COMMERCIAL.

HONOLULU, MARCH 27, 1878.

The drouth is the principal subject of conversation in business circles, and of course has a very depressing influence on transactions. Should we not have copious showers of rain and that shortly, too, the result with doubtless be disastrous to many who have to a measure embarked their all in sugar culture and grazing.

Since our last we note the following arrivals.—Am. bark-entine Moselle, from Hemfield, with lumber, to C. Brewer & Co.; the British bark Dovenby, from Liverpool, with a full assorted cargo of general merchandise, to T. H. Davies; the Am. bark Martha Davis, from Boston, with assorted merchandise, to C. Brewer & Co.; and the steamer City of New York from San Francisco, with passenger and merchandise to H. Hackfeld & Co.

The departures have been the brig W. H. Meyer, for San Francisco, dispatched by C. Brewer & Co. with a full cargo of island produce; the Am. barks Rainier and James Cheney, in ballast, for Puget ports, and the steamer City of New York for Auckland and Sydney.

The steamer Pioneer, en route for Hongkong, is now undergoing fully this, and may be looked for at any hour.

Balky Horses.

MR. EDITOR:—If you have balky horses it is your own fault, and not the horses; for if they do not pull true there is some cause for it, and if you remove the cause the effect will cease. The best and safest way to break a horse is to hitch him up with one already broken to harness; the break business is a humbug.

We will suppose you have a broken and an unbroken one hitched up together; don't put a rope on his fore-leg to throw him on his knees and frighten him.

When your horse balks he is excited and does not know what to do. Stop him for a few minutes; let him become calm, and as soon as he is over his excitement he will, in nine cases out of ten, pull at the word. Whipping and slashing and swearing only make the matter worse. After you have gentled him awhile, and his excitement has cooled, take him by the bits; turn him each way a few times as far as you can; caress him, soothe him, encourage him, then step before the balky one and let the other start first; then you can take them anywhere you wish.

A balky horse is always high-spirited, and starts quick; half the pull is over before the other starts; by standing before him the other starts first.

By close application to this rule you can make any horse pull, when you find you have taught him to start well, and pull, hitch him to an empty wagon and let him draw it around awhile on level ground; then put on a little load and increase it gradually, caressing him as before, and in a short while you will have a good work horse, provided you have patience, and can control your temper. CARADOC.

☞ Our thanks are due to the Merchants' Exchange, San Francisco, and to Purser Beardsly for full files of late papers.

NO RAIN YET.—We are still denied the boon of the copious rains we had hoped to receive, from all the atmospheric signs for the past week. With such disappointments flesh is heir to, and they must be borne with equanimity. After all, we of Hawaii nei, are not as badly off as the people of other regions of whose condition we learn from our exchanges. Since the above was in type, a copious shower fell during last night.

We see it stated in the Fiji papers, which came to hand by the Tenimalia, that the French Government contemplates the establishment of another French Courier Station in the Pacific. The location seems to be the New Hebrides, in connection with their Colonies in New Caledonia. The advantages that are likely to occur to France from the acquisition of these fertile Islands are set forth in an article in the "La Liberte Coloniale." The article says: "Whilst England takes possession of the Transvaal, and Egypt places herself more and more under her dominion, and the possession of Fiji secures to her an important strategic point in the Pacific, it would be altogether impolitic on our part not to increase as much as possible our own Colonial possessions." From this it would seem as if France was in earnest in this matter, and if in earnest, we see no good reason why she may not at no distant day complete her arrangements to acquire what she desires, especially as there does not seem to be any serious opposition from any quarter to such acquisition.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

☞ The steamer City of New York sailed last evening at 8 o'clock for Auckland and Sydney.

☞ The foundation for a coral warehouse has just been laid marks of the new Steamer wharf. This, when completed, will be of great convenience to shippers.

TOO LATE.—We regret that an article received from the Rev. Bishop Willis, came too late for our paper this week. We will take pleasure in publishing it next week, however.

