Three Lovers.

There were three wooings who loved a King;
They sat by the Throne the day
One said, I love him, and I would die
If that he may be mine, love me!"

The second whispered, "And I would die
To gladden his heart or make him glad
The third one spoke not, but gazed the
With dreamy eyes that were sad as lade.

The King he loved the first for a day,
The second for life with fond love fettered,
And yet the woman who never spoke
Was the one of the three who loved him best.

—The Gleaner.

Miscellaneous.

The manufacture of artificial ivory from bones and scraps of sheepskin is a new industry.

In Northwestern India the rainfall has been largely increased by the replanting of forests.

A very strong solution of salt, applied boiling hot, will kill insects and preserve wood.

The acid vinegar is mainly acetic acid. Cider vinegar contains both acetic and malic acids.

The Trustees of the British Museum have decided, by a small majority, in favor of Sunday opening.

Men of science now entertain the opinion that the art of making artificial stone is prehistoric, and that the Pyramids were built of that material.

A remarkable property of the ice-plant is its absorption of salt, a fluid exuded by its leaves having been found to contain 30 per cent. of sea salt.

Southall quotes from Herodotus to show that the Scythians used to scalp their enemies. The wild tribes of Northeastern Bengal also used the scalping knife.

Dr. B. J. Jeffries holds that the three primary colors are red, green and violet, that blindness to violet is rare, and that color blindness is practically confined to red or green.

In Cape Colony the extensive planting of the common tomato is recommended, as it is alleged that insects shun the land on which it is grown. The rule is not thought to hold good in cooler climates.

"Dry pure air," says M. D. Maculiso, "has no action upon mercury. Watery vapor, when alone, has no action upon pure mercury, but moist air will affect the oxidation of this metal."

Discussing the manufacture of bone dust, Professor J. König shows that when bones, previous to grinding, are freed from fats by treatment with benzol they are purified from ingredients which have no agricultural value.

Dastre and Bourquelot have arranged the sugars with regard to their assimilation through assimilation by the animal economy in the following order, beginning with the most refractory—saccharose, lactose, maltose and glucose.

A material which is fireproof as well as indestructible by vermin is made of asbestos and silicate. It resembles stone, and though massive in appearance, is of light weight. It makes a useful box or safe for the preservation of documents.

It is claimed by Le Nature that the highest railroad viaduct in the world is that of the Garabit bridge, France. That remarkable structure is 1800 feet long, and near the middle of the great central arch the distance from the bed of the river to the rail is 413 feet.

For removing paint from iron a mixture of one pound of lime to four pounds of potash and six quarts of water has been recommended as most efficient. Other proportions of the same materials do not do so well.

Dr. Bartholomew said recently in a clinical lecture that "as a rule the criminal classes have an imperfect ear development, especially hereditary criminals. A full, distinct, well-developed lobe indicates high mental development."

The proper allowance of air in barracks is 600 cubic feet a man in Europe and 1000 in India. For hospitals, 1200 cubic feet per bed in Europe and 1800 in India. Horses require in England 1600 cubic feet each, or nearly as much as three men.

Lloyd's Shipping Gazette has a long alarmist article on the probable climate effect of cutting the Isthmus of Panama Canal and thus diverting the Gulf Stream. It draws a picture of reindeer again being hunted on the Rivers and walruses playing on an ice wall around uninhabited England.

A new alloy melts at 160 degrees Fahrenheit, or considerably below the temperature at which the magical spoons of long ago melted in a cup of tea. Its composition is: Bismuth, 18; cadmium, 18; lead, 19; tin, 20. It will stand severe pressure, and is especially adapted to many important uses.

The conversations by telephone between Boston and Chicago are now carried on with more apparent ease than when the connection was first established. The first commercial message, appropriately enough, concerned the shipment of hogs from the city by the lake.

Black marble may thus be polished: Wash the marble with soap and warm water, and then if it is dry, rub it well with furniture paste or French polish, and then rub it over with an old silk handkerchief. After two or three trials the marble will become quite bright.

A table giving the price of gas in ninety-five of the principal cities of the United States shows a total range in price of from 90 cents to $4 per 1000 feet. The lowest price is in Wilkesbarre, Pa., and Wheeling, W. Va., near the heart of the coal regions, and the highest rates in Galveston and San Antonio, Texas, new places and far removed from coal.

A curious discovery was made recently when a lightning rod which had been in place fifteen years embedded in soft clay was removed. There was found attached to it a solid lump of iron ore weighing ninety six pounds supposed to have been produced by the conversion of the clay by the action of electricity.

To restore the original qualities to steel which has been burnt in the forge, plunge the metal at a red heat into a mixture of two parts of pitch, two parts of brain oil, one part of tallow and a small quantity of common salt. Repeat the operation two or three times. Excellent results have frequently been so obtained.

In the drilling or filing of hard iron castings the use of turpentine has been found of much assistance. The tool should be kept wet with the turpentine, applied with a common sweeping brush, and the turpentine should be evaporated and oxidized by exposure until it is somewhat viscid, as it has then more body than the liquid spirit.

A brick being about as porous as a lump of sugar and having six sides, it needs careful filling for water-tight work in cesspools, etc., and a thin grout or porridge of cement is commonly used. Heating the brick and soaking beforehand in thick coal tar has been recommended. A man may lay common wall all his life without learning how to make brick water-tight.

M. Forder gives in Comptes a very simple and useful method of detecting heat in the tempering of culinary utensils. The vessel being carefully cleaned to remove grease, a drop of nitric acid is applied to any part and a gentle heat is used to dry the spot. A drop of solution of iodide of potassium is applied to the spot, and if heat be present a yellow iodide of lead is formed.

The wax plant of Carolina and Pennsylvania is now grown on an industrial scale in Algeria. The fruit, inclosed in a bag of coarse cloth, is plunged into boiling water, on the surface of which the liquid wax floats after a few seconds and is skimmed off and dried. This wax, of the same chemical composition as beeswax, makes an excellent substitute for it for laundry and similar purposes.

The hardships suffered by the British troops in Egypt may be inferred from the fact that out of 280 nurses landed at Suez on December 31st last, 140 were in hospital during the month of February. In the course of three months 600 men had been in the hospital, of whom only 206 had been considered fit to return to duty, the remainder being sent home or to other hospitals in the Mediterranean. These troops, condemned to garrison duty at Suez, Suakim and other Egyptian seaports, have suffered almost as heavily as if they had been in the field, without any of the compensations of active service.

Professor Crudell, a noted Eastern scientist, lays claim to having discovered an antidote for malaria. He advises that a decoction of lemon be made as follows: Cut up one lemon, peel and all, into thin slices, put it into three glassfuls of water and boil it down to one glassful. Strain the liquid through linen, squeezing thoroughly the remains of boiled lemon, and set it aside to cool. Drink the whole amount when fasting.
