The second question might have been put, "How do ... ey make it?" But every one knows that good coffee depends entirely on its roasting. Therefore, "How do they roast it?"

They roast it in Europe in such a way as to preserve its natural flavor, so that when the happy moment comes to sip a cup of coffee they may enjoy the original aroma of that delicious beverage.

Time and human intellect have nevertheless made great improvements in all branches of industry, and coffee roasting, too, has now in Brazil undergone a different process, by which coffee is roasted better than in any other country of the world.

Mr. Paula Coelho, who owns large coffee plantations in Brazil, has come to New York with the special purpose of introducing his own coffee to Americans, and in the anticipation that in New York as well as in Paris, Vienna or London Brazilian coffee may obtain after some time the same foremost rank over all others, he has erected a special roasting machine at

EPPS' COCOA. EPPS' COCOA.
GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.