☞ Among the arrivals by the steamer City of New York, yesterday, from San Francisco, were Major Wodehouse, H. B. M's. Commissioner; Mons. Perret, of the French Consulate, and J. H. Coney, Esq.

☞ The steamer Likelike will leave this port for Nawiliwili, Kauai, on Friday next, at 5 P. M., returning Sunday forenoon. On Monday, April 1, the steamer will go to windward, making the circuit of Hawaii.

☞ We call attention to the advertisement of T. H. Davies, Esq., in another column, of a fine selection of English goods, now landing in fine order from the British bark Dovenby, from Liverpool, and suited to the wants of residents of these Islands.

☞ We learn that Mr. Edward MacDonnell, formerly connected with the Commercial Advertiser of this city, contemplates accompanying the expedition now being fitted out under Professor Nordenskjold, destined for the Arctic regions. The expedition starts from Sweden in June next.

FOREST FIRES—are still burning on these Islands, consuming large quantities of valuable timber. This is a calamity which should be arrested at any expense. The denudation of the mountains of their forest trees will result in a scarcity of water in the future, which may bring wide-spread disaster and suffering to the people.

☞ We understand that by the City of New York, which arrived yesterday, Mons. Ballieu, received his appointment, from the French Government, as Consul General for Melbourne, Australia, vice Count de Castelnau, resigned. The many friends of Mons. Ballieu, in Honolulu, will congratulate him on this mark of distinction by his Government. He will leave for France by the next steamer.

THE OLD STEAMER KILAUEA.—This old well-tried and faithful servant of the people of the Hawaiian Islands for twenty or more years, will be offered for sale to the highest bidder, by Mr. E. P. Adams, on Thursday next, at 12 o'clock M. How many reminiscences cluster around the old craft, which for so long a period has buffetted the waves of the majestic Pacific around the Hawaiian Group, carrying thousands of human beings and immense quantities of valuable freight! What a tale the old vessel could tell could she speak; of the many dangers encountered in those seas, and the strange scenes enacted on board, by many yet living, but by far more who have passed away! And now, this faithful servant of the people, like many a good man, having passed the period of usefulness is placed aside to make room for others younger and fresher, and more suited to contend against adverse winds, tides and tempests. She may be sold and broken up by her purchaser, and thus pass out of sight; but the name of the old "Kilauea," will linger in the memories of hosts of the inhabitants of Hawaii nei, who loved the old craft for her sturdy and faithful service amidst storm and wanaline, and who will cherish her memory as the pioneer steamship of the group.

THE ROYAL HAWAIIAN THEATRE.—On Monday Evening Mr. John Jack, with Miss Annie Firmin, and Miss Lizzie Ingles closed their engagement, which has run throughout the past month. These charming dramatists have offered our people a large amount of amusement during their stay, and will carry with them, no matter where they go, the respect of the play-going portion of the people of Honolulu at least. Mr. Jack is a first-class actor in any role he selects, always up to the high mark of a finished artist, who renders his part with skill, judgment and artistic taste. In Falstaff, Mr. Jack is inimitable. Miss Annie Firmin, is an actress of wonderful versatility and sprightliness, who labors without ceasing to please, and always succeeds. Miss Lizzie Ingles is an actress of first-class qualifications, who does her part with the ease and grace of a finished artist; although she did not play any leading parts during the late engagement, yet it was plain to all, that she possesses the talent and ability requisite to qualify her for much higher and important positions in the dramatic persona. To a full, commanding and graceful figure, she unites a clear enunciation, that gives satisfaction to the audience; a qualification so rare, as it is requisite even among actors and actresses. We have neither time nor space to give a more extended notice of Mr. Jack and his assistants. Mr. Jack and Miss Firmin left last evening in the steamer for Australia. Miss Ingles we understand returns to San Francisco. We part with these charming people with real regret, and wish them health, prosperity and happiness, wherever they go.

