Songs of Birds.

(From Good Words.)

The skylark's song: "Arise, arise!
Oh, love glad wings, awake the sky!
Oh, on, above, all light is there;
Pierce the faint clouds and know the skies,
Oh, listener! oh deep, endless height!
Oh, marvelous sun!
Oh, ecstasy of upward flight!
I mount! I mount! Oh skies! oh sun!"

The linnet's song: "Oh joy of spring!
Oh white surprise of life! And flowers
Wake in the brother April hours,
And wonder, and are fair, and bring
New promises of new joy to be:
Oh hope! oh New!
Oh blossoms breaking on the tree!
I live! Oh day! oh happy New!"

The nightingale's song: "The flowers go dead,
Week flowers that die for heat or cold,
That die ere even spring verge cold;
And while the few hours that day is spread
The calm gray shadows chase the noon,
Night comes, and dark,
The stillness, and the pathed moon,
Oh stillness! and all long, cool dusk!"

The owl's song: "Waste no vain breath
On dead hope, joys that fade from earth,
Save with of lamentation or of death,
For all things are a part of death;
Save woe, that weaves walls death to die,
Spring has no graves;
On, with those who are the grass to lie,
Oh slumbrous years! oh smooth new graves!"

The song of the street nightingale,
"Who all knows and knows not, knows
The secret of all joys and woes,
And all the unloving cares your pale,
And little into the day break gleam,
Her magical song
Meets great and gladness in a dream,
She calls not sorrow nor rejoice.

She sings: "Heart, rest thee and be free,
Float thyself on the unhindering wind;
Leave the dear pain of life behind;
Loosed heart, forget thou art, and be,
Oh pain! oh joy or life oh love!
My heart is thee.
Oh, roses of the noon! oh stars above!
Dear, wanted, still with me; I am thee."

AUGUSTA WEBSTER.

Miscellaneous.

The revenue of India at the present time is 252,000,000.

Mr. Henry M. Stanley, who has been dangerously ill in Africa—he was thought at one time to be dying—has now fully recovered.

Mr. Gladstone is now, it is said, astonishing his friends by appearing in eye-glasses. They are of the smallest sort, with large black horn rims and a large black cord to match.

Miss Margaret Hicks, a young lady now living at Syracuse, is an accomplished architect. She took the civil engineer course at Cornell University and afterward studied her art for three years in Europe.

Lecture upon the Rhinoceros.—Professor: "I must beg you to give me your undivided attention. It is absolutely impossible that you can form a true idea of this hideous animal unless you keep your eyes fixed on me."

Mrs. Bayard Taylor is about to erect at Longwood to her lamented husband's memory a monument in the shape of a circular Greek altar. It is to bear on the top a lamp with a flame, and on the round a bronze bas-relief panel.

Ex-President Hayes has a farm near Bismarck, Dakota, which he obtained at from 60 to 75 cents an acre. It is now worth $20 an acre, and it is so rich that Mr. Hayes repaid from his 500 acres of wheat last year a profit of $15,000.

The Scotch definition of metaphysics is, after all, not a bad one. "Two men are talking together. He that's listening thinks he what he that's speaking means; and he that's speaking thinks ken what he means himself—that's metaphysics."—Lowlie Glide.

A physician says: "It is healthiest to eat a melon right in the field when it is picked." Lime Kiln Clubman writes us that this is false. The healthiest way is to run and not stop to eat it till you're sure the farmer has called in his dog and given up his pursuit.

Mr. Frank Punch, of Sydney, has offered a prize of £300 to be rowed for in September next year on the Parramatta River, and open to the world. The prize will be increased to £500 on condition of there being not less than two competitors from England and two from America.

"Rackfat," head-man of the Saltcant Indians, made an elaborate speech the other day to the Marquis of Lorne and presented that nobleman with a complete and much ornamented Indian dress. In return, the Marquis gave "Rackfat" a Waltham watch, which greatly delighted the red man.

Among extraordinary measures adopted by the Turkish Government against a recent grasshopper invasion was an order suspending all other business for three days at Angora, and requiring the people to march to the fields and catch, kill and deliver to the officials about fifty pounds of the destroying insects for each individual.

