The Burial of the Old Flag

... said to be nothing ... Regiment, who regard the ... in which sales of ... quantity than at any ... operations. ... 1783, the soldiers of the Twenty-third Regiment ... in spite of the British army buried with military honors ... Grenadier-Type, the regimental flag, which had ... been to shrink at the battle of Maida.—Harper's Weekly.

Young People.

There is not in all the north country,
Nor yet on the Humber line,
A town with a prouder event than
Newcastle-upon-the-Tyne.
Roman eagles have kept its walls;
Saxon and Dane and Scot
Have left the glamour of noble deeds
With their names on this very spot.
From the reign of William Rufus,
The monarch of every line
Had a grace for royal Newcastle,
The city upon the Tyne.

By the Nun's Gate, and up Pilgrim street,
What pageants have held their way!
But in seventeen hundred and sixty-three
One twenty guns, on a May,
There was a sight in lonely Newcastle,
Oh, that I had been there!
To hear the call of the trumpeters
Thrilling the clear spring air,
To hear the roar of the cannon,
And the drummer's pattering beat,
And the eager hum of the multitude
Waiting upon the street.

Not at noon was a tender look,
And a funeral march was heard;
With arms reversed and muffled drums,
Came the men of the Twenty-third.
And Lorraine, their noble leader, bore
The shreds of a faded flag;
The battle-flag of the regiment,
Shot to a glorious rag;
Shot into shreds upon its staff,
Torn in a hundred fights,
From the battle plains of India
To the old Canadian heights.

There was not an inch of footing left;
How could it find again
Over a faithful regiment
It had never left in vain?
So all, the hands that had carried it
Were cold and stark and stiff,
And for a century's journey
They had not slept in sleep.
They had not slept in sleep, and so
They marched with leader leader
To stand in the ranks of North Hunts, Foot,
Where the Bloody Regiment lies,
With the rear of pagans and men of Hindostan
They had to under the sod.
But it wasn't a tattered rag alone
They buried with leader leader;
It was every faithful companion
That under the flag had died,
Valor, honor, courage and loyalty
That thrilled that mirror throng
Standing bare-headed and silent
As the old flag went along.

So where the grasses had covered it
There was a perfect shade,
And the soldiers, stirred to a noble thought,
Marched proud home again;
The citizens went to their flags and more,
The soldier went to his sister;
The shepherds went to the browsing hills,
And the sailor to the Tyne;
But men and women and children felt
That it had been well to be
Just for an hour or two face to face
With honor and loyalty.—N. A. Rake.

Miscellaneous.

True independence has no difficulty in accepting necessary kindness.—S. P. Hermes.

A fool may have his coat embroidered with gold, but it is a fool's coat still.—Advertiser.

Henry M. Stanley has reached the Congo, with 5000 tons of goods.

Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon is suffering health again, and is only able to preach one sermon each Sunday.

Miss Mary Belle Bartley, who has just become a bride at Staunton, Va., is 13 years and 10 months old.

Miss Mary Dickens, eldest granddaughter of Charles Dickens, aged 19 years, is about to become an actress.

Tyndall says that men and women existed on this earth 50,000,000 years before the date of Adam and Eve.

As the countenance is made beautiful by the soul's shining through it, so the world is beautiful by the shining through it of God.—Jacobi.

Avoid that which you blame others for doing, says one of our wise men. Well, things have come to a pretty pass if a man can't kick his own wife.

Five-cent lectures are given in Philadelphia upon hygienic subjects, such as "What to do until the doctor," and "How to help a man who swears off."

Queen Victoria is a large real estate owner in New York. An advance in rents by her agents has changed the tenants in a large block on Broadway, near Eighteenth street.

If Noah had foreseen the future and killed the two mosquitos which took refuge in the ark, he would have rendered some of the strongest words in our language unnecessary.

A prize type-setting contest took place recently in Berlin, where the winning compositor set 9,415 letters in the course of three hours, an average of about fifty-three words per minute, in ordinary newspaper type.