War and Commerce.

In the London Times, of December 21, 1876, we find an article, which by reason of its statistical as well as political importance, we feel that its republication here will shed light upon the commercial relations of Japan with the rest of the world of great moment. From the geographical location of the Hawaiian Islands, and their direct intercourse with Japan, the statements in the following article derive more than ordinary significance, and should be read by our people so that they may understand the commercial advantages which must necessarily accrue to them if properly handled. The statistics in the article may be relied upon as correct, coming, as they do, from a high source, and delivered before an audience where no such thing as clap-trap would be tolerated. England is essentially a commercial nation, and her people are always alive to every new avenue that presents itself of enlarging her trade and commerce, and thus infusing new life blood into the nation. The opening up of Japan, as a great agricultural and commercial country, was an epoch in the history of the world of the utmost importance, and for this, the world is indebted to the intelligence and enterprise of the United States. It would be unfair not to note in this connection the valuable aid contributed by the Christian missionaries, who at an early date in the advent of Christianity in Japan, took their lives in their hands and went forth to a country where it was almost certain death to foreigners to go, but who under the inspiration of a well-grounded faith in their work, put aside with heroic courage all fear of personal safety, and pressed forward to plant the cross among the heathen, trusting in the arm of Jehovah to complete the work. Thus by the united efforts of Christianity and commerce, the world has had opened to it a great country, whose history can be traced back for 1,337 years, with a teeming population of hardy, intelligent and industrious people, capable of adding immensely to the markets of the world the richest stores of a country heretofore hidden away in a corner of the earth, entrance to which was denied by the exclusiveness of ignorance and dread of contact with the civilized nations of the world. It is a noticeable fact that the Japanese, have far outstripped their neighbors, the Chinese, in the facilities afforded to outside nations to engage in commercial intercourse, and that by this very policy they have gained an advantage which has accelerated their national progress in a corresponding ratio. It is to these facts we would point our readers, as they are set forth in the following article:

The fourth and last of a series of free public lectures on War and Commerce, delivered under the auspices of the Trades Guild of Learning, of which Lord Granville is the president, was given at the Chelsea Vestry-hall. The lecturer was Mr. B. Stuart Faue, the secretary of the Japanese Legation, and the subject "British Relations with Japan." The lecturer pointed out on a map that Japan had a geographical resemblance to the British Isles, and the climate of the two countries were not dissimilar, the population was about the same as the population of the British isles, and the people had qualities in common. He spoke of its ancient history, which he traced back 2,537 years, and the present Mikado was the 1534 of his race. The treaty concluded in 1858 between Great Britain and Japan was excellent as a temporary arrangement, but he thought that it should now be revised on a more equitable basis to the advantage of both countries. In 1858 Consular jurisdiction was a necessity, and its partial continuance was still required; but it was unfair for this country still to insist upon the tariff consented to in 1858 by the Japanese. The Japanese at present could not make changes; the British could not freely. In 1858 the British charged an important duty on tea amounting to 150 per cent. on its cost, and still maintained a duty equal to 50 per cent. on the cost, the tea exported in 1875 from Japan being valued at over $7,000,000, or upwards of one-third of the total exports from that country; while on the British imports to Japan the Japanese could only charge 5 per cent. With respect to the murders which formerly occurred of foreigners, the lecturer declared that these arose from the desire of the feudal lords to create difficulty and bring about the fall of the Tycoonate. After dealing with the history of the relations of Great Britain with Japan, he spoke of the great progress the country had made of late years, as shown in Consular reports, and he stated his opinion that the country would be opened no more to foreign trade as soon as by a proper revision of existing arrangements it could safely be accomplished. He advocated, on the part of Great Britain, a policy of conciliation which would inspire confidence, and urged that it would be wise on the part of this country, seeing that the great Asian problem would soon have to be faced to make friends instead of enemies among the Eastern nations.
