NERVOUS EXHAUSTION.—A MEDICAL ESSAY, comprising a series of lectures delivered at Kahn's Museum of Anatomy, New York, on the cause and cure of premature decline, showing indisputably how lost health may be regained, affording a clear synopsis of the impediments to marriage and the treatment of nervous and physical debility, being the result of 20 years' experience. Price 25 cents. Address the author, Dr. L. J. KAHN, office and residence 51 East 10th st., New York.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

A.—A.—

DISEASES OF MEN.

The importance of the healthiness of the nervous system cannot be over estimated; its power over life and death and the direct bearing which it has on human happiness seems to be recognized; its capabilities, its qualities and its powers; the importance of its healthful preservation, its moderate uses, the danger of overtaxing it, whether through thought, study or intense application in mental investigation and research; whether by the absorbing attention necessary to the conduct of complicated and momentous business interests, or by the excessive indulgence of the appetites and propensities of the system. All these are proper subjects for consideration, as also the knowledge of what is moderation, what is excess, and when these exist the absolute necessity of promptly seeking advice from an expert who for a long series of years has devoted his whole time and attention to the study, investigation and treatment of all the maladies of this important department, to accurately determine the diseased conditions, their nature, causes and origin, whether arising from the want of exercise, its irregularity or excess, and who, from his experience and practice, has learned to discover at once the derangement and as promptly apply the remedy, thus avoiding the painfully slow lessons after the truth, so common to the inexperienced and so annoying to the patient, who, very naturally, wants to know without delay what is the matter, the extent of the derangement, the probabilities of recuperation and the time required.

A striking example of the value of experience and practical observation, as well as the usefulness of the prompt application of suitable remedies, is found in the important statement, coming, not from one, but a dozen public institutions, not only at home but abroad, that a very large proportion of those who suffer from mental disturbance and absolute insanity permanently recover who are placed under treatment within a year after the first symptoms have manifested themselves.

If the intellectual department of the brain has become exhausted by intense mental application, depriving it of the power of connected thought, it can only recover its strength by being properly fed and nourished by the use of certain systematic methods. It is precisely so in every other department, whether of appetite, propensity or passion, each requiring a different remedy for its recuperation and different means for bringing them up from the r overworked and exhausted conditions. The importance of this branch of medical practice can scarcely be overrated, for it reaches even to the perpetuation of family names, the securing of hereditary titles and the retention of estates in the same family.

From a long and large experience in this direction I have been able to command by my success the thankful appreciation of some of the first families in the city and nation; and I certainly can communicate much to cultivated minds in connection with my practical experience in what pertains to the over-exercise of every department of the nervous system and the means of recovering their powers, whether of brain, appetite, propensity or passion.
