated with him Colonel Barnes, representing the Invincibles, A. G. Abell, Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, and H. B. Williams, of the Citizen's Committee. Three barouches followed with members of the Citizen's Committee. These were placed in position in the centre of the line and then the procession moved up Market street to Montgomery, to California, to Kearny, to Geary, to Stockton, to the Hall.

The entire line from begining to the end was most magnificently illuminated with fireworks. The streets were thronged with people, who expressed their approval of the demonstration by cheers and waving of handkerchiefs along the entire line of march.

The Alta office was prettily illuminated and a display of fire made from the roofs as the procession passed up, and cheer after cheer given for the Alta. A splendid display of fireworks was also made from the headquarters of the Republican State Central, Committee as the procession passed by. As a torch-light procession it was never equalled in the city; the excellent demeanor of the men was observed by all, and the demonstration was one of which the Hayes Invincibles may feel proud.

AT THE HALL.

For several blocks from the hall the crowd thronged super to gain admission. The galleries were packed and with difficulty the crowd could be kept back until after the Club entered. Then the doors were thrown open to all and the hall jammed in a few moments, thousands unable to gain admission. The exercises were opened with a new song by the Glee Club, entitled "Welcome Home," dedicated to Hon. A. A. Sargent by Sam Booth. It is as follows:

What is all the noise about?
What, what's the matter?
Why are the people turning out?
What, what's the matter?
From far and near the people come,
With cannon's roar and beating drum,
To give our Sargent "Welcome Home,"
That's what's the matter.

Chorus—That's what's the matter now,
That's what's the matter,
To give him hearty welcome home,
That's what's the matter.

Ten years in Congress he has spent,
What, what's the matter,
Returning home, as when he went,
That's what's the matter,
Against his fair unsullied fame
Slander's arrows lose their aim;
Corruption never smirched his name.

Chorus—That's what's the matter now.
That's what's the matter,
We glory in his honest fame,
That's what's the matter.

The Miner's Rights he did defend,
That's what's the matter,
He's always been the workman's friend,
That's what's the matter,
He passed the Sandwich Island bill,
For Castle (now he fought with skill;)
He has our faith unbounded still,
That's what's the matter.

Chorus—That's what's the now,
That's what's the matter,
He has our faith unbounded still,
That's what's the matter.

In response to an encore the Glee Club sang "Go Down, Tiber."

Address by Col. Barnes.

Col. Barnes then came forward and spoke as follows:

GENTLEMEN of the Hayes Invincibles, Fellow-Citizens, and Ladies and Gentlemen: The Senator from California whom you have met to night to express your approval and regard for, left this State in 1861 to represent you in the loyal House of Congress. The Government was in great peril; the Union was threatened; the Democratic party of the South had withdrawn its members from either House of Congress, and had encamped them upon the heights near Washington. Mr. Sargent, in all the troubled times that followed was ever at his post [applause], loyal, faithful, unto the end; and he lived in Washington to see that Southern Army, battalion by battalion, cease to fan the Rebel Flag in the face of the nation and until the last rebel had passed into the last ditch. [Applause.] He continued there during the settlement of all the momentous questions which followed upon the close of the war—more momentous questions, fraught with more possible disaster than the nation had ever seen since the time the Colonies passed into the Government of the United States. There are no stains upon the record of his public life; not a single vote that needs to be recalled; not a public nor a private act that needs to be apologized for. [Applause.] At all times and in all places, he has been loyal to liberty, faithful to freedom, to public education and to the idea of the eternity of the American nation. [Loud and continued applause.] He is a noble specimen of a noble party. He has no occasion—there is no occasion of apologies for him. At all times, whenever we have wanted him, he has been there, ready to do valiant service; and he comes here, free of the accusation that has followed like Winter rains upon the heads of other men, untouched, unstained,—an honest man, a true statesman. [Vociferous applause.] And he is that sort of man that I like to think of, when gentlemen of the Democratic party talk about the corruption of the Republican party. It is true that we have had, since the violence of the storm first abated, some men whom we might well have parted with; but there are others, who are the natural outgrowth of the Republican party and its principles, and of whom he is a specimen, and to whom we can point whenever we hear observations of that character. [Applause.]

Colonel Barnes then introduced the guest of the evening. As soon as his name was mentioned, cheer after cheer went upward from the mouths of the spectators. When the Senator stepped forward the scene was repeated, and it was some moments before the enthusiasm subsided.