The late Marie Clementine Francisca Josephine, Archduchess of Austria, and sister-in-law of Napoleon I., was a woman of great natural gifts, well read, a skillful artist, and the possessor of a memory stored with reminiscences of remarkable men and events. It was to her that the education of the poor little Duke of Reichstadt was intrusted.

Dr. McCosh says that at Leadville he was wondering how he might go down a mine, when a gentleman in workman's dress grasped his hand, told him he had once been a Princeton student, and led the way down his own mine; and before the Doctor departed his new friend volunteered to create a fellowship at Princeton.

Queen Victoria shows in many ways a real reverence for her far-off predecessors and their kin. She has, for example, just presented a stained glass window to a Bury St. Edmunds church to the memory of Mary Tudor, that daughter of Henry VII. who married first Louis XII. of France, and afterward Brandon, Duke of Suffolk.

Sir Stafford Northcote believes in the virtues of political songs. "There was a wise man of old," he wrote the other day, "who said 'Give me the making of the people's songs, and I will give you the making of their laws.' I certainly accept the maxim so far as to believe that good songs will do a great deal more than speeches."

The Sultan is described as growing morbid in his fears for his personal safety. He drove out twice the other day to a mosque, and on each occasion the route was changed at the last moment. He seems disposed to become a hermit. He no longer receives foreign diplomats to the palace, and audiences are obtained with great difficulty. The Spanish Ambassador had to wait forty days for an interview, and General Wallace more than a month.

The steamer Proteus, owned by Mr. James Stewart, member of Parliament for Greenock, arrived at St. John's, Newfoundland, September 11th, from Lady Franklin Bay, having successfully landed the American Arctic Expedition on the 11th ult. The Proteus brings back the English Arctic mail deposited on Littleton Island in 1876. Last winter was very mild, and the ship could have penetrated farther north, there being open water as far as the eye could reach.

The place selected for the grave of the late President is at the top of the most commanding knoll in the cemetery. Below it lie two ornamental lakes of considerable size, and on all sides, except the north, stand the marble and granite monuments of the dead. Northward in the distance stretching along the horizon on either hand for twenty miles can be seen the waters of Lake Erie. The selection of this site was made by the trustees of the cemetery subject to Mrs. Garfield's approval.

While a young lady of Jamestown was bathing in Chautauqua Lake the other day, an impertinent turtle seized her by the ear. Her screams brought friends to her assistance, or she would certainly have been drowned; but the turtle's grip was like a bulldog's, and after its head had been cut off it took ten minutes to pry the jaws apart. It was a cruel experience for the young lady of Jamestown, but without these little incidents of summer leisure, correspondence from seaside, lake and mountain would not be one-half so picturesque.

Among the rare and beautiful things with which General Grant's new home in New York City is to be filled as a sideboard of magnificent curve, presented to him by Mexico. Shortly after the General became President Mexico gave him a beautiful service of silver. This the General transferred to his wife, as the President could not accept such a gift. This silver, which has never yet been used, is now to be unpacked. Mrs. Grant is occupied at present in furnishing her new home. Colonel and Mrs. Frederick Grant will, it is reported, live with their father and mother. Mr. and Mrs. Sartoris will shortly arrive in New York with their three children, and will spend the winter there.

Mr. Gladstone is now in excellent health. "I can eat a good dinner and sleep all through the night," he said to a friend not long ago, "and as long as that goes on I shall be able to do what more work is apprehended for me." His capacious mind, says the Cardiff Times, has no room for exact knowledge of the precise order in which wines should accompany varied dishes. He drinks very little, and sees at all the early part of his dinner. As the meal advances, the watchful butler filling up the glasses in due order, the Premier accumulates at the right hand of his plate a varied cellar of choice vintages. Then is seen a spectacle which horrifies the careful diner-out. Feeling no inclination for a glass of wine, Mr. Gladstone will reach out his hand and take the first it happens to touch. After a further bout of eating or talking, both accomplished with tremendous energy, he again feels thirsty, and once more indiscriminately helps himself from whatever may come nearest. He is no drinker, even in the moderate sense of a man who takes and enjoys his glass of wine. Probably if the multiform glasses at his right were filled with water, he would drink them off with precisely the same gusto as he takes and mixes the choicest of wines.
