COMMERCIAL.

HONOLULU, JULY 30, 1883.

Business during the week just has displayed signs of lethargy in many lines of trade; a state of things we must be be wondered at considering this is the first commercial season and which certainly affects business generally. The mails from the other islands bring in the usual complaints of crops and when the prevailing season, to all appearances is holding off to continue the good and sensible remunerative condition of the market for the entire year has and a decrease state of trade in, of a considerable, unfavorable.

No vessels have arrived from foreign ports during the week past and but one San Francisco under the Bunting W. Jones is now in our port. The steamer Mariposa, due some days ago, is due to-day or to-morrow (Thursday) from San Francisco with Eastern dates to some the 20th inst., being over six days due.

The departures for San Francisco since our previous review of the W. Gibson, J. G. Kinney and Ella carrying light cargoes of miscellaneous products, the valuation of the same aggregating $22,041.9.

The Mariposa and Alameda will now certainly take all the sugar now in store when they leave for the Coast and the prospects for good freights for a month to come are quite delusive.
