Beet Sugar in America.

The immense amount of beet sugar raised in Germany and France has caused a considerable interest to be taken in the United States and Canada in the question, why it could not also be raised there. A large amount of money has been invested in America, but at the present time the result has been disastrous failure. The first company started was in Portland, Me. This was fostered by a bounty given by the State, but the cost of running, with the small supply of beets furnished, has resulted in a failure. Another factory was started in Franklin, Mass. This concern was as well equipped as it was possible to be, but after one season's trial the whole thing was sold out at auction and is now run as a woolen mill. Three beet sugar concerns started in Canada. The "Union Sucriere Franco-Canadienne" had the advantage of a considerable amount of French capital, but it collapsed, owing to bad management. Their factory was at Berthiet, Quebec, and the whole plant was sold out by the sheriff. The Pioneer Beet Sugar Company of Coaticooke, Quebec, was not a success the last season, but they have put up a distillery plant, and this may help them to make some money. The Beet Sugar Manufacturing Company at Farnham, Quebec, lost a lot of money their first season in 1881; but they expect to do better this year, as they are increasing their plant so as to refine imported West India sugar. Now, in time, many of the causes of all these failures may be overcome, but the facts are that to-day all of these experiments have resulted in a large loss. Bad management, bad construction, poor supply of beet roots, and costly labor, as compared with France and Germany, have been the causes of those failures. It cannot be said that these failures were from lack of skill or knowledge, as both German and French superintendants, who came from Europe for the purpose were employed. Much bad management was shown in the purchase of the machinery, and the mills were so arranged that their system of generating the steam was of the most expensive kind; instead of using low-cost fuels, the steam generators were so arranged that that only the most costly coal could be made available for steam purposes. This fact alone seems strange when, at the present time, planters in the West Indies are applying the Jarvis system of burning their green bagasse, or wet sugar cane trash, to reduce the cost of making cane sugar. But the principal cause of this failure is the difference of cost of labor between Europe and America. This must be at least fifty per cent, and, until there is a change in this respect, there is no doubt but that the West Indies will supply America with her sugar.

Sarony has the sold right, by purchase, to print Mrs. Langtry's photographs. The demand for them is far ahead of the supply, and he says that he has orders now which will take three months to fill. In his own words, "There never was anything like it.

There is a brewery near Berlin that manufactures every year about 97,000 barrels of beer. All the buildings are connected with electric wires, and the head brewer can sit in his room and there control the whole of the operations of malting, kiln-drying, mashing, cooling fermenting, etc.

HONOLULU, Oct. 17th, 1882.

Mr Beecher's Apostacy.

MR. AND MRS. SPOOPENDYKE DISCUSS THE THEOLOGICAL SITUATION.

(From the Brooklyn Eagle.)

"I see that Mr. Beecher has abandoned the ministry and quit religion altogether," observed Mrs. Spoopendyke, holding up the pattern of a polonaise and wondering if it would come up high enough in the neck. "I suppose the poor man will have to speculate in stocks or write jokes for the Christy minstrels to make a living now; won't he?

"Who's been lending you a circus poster this trip?" demanded Mr. Spoopendyke, springing up like a trunk-lid. "What patent medicine label have you been studying lately? Who says he's quit the ministry? He's only left the Society of Congregational Ministers, because he don't believe exactly as they do."

"That's what I said," argued Mrs. Spoopendyke, laying the pattern on the cloth and beginning to cut it out. "He disagreed with the Congregational religion and said he guessed he'd go away somewhere and let 'em have it to themselves. I don't know what Plymouth Church will do without him though—"

"Do!" ripped Mr. Spoopendyke, "do! it will set a rat trap and catch him again! What d'ye s'pose it will do? Got some idea it will hire out as a cook, washer and ironer; no objection to going a short distance in the country, haven't ye? P'raps you think it will open as a hotel! Well, it won't, and it won't put on a long skirt and a short apron and go howling around as a two-legged lunatic asylum either! Don't I tell ye he has only quit the society of ministers?"

"I didn't suppose they'd hurt him," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, scratching her nose with the scissors and figuring out the allowance for the seams.

"Hurt him!" roared Mr. Spoopendyke, "of course they hurt him! They used to lay him down and walk on him, and they'd sit astride his stomach and play euchre on his chin, till he swallowed the joker, and then they fished for it with umbrellas until they choked him. Don't ye know the difference between a society of ministers and a religion? Can't ye distinguish between a practicing preacher and the Church of God? He's quit the ministers and not the Church! Got a tooth you can stow that idea in?"

"Well, of course, the man had a right to pick his associates, but I understood you to
