The Released Charleston Prisoners—General Seymour's Experiences.

[From the Troy Times, August 11.]

General Seymour, recently exchanged at Charleston with other federal officers, arrived in Troy last evening, and left this morning for Williamstown, Mass., where he awaits orders from Washington. Gen. S. is quite feeble from the effects of confinement and insufficient food. Up to the period when he was transferred to Charleston, he suffered great hardships, and was offered hardly sufficient food to maintain life. On the way from Richmond to Charleston, himself and associates were subjected to the most outrageous indignities, and were often confined in common jails, along with the worst felons. At Charleston, although they were nominally placed under fire, they were decently treated. During the six weeks he was there, only one shell came near them, and that did no damage. The city is badly cut up by the firing from our batteries, and as many as fifty shells a day are hurled from the secession batteries. Buildings on all sides are torn to pieces and the damage is very great. From the wreck of matter produced by our firing, it would seem that there will not be much of Charleston left if the shelling is continued as at present. General Seymour is in good spirits, confident that we are making steady progress in reducing the rebellion, and holding fast to the faith that we shall destroy it altogether. General Seymour was stationed at Charleston some two or three years before the war commenced. He, therefore, had many influential acquaintances there, and to them he was indebted for generous courtesies during his involuntary stay among them. He conversed with them freely about the war. He told them the North would never yield; that the determination of the people was to wipe out the rebellion and save the Union no matter what sacrifices the great work should involve. Their chief hope was based upon a political reaction in the loyal States, by which a peace democrat should be elected to succeed Mr. Lincoln as President. He told them that expect was not likely to occur; but if it did, it would be the result of a monstrous deception practised upon the people, and they would never submit to such a peace as the South required; there would be general revolution and chaos first. When the intelligence came that President Lincoln had made a call for "five hundred thousand more," they were much depressed, and manifested unmistakable indications of disheartenment. We have plenty yet to press right onward against the cohorts of treason, and scare not, and the rebellion will inevitably collapse, and that much sooner than many persons believe.

The Loss of the Propeller Racine.

BUFFALO, August 12, 1864.

The propeller Racine, owned by the Western Transportation Company, bound for Buffalo, took fire on Wednesday, about eighteen miles from Dealtown, on the north shore of Lake Erie. Ten of the crew were lost in the rush for the small boats. The propeller Avon towed the burning vessel to land, about eight miles from Rondeau, where she was scuttled and sunk. She burned to the water line. Her cargo will be saved, in good condition. The vessel was insured in the Columbia Insurance Company of New York for seventy-five thousand dollars. The Avon took the surviving passengers and crew to Port Stanley.
