Ralph Waldo Emerson.

We wind now use with mature comprehension
Man sows and reaps and harvests.
He walked in the courts by the side of kings
And taught the lessons that he gathered there—
The temple built with hands seems poor to him who has felt
The sense of that divine, transcendent will
Where spring awakes, and all things move
To love; and hope and joy are in the air.
He has wrought more than one, and the fruit is here.
And the stars that he saw from his cradle by night
Looking down on us, their steadfast beam of love
To look him onward with their unerring light—
So, the Ever knows what gains he wrought through
What heavenly grace opened on his sight.

Leslie Gilbert in Frazier.

Miscellaneous.

Beauty is a good letter of introduction.

For those who use bell eyes in shooting, an English gentleman has invented a two-eyed sight glass.

Sergeant Mason's counsel, who recently visited him in the Albany Penitentiary, says he looked badly and felt discouraged.

The New York Prohibition convention, which met in Rochester, nominated a full State ticket, headed by Professor A. A. Hopkins for Governor.

The liquor question in the town of Paxton, Ill., was settled by a popular vote to put the matter of licensing into the hands of a women's Christian Temperance Union. That settled it.

Cardinal Manning has just entered upon his 78th year. His health is still vigorous. On the day following his recent birthday he preached two sermons and officiated in three different churches.

Count de Lagrange, who recently sold his famous stud at Dangu, was the first foreigner who won over the English Derby. For the first seven years of his turf life the Count was in partnership with Baron Nivière.

It was a saying of Oliver Wendell Holmes, that in every dialogue between two persons, there were in reality six present—two as they were, such as he believed himself to be, and each as he appeared to the other. It would not be difficult to add two more, and to say that there were present such as he himself to represent himself to his neighbor.

The running of a railroad train on Sunday is not a violation of the law against doing business on the Sabbath day, in the opinion of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky, in the Commonwealth vs. The Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, decided in May. The court said that the running of the train was a work of necessity.

One of the most remarkable events in modern English history is the fact of a Hindoo Prince becoming an active candidate for election as a member of Parliament at a special election in one of the English districts. As there seems to be a chance of success, the precedent is a most important one, and points out a way in which the natives of India may indirectly succeed in obtaining a voice and representation in Parliament.

A Vienna newspaper publishes a story in effect that the Emperor and Empress of Russia were secretly crowned during their recent visit to Moscow. If the Emperor survives till the public coronation, the secret ceremony will be considered void. In the event of his death it will be made public, so as to avoid any difficulty in proclaiming the Czarowitz Alexander as the lawful successor of the crowned monarch.

Vanderbilt and Gould are counted as wealthy men, but their operations will have to yield many fold before they keep pace with the increase of the Duke of Westminster's London property. The latter proves the oft-repeated assertion that nothing is so sure to increase in value as well-selected real estate. The growth of London has been extraordinary, and its present advance is slow and wealth is marvelous, but this increase is no more astonishing than that of New York, Chicago or San Francisco. The solid millionaires of the twentieth century in the United States will not be the speculators, but the owners of valuable real estate in the great cities.

The power of imagination has been well tested at Erie, Pa. Mrs. E. Grymes, who had been bed-ridden from a spinal disease for many years, decided to try the prayer cure. Assembling her relatives and friends, she bade them stand still and behold the salvation of God. At six minutes past eight o'clock the invalid from the bottom part from which she had not risen for three years, and walked in their midst a well woman. Two sceptical sisters were immediately converted and fell upon their knees, asking forgiveness for their unbelief. It happened, however, that the doctor's arrangements for the proper concerted, and no progress had been made.

A Philadelphia artist who saw Arabi in Alexandria last winter drew the sketch of his personal appearance: "A tall, heavy-faced man, sullen, swarthy, with only a single intelligent eye to soften the general hardness of expression, and a black moustache to quite a not particularly finely curved mouth. His legs are unattractive in his face. The subjugating looks too frail for the rest of the body. He is a bulky man, not young or Falstaffian in girth, but a broad, thick-headed fellow, built on the lobster pattern. Take blue from his heavy beard to his spindle legs, Arabi Pasha reminds one more of a cigar than of the agreeable and pleasant-faced gentleman one meets among the Arabs and Egyptians."

Shortly after the Queen's departure for Balmoral, an inquisitive American newspaper correspondent in London asked Mr. Lowell, the American Minister, to get her a ticket to Her Majesty's private apartments at Windsor. "What for?" demanded he; "you don't want to say you would write a description of her upholstery?" The correspondent admitted that such was her intention, "because people are always interested in such things." "Well," said Mr. Lowell, with flashing eyes, "I would not write such things to please people. I would starve first. No, I will not get you a ticket to the Queen's private apartments. I do not believe in such things. Write about the things you see in the streets, write about anything or everything; but leave upholstery and furniture alone."

The recent extensive labor disturbances in the United States, those which have taken place and which are imminent in Great Britain together with strikes among various trades organizations in France, constitute quite a wave of discontented labor. But there are centuries still to hear from. It appears that the influence has reach beyond the Pyrenees, for on the 24th, and 26th of this month the second congress of Spanish workmen to have been held in Seville alluded by advance compiler to the industrial situation in Spain as follows: "Notwithstanding the great labor crisis which exists in many districts, and the large number on strike and now being supported by the different branches, we hope that all will be present at the forthcoming congress, which will be without doubt the greatest labor manifestation ever organized by the Spanish working classes.

Mr. Raggi has completed the colossal statue of the Earl of Beaconsfield, for which the noble lord had given sittings but little more than a week before his fatal illness. The statue was sent and approved by Sir Stafford Northcote (the chairman) and Lord Derby, Earl Percy, Lord Barrington, and other members of the memorial committee. The bronze cast will, it is hoped, be finished by November. The head, as may be judged from the marble bust sent by Mr. Raggi to the Royal Academy, is an excellent likeness. The pose is natural and dignified, and the poet's robe in which the sculptor has draped the figure adds much to the generally pleasing effect of the statue as a whole. The figure is 10ft. high, and the pedestal, which is of Portrhead granite, with somewhat more variety of detail than is common in such structures in London, will be rather over 10ft. in height. The statue is to be placed in Parliament-square, facing the Abbey, and on the side of the garden opposite to that on which the figure of Sir Robert Peel stands.

Some idea of the cost of the bombardment of Alexandria on July 11 may be gathered from the report published by the Admiralty of the number of rounds fired by each ship. Every round fired from the four 80-ton guns of the Inflexible cost £22 10s. per gun. The 25-ton guns, of which the Alexandra carries two, the Monarch four, and the Penelope four, cost £7 per round per gun. The 18-ton guns, which the Alexandra carries ten, the Sultan eight the Superb eleven, and the Penelope four, cost five guineas per round per gun. The 12-ton guns, of which the Invincible carries ten, the Monarch two, and the Sultan four, cost £3 15s. per round per gun. The Penelope, which alone carries 9-ton guns, has eight of them, which were discharged at a cost of £2 15s. per round per gun. The Monarch and the Bellerophon each fired one 6½-ton gun, the cost being £1 15s. per round per gun. The Bellerophon and the Superb have two 64-pounders each, the cost of discharging which was 18s. per round per gun. The Penelope carries three 40-pounders, the Monarch two 40-pounders, and the Bellerophon two 40-pounders, the cost of discharging which was 12s. per round per gun. In addition to this there is a sum to be calculated for the firing of the smaller armaments of the Cygnet, Condor and Decoy.
