civilization should be spread over the world, we must strive for an abundance of this national health, tough, pliant, and elastic, ready and fit for any good work anywhere.—Boston Post.

By Authority.

SESSION LAWS OF 1884.

AN ACT

To Provide for the Payment of Salaries, Expenses or Courts until the 31st day of August, A. D. 1884.

Be it Enacted by the King and the Legislative Assembly of the Hawaiian Islands, in the Legislature of the Kingdom Assembled:

The Minister of Finance is hereby authorized to continue to pay the salaries of Government officers at the rate appropriated by the Appropriation Bill of 1882-4, the compensation of school teachers, of soldiers and constables, the current expenses of the Bureau of Education, of the Board of Health, the Expenses of the Fire Department, of the Supreme Court and of Circuit Courts, and of witnesses in criminal cases, Government stocks and the interest accruing thereon, the support of prisoners and the expenses of supporting the Insane and the Lepers in the respective Hospitals, dredging Honolulu harbor, repairs of wharves Honolulu, roads and bridges throughout the Kingdom, until the 31st day of August, 1884, unless new appropriations are made before that date.

This Act shall go into effect from and after its approval.

Approved this 1st day of August, A. D. 1884. KALAKAUA, REX.

AN ACT

To Provide Mail Communication between the Hawaiian Islands and the United States of America.

Be it Enacted by the King and the Legislative Assembly of the Hawaiian Islands, in the Legislature of the Kingdom assembled:

Section 1. A subsidy of fifteen hundred ($1,500) dollars for each round trip shall be paid to the Oceanic Steamship Company for carrying the mails between the ports of Honolulu and San Francisco respectively, said mail service to be bi-monthly, upon condition that no increase shall be made from the prices charged for freight and passengers, over and above what has been charged since said Steamship Line commenced their trips between said ports, and this subsidy shall expire on the 31st day of March, 1886.

Section 2. The said mail shall be carried on first-class steam vessels of 2,4 less than nineteen hundred tons register.

Section 3. This Act shall go into effect from and after its passage.

Approved this 15th day of July, A. D. 1884. KALAKAUA, REX.

National Health.

At the recent opening of the Health Exhibition, at London, Sir James Paget, who was called on by the Prince of Wales to make an address, said he would speak only of national health. He had calculated the average annual number of days sickness of each person, during what may be deemed the normal working time of life, that is between 15 and 65 years of age. The average time of sickness among males during the working years was 1,334 weeks—that is, a small fraction more than nine days each in each year—and in females it was a small fraction more. The result was that among males there was a loss of 3,022,576 weeks work in every year, and among females a loss of 20,502,701 weeks. Then we might believe that our whole population between 15 and 65 years old did in each year 20,000,000 weeks work less than they ought to do if it were not for sickness. The bills of mortality told the losses of life, but to estimate rightly the misery of sickness and the losses of all but life that were due to it they needed a far more complete record. Take, for example, such a disease as typhoid fever—its mortality was about 15 per cent., so that if in any one year 4,000 died of it about 25,000 recovered. Of these the average length of illness was, on the authority of Dr. Broadbent, about ten weeks. Here, therefore, from one disease alone and that preventable, we had an annual loss of 250,000 weeks' work, without reckoning what was lost with those who die. The mortality of children under 15 in 1882 was nearly a quarter of a million. What had they cost? If they said only £5 apiece there was more than £2,000,000 thus lost every year. And he might add that we lost largely not only in wealth but in happiness by the death of these poor children. No one who lived among the sick could doubt that a very large proportion of the sickness and loss of work which he saw might have been prevented, or could doubt that in every succeeding generation a larger proportion still might be averted if only all men would strive that it might be so. Of the infectious fevers, small-pox might be rendered nearly harmless by complete and careful vaccination. Typhus and typhoid, scarlet fever and measles, might with proper guards against infection be confined within very narrow limits. So, probably, might whooping-cough and diphtheria. Of the special diseases of artisans there were very few of which the causes might not be almost wholly set aside. Of the accidents to which they were especially liable the greater part by far were due to carelessness. Of the diseases due to bad food and more filth, to intemperance, to immorality in so far as these are self inflicted, they might by self control and virtue be excluded. It could only be a guess, but he was sure it was not a rock-less one, if he said that of all the losses of work of which he had spoken, of all the millions of weeks sadly spent and sadly wasted, a fourth part might have been saved and that household, if people would have it so, a still larger proportion might be saved. Any one who had studied the sources of disease during the last thirty years could tell how and where it had been diminished. What more was wanted? A larger and more practical recognition of the value and happiness of good national health, a wider study and practice of all the methods of promoting it, or, at least, a more ready and liberal help to those who are striving to promote it. In one sentence, they wanted the complete fulfilment of the design of that exhibition, with all the means towards health and knowledge that were shown in it, and with its hand-books, lectures, conferences, and the guidance which would be given by the verdicts of its juries. If we or any other people were to evolve ambitious for the extension of that immaterial power of which we boasted, or for the success of the bold quest of enterprise with which we sought to replenish the earth and subdue it—if we desired that the means of chastisity and of true