Mr. Mayer has laid before the French Academy of Sciences a new mode of burial, viz: glass coffins, the air pumped out and filled with antiseptic gas. Thus, he claims, the body could be indefinitely kept uncorrupted.

It is authoritively stated that the Prince of Wales and suite will visit Canada the first week in March, remaining until after the meeting of the Science Association; also visiting the prominent citizens of the United States.

The projected tunnel under the Hudson at New York, upon which nearly 82,000,000 and 28 lives have been wasted, has been abandoned it is reported, the death of Trenor W. Park having discouraged the other stockholders.

The salutatorian at Yale this year, says an exchange, was a German, the valedictorian a Hebrew, and the prize declaimer a Chinaman. But when it comes to real classical culture the native land is there. The pitcher of the Yale Base Ball Club is an American.

Enough money was collected in London to present to each of the 5,381 children in the hospitals and workhouses a Christmas gift in the shape of a toy. On Christmas Day a thousand poor families in the city had their hearts gladdened at the sight of plum pudding and other good things given to them.

A curious experiment is being tried in several corps of the Russian Army. This consists of the introduction of dogs instead of men as sentries. For this duty the wolf dog of the Ural mountains is found most suitable, as this animal will growl at the presence of an intruder instead of barking outright, and thus inciting all the dogs in camp to do likewise.

When Farmer Budge read that a bull painted by Rosa Bonheur sold for $5,000, he remarked to his wife that he didn't see how a coat of paint could so greatly enhance the value of the animal, but that if Rosa wouldn't charge more than $10 he would get her to paint his bull in the Spring. And his economical wife replied that she thought he might paint it himself and save his $10. Too indications are now that the bull will be painted.

Dr. Haley says (American Medical Journal of August 15, 1881) that as a rule a dull, heavy headache, situated over the brows, and accompanied by languor, chilliness and a feeling of general discomfort, with a distaste for food, which sometimes approaches to nausea, can be completely removed in about ten minutes by a two-grain dose of iodide of potassium dissolved in half a wineglassful of water, this being sipped so that the whole quantity may be consumed in about ten minutes.

The veto power on the part of the sovereign exists in England, but has not been exercised for two centuries. It is practically obsolete, and to revive it would be regarded as a dangerous act of usurpation, and almost revolutionary. The Oakland Times thinks it will be better for the United States when this extraordinary power on the part of the President is circumscribed with definite rules, and limited only to the most critical occasions. It might be safer for the people if it did not exist at all.

Fusil oil consists chiefly of amylic alcohol, and although the latter differs very much in taste, smell, and physiological properties from ordinary alcohol, its presence in small quantities in brandy, whiskey, etc., is not easily detected. The estimations of the quantity present was scarcely possible. L. Marquardt, of Hamburg, believes that he has solved this problem. Without entering into the details of the quantative analysis, which is exceedingly tedious, we will only say that his process consists in first extracting the fusil oil with chloroform, washing thoroughly, and then oxidizing the amylic alcohol to valerianic acid by means of bichromate of potash and strong sulphuric acid at eighty-five degrees C. The odor of the acid is easily recognized.

An amusing incident occurred recently at Dover. A bull was, with several others, being driven out of a main street into a lane, when it turned into a chemist's shop, which is situated at the corner. The animal walked straight through the shop, took a survey of the contents, and then passing the end of the counter, approached a large looking-glass which is fixed to a door leading from the shop to the rear of the premises. To the great relief of the proprietor, however, the animal brought up suddenly at this point, and stood admiring himself in the glass for a few minutes, then caressing his duplicate by licking the glass, he backed quietly into the shop, took a sniff at some of the articles lying on the counter, and turned round and walked out into the street again, to the amusement of a large crowd of people who had assembled outside. Curiously enough, no loss in the way of breakages was sustained, the animal passing into and out of the shop and knocking down only one bottle, which it did not break. Twenty years ago the chemist was favored by a similar visit.
