SPECIAL NOTICE!

HAVING EMPLOYED FIRST-CLASS PIANO TUNER

To tie Pianos and Organs, Tasteful and Regulating connected with OUR NEW MUSIC STORE, we propose to give to every one that patronizes us the full value of their money. We need only call to our with some for design to every year.

HONOLULU, MARCH 8th, 1882.
Will pay on demand FIVE DOLLARS to any one who have had their Piano Tuned by my Tuner and are dissatisfied with his work.
GEO. F. WELLS.
$5.00.

We Import none but First Class Pianos!
and ORGANS, of which we have always on hand a large stock. We must have the Best of Workers to take charge of our Tuning and repairing.

Mr. EDWARD LYCAN, who has had charge of this department for the last year, has given general satisfaction, so far as we can learn. During the year ending March 1st, 1882, we have Tuned Seventy-three Pianos: Re-Strung Twenty; Refitted Two, and Repolished One. In all this amount of work, it we have taken one dollar for which we have not given full value, we are now ready to return the money.
Mr. E. LYCAN has had many years experience in large cities in the States, where he has learned as well as the latest improvements in Scales, Sounding Boards, Bridges, Actions, Keys, Pedals, &c., which improvements are not generally known to Tuners in the Kingdom, we have four Pianos of which are under his care at the present time.

The Latest and Most Approved Method of Tuning And Repolishing.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 5, 1882.

London Letter.

LONDON, February 28th, 1882.

EDITOR GAZETTE: A few evenings ago a friend took me to a meeting of the Royal Society of Literature, one of the oldest and most respectable societies in London. Her Majesty the Queen is the only lady privileged to be a member thereof. Prince Albert was one and Prince Leopold has been elected. Ladies may, however, attend as visitors. We heard a paper read by Sir Collingwood (General) Dickson on Dr. Johannes Faustus. It was written to prove that the philosopher who bought his learning and experience at the price of his soul was an historical personage; his death being mentioned by Gesner, who compares him to Paracelsus. Luther also refers to him in his "Table talk." The oldest account of him goes back to 1587, and states that he was born at Roda near Weimar. A very witty discussion on Mephistopheles followed in which Sir Patrick de Colquhoun who was in the chair took a very amusing and clever part. Some of the speakers evidently counted the idea of a personal devil as a superstition with others not worthy to survive the dark middle ages. Others bravely defended the faith which makes the evil one a real and terrible enemy of our race, from whom the Master taught us to pray, we might be delivered. It was shown too how innate in human nature was the belief in the "powers of darkness" as is seen in myths and old traditions—The wars of the Gods and the Titans—the "war in heaven" etc., etc.,—an amusing anecdote was told by Sir Patrick as an instance of how ineradicable was the popular belief in Satan even in the most infidel time of French history. A story was current to the effect that Cuvier, the distinguished naturalist having died, the devil, with his orthodox appurtenances of horns, hoofs and tail, appeared before him, to devour him, as Dante represents his doing to Judas Iscariot, Brutus and Cassius. Cuvier looked calmly and critically up at the startling apparition. "Hein?" he observed disdainfully, summing up the whole: "hoofs, tail and horns! graminivore, je te defie" (Graminivorous I defy thee.) It was interesting to note the election of new members by the test of a great old fashioned ballot box which was passed round. One of the candidates was Dr. Lightfoot, the Bishop of Durham. After the box had gone half way, some one remembered that being a Peer of the realm he was entitled to membership without the test of the ballot. Another candidate was less fortunate, the box returning, he was shown to have been blackballed, which proved the proceeding not to be a mere formality. At the close of the meeting, we partook of tea, coffee and some pleasant chat in the committee room.

Mr. Burgess of Moore and Burgess,—St. James Hall minstrels—has a collection of all Ruskin's writings which is valued at £15,000. One volume of Modern Painters alone now fetches £35, as there will be no new edition published. Mr. Burgess has every single article and scrap written by Mr. Ruskin—lately he cut up twenty-eight volumes to get some of his writings which had never been reprinted. People already speak pityingly of Thomas Carlyle, will Mr. Ruskin's and Mr. Robert Browning's worshippers be equally faithless to their heroes? Just now there seems rather too much adulation paid to some of our leading spirits, witness the Browning Society which meets weekly, under distinguished patronage, to delve the deep hidden gems of their master and to try to make each other understand his obscurities. Surely they would do better, as he is still in the land of the living, to pay him well to be "his own interpreter" and make it all plain right now.

One of our papers states that O. K. alias Madame de Novikoff has been "scratched," a way of putting the fact that she has fallen into disgrace with the powers who have employed her and has been recalled to Russia. On the 6th inst she was one of the guests at Mr. Gladstone's official dinner. She has labored in some of her writings to prove that Siberia is not at all a disagreeable place of residence. It is to be hoped she will not be sent to prove the fact by experience. "Can it be worth while," asks the Daily News, "for a lady to change the Eastern Policy of England, and, after all, incur the displeasure of such ferocious employers as those of the Russian Empire, who, according to Mr. Yawkins, flogged a lovely Russian lady, actually knouting her, in her own back drawing room, in London. Let us hope that our own women will be content if the learned professions are thrown open to them, leaving the delicate duties of Government spy to the other-boiled sex." Many will rejoice to hear that Harvard University has accepted the large legacy which was lately left on condition that the advantages of its Medical College be thrown open to women. A great victory this for our female doctors.