Hon. A. A. Sargent.

Mr. Sargent said:

Fellow-citizens: This magnificent demonstration is eloquent of the generosity of San Francisco. This cordial reception is beyond all power of the language of gratitude; the only return I can make is a promise of renewed fidelity to the interests of your great city. [Applause.] If the efforts which I have made for you in the advancement of your commercial prosperity, the embellishment of your city with useful public edifices, to avoid the giant evil that threatens your moral, social and business health, by representing the State in the most august legislative body in the world, have given any degree of occasion for this great outpouring of the people to greet my return home, it was merely the performance of that duty only that I covenanted to do. When I accept this, I do so as from the public of this State. [Applause.] The only reward a public servant has a right to expect is the intelligent approbation of his constituents. If he has this, he possesses a treasure beyond estimation, and to gain it is worth days and nights of toil and watchfulness. A sincere public servant will be grateful for praise bestowed upon him; but he will also welcome honest criticism of his acts as a means of avoiding errors. [Applause.]

No man has a right to expect blind confidence from the people. I have desired to serve this public to the best of my ability, and I am truly grateful to you that on many occasions you have excused errors of judgment, and have been generous to believe in my good intentions.

Fellow citizens, although this demonstration is participated in by citizens generally, it is under the auspices of the Republican party, and I may be excused for alluding, a moment, to the great political contest which now agitates the nation. I have been gratified to observe as I entered this State, and during the few days that I have been in it, that all signs are auspicious for a complete Republican victory [Applause.] I congratulate you upon your powerful Republican organization; that the party is united [applause]—that your friends have come home to as to stay; and we welcome them to our hearts and confidence. [Applause—long and loud.] The Republican party for fifteen years, whenever united, has swept this State. [Continued applause.] We are united now, and all the gates of hell cannot prevail against us. [Applause.] Your brethren in the East are fighting this fight with high hope. They are organizing all over the land; they are prepared for the contest; are imbued with enthusiasm for Republican principles have confidence in your nominees; and I believe there will be a united North for Rutherford B. Hayes and William A. Wheeler in November next. [Applause.] And I further believe that we can carry as many of the Southern States as we are allowed to hold a fair election in. [Applause.]

This is the fifth great national contest which we have fought against the Democratic party. We have been accustomed to succeed; we are familiar with their tacks, and they with defeat; and why should we not succeed? Why should not the Republican party and Republican principles dominate in this land? I agree with the Democratic Governor of this State that the people of this country owe to the Republican party a debt of gratitude for saving the nation. [Applause.] The Republican party desires only a good responsible Government, liberty for all men over our broad land; that freedom, fellow citizens, in Louriana and Mississippi which is enjoyed in California and Vermont. [Applause]. The Republican party do not desire that the credit of this nation shall be sacrificed by repudiation. They are determined that no brood of iniquitous claims, no payments for loss of slaves, etc., shall burden the nation's treasury. [Applause]. These claims are brought forward in Congress and agitated in local committees at the present time. There are bills pending of this character in the House of Representatives. Give them the power and they will strip the treasury. As that great man—great on the battle-field, great in the Executive office (loud applause)—President Grant, recently declared, the success of the Democratic party is the bankruptcy of the nation. This we will resist. [Applause].

Mr. President, I fear I shall proceed to do what I did not intend—make a speech. (Cries of "Go on! go on!") You are wearied with the labors of to-night. (Cries—"Never mind! go on!") I am wearied with the long trip I have made to reach this State, and nearly broken down with my labors in Washington. I shall not, at this late hour of the night, detain you longer. Again, allow me to return you, for this reception by the people of San Francisco, my kindest expression of feelings of gratitude. It cheers and encourages me when away from you, and I feel proud and triumphant when I know I have been the humble instrument of securing the passage of measures calculated to benefit the people of this coast, and thereby make some slight returns for this reception.

At the close of the Senator's remarks rousing cheers were given for him, all who were seated rising to their feet. In response to loud calls Dr. Cox and Governor Pacheco made short and stirring speeches, and the meeting adjourned with enthusiastic cheers for Hayes and Wheeler. Later in the evening the Fourth Artillery band serenaded Mr. Sargent at the Cosmopolitan Hotel.