Mrs Langtry receives eighty pounds a week for playing in "Ours," at The Haymarket. Mr. Hollingshead offered her one hundred pounds per week to play at the Gaiety, but she declined that, as it was only to be a six weeks engagement, D'Oiley Carte also offered her £100 per week in America. She looks handsome, and moves and speaks like a woman who has been in well bred society; and that is all that can be said. Mr. Saker, her Manager, has arranged a long provincial tour for her, but no "return visits" are likely to be made. People are anxious to see the much vaunted beauty; but have curiosity and not dramatic interest will fill the houses. The Prince of Wales dined lately with the Savage Club at the early hour of five, in order to enable its numerous members of the theatrical profession to be present. The dinner was at Willis's rooms. When the actors went to their evening duties His Royal Highness adjourned with the rest to the club rooms, and he must have enjoyed himself and felt anything but bored, for he spent altogether seven hours with the Savages in their den, which is adorned with scalps, clubs and other barbarous trophies. Last Sunday, thirty of their number, including Mr. Toole, Mr. Lionel Brough and Mr. Irving, dined with the Prince at Marlborough house. He has come out lately rather strongly as a patron of the drama. Let us pray that he may strengthen the hands of its purest and best friends, rather than the reverse; and then he may enjoy himself amongst actors and actresses with a good conscience. A committee has lately been formed with a view towards establishing a school of dramatic art which shall tend to raise the intellectual standard of students for the stage. Some very distinguished and respectable names are on its list, and its promoters aim at making the theatrical profession more desirable than it has hitherto been for girls of respectable family, who have no vocation for teaching, or other calling open to well conducted young women.

An amusing little story was told to a friend of mine by one of the masters at Eton. The eldest son of the Duke of Teck has just been sent there. Before his arrival the house master to whom there was going told the assembled boys they were to be honored by the companionship of the little Teck and hoped they would show they were gentlemen etc. Eton boys detest snobbishness, so they said at "they'd got to live up to him they'd call him 'The Teapot,'" and poor little Teck has been christened a nickname which will cling to him long enough.

Art is long and alas accidents will happen. A picture which Holman Hunt has been busy for the last five years, part of which he painted in Jerusalem, has just been so much injured through an accident to its canvas, that he has to begin afresh entirely. When his "Christ in the Temple" was exhibiting in Bond street, the hangings near the picture took fire. A lady present showed her presence of mind, generosity, and appreciation of his art by instantly—whilst men ran here and there,—tearing off her costly Indian shawl and with it covering the painting. Her shawl was ruined but the picture was uninjured. There was much said afterwards about the danger it had escaped, but the lady's generous sacrifice was unnoted. And yet Sir Walter Raleigh and his cloak have been immortalized for much less.

Christina Nilsson, whose husband is now in a lunatic asylum, owing to the blow caused by his recent loss of fortune, is bravely going to work again in the States. She has the admiration and sympathy of all who know her, and she deserves it. She still often shows an old-fashioned daguerreotype of herself, her father, and the dancing bear as they appeared at the village fairs in her childhood, and the little violin, on which she played there is still carefully treasured as a nice case and its history told with honest pride. O.

In a recent issue, the Graphic discusses that important problem, "The Cost of Producing Electric Light," as follows: "Disappointing, but scarcely surprising, would it be if the electric light should, after all, prove to be scarcely more than an expensive and pleasing toy, and inapplicable to ordinary and cheap uses. It seems there is a strong probability that this will be the case. Notwithstanding all of Mr. Edison's promises, we have not yet 'the electric light in our houses.' We have it in some of the squares, and in some of the hotels and large halls and stores, but this is about all. Meanwhile, the attempt to light the streets of Liverpool by electricity is to be discontinued. The contract between the Edinburgh Town Council and the Anglo-American Brush Company for the lighting of Princess street and the bridges with the electric light has been ended, and there is everywhere manifest a disposition to fall back upon gas." Referring to the success of electric lighting abroad, however, the following is of interest: The first annual meeting of the Anglo-American Brush Electric Light Company was held in London, January 26, as noted by the Pall Mall Gazette. From the annual report it appeared that the company began business December, 1880. The net profit has been $674,825, $497,500 of which derived from the sale of rights and $177,325 from manufactures. Referring to the danger of electric lighting, the chairman of the meeting said he "did not blink at the fact that there were dangers." A dividend of 12½ per cent. was declared on the year's business.

The new Eddystone lighthouse was successfully lit for the first time on Friday, Feb. 3d.

Little's non-poisonous, and non-corrosive
Disinfectant and Sheep Dip.
AS A DISINFECTANT
and deodorizer for household and hospital use this valuable preparation, has all the good qualities of carbolic acid, without its disadvantages, being non-poisonous, and of pleasant odour. As an antiseptic, insecticide, and lotion for wounds &c., in all instances it will be found most efficacious.
AS A SHEEP DIP
for dipping or hand dressing, as a remedy for scab or blue fly, it is especially valuable, and is largely used in California, the Australian Colonies and South America.
Instead of checking it promotes the growth of wool, and adds to the appearance and quality of the fleece.
Descriptive circulars and directions for use will be furnished on application to
