DR. SEELYE'S LIQUID CATARRH REMEDY.

Cure Warranted,

IF DIRECTIONS ARE FOLLOWED.

CALL FOR A CIRCULAR DESCRIBING ALL SYMPTOMS.

SYMPTOMS:

The symptoms of Catarrh, as they generally appear, are first very slight. Persons first think they have a cold, that they have frequent attacks, and are more sensitive to the changes of temperature. In this condition, the nose may be dry, or a slight discharge, thin and acrid, afterwards becoming thick and adhesive. As the disease becomes chronic the discharges are increased in quantity and changed in quality; they are now thick and heavy and are hawked or coughed off. The secretions are offensive, causing a bad breath; the voice is thick and nasal; the eyes are weak; the sense of the smell is lessened or destroyed; deafness frequently takes place. Another common and important symptom of Catarrh is, that the person is obliged to clear his throat in the morning of a thick or slimy mucus, which has fallen down from the head during the night. When this takes place the person may be sure that his disease is on its way to the lungs, and should lose no time in arresting it. The above are but few of the many Catarrh symptoms.

A single Bottle will last a Month—to be used three times a Day.

—Don Fernando, of Portugal, the father of the reigning king, has just sent to the Society of Aquafortistes, of Paris, a proof etching exhibiting great ability. It represents a funeral oration pronounced by a cat over a deceased brother. Around the bier is a crowd of other cats expressing their griefs in various ways; some wipe their eyes, some look upwards with resignation, while others seem transfixed by despair, but all stifle their sobs and listen to the orator, who is seated with intense gravity on a tub.

—Prof. Tyndall, who is always delighting the attendants at the Royal institution with beautiful experiments, revived, lately, one that originated with Franklin. A piece of gold leaf, about 2½ inches long, was cut in the shape of a fish. A large Leyden jar, with an elevated knob, having been charged, the gold leaf was brought near it. This gold fish sprang toward the knob, but stopped within two inches of it, and remained hovering in the air, its tail waving like that of a fish. The jar, when carried about the room, was followed by the fish, which remained thus suspended in the air, and waving its tail for nearly an hour.

—A correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette, writing from Paris, says: I have already referred to the great ball at Paris on the 11th. There were 2,500 persons present. One of the saloons was adorned with the furniture of the drawing-room of the first Napoleon. According to the correspondent of the London Star, opinions were divided as to whether the fair English beauty, Mrs. Miles, or the Etoile du Nord, the American Mrs Ronelda, carried off the palm of loveliness—the former in amber and pearls, the latter in a costume of cloth of silver, which to my uninitiated vision appeared more eccentric than becoming. The Empress seemed by her marked admiration to give it in favor of England. The Marquise de Gallifet was decidedly the most remarked of Paris beauties.

—Paris is just now laughing over the misadventure of the Duchess of D——, who, it seems, always distributes at the new year a great number of orders for bread among the poor of the Faubourg St. Germain.—The Duchess had placed a pile of these orders on her desk, and beside it a pile of visiting cards and envelopes, the latter being duly directed to the "dear five hundred friends," on her visiting list, and desired her maid to put a card into each envelope, and then carry the whole to the post; the maid, who was fresh from the country, and not "up to" Paris ways, put a bread order into each envelope, and duly despatched these misplaced alms to the Duchess' friends. The amazement of the grand folk of the noble faubourg on receiving these orders may be imagined; but the pile of cards that had remained on her desk, having put the Duchess on the track of the mistake made by her soubrette, the cards were at once dispatched, with a request for the return of the bread tickets.

—The Paris Journal des Debats records the decease at Versailles, the 21st ult., of Madame de Saint Quentin, aged 106 and 3 months, having been born at Saint Dizier, October 23, 1752. She enjoyed the full use of all her faculties up to 104 years, going out regularly every day, and making and receiving frequent calls. She was always desirous that her visitors should enjoy themselves, and would seat herself at the piano, play contra dances and sing songs of the olden times. She would remark to a new visitor: "You probably have never heard a woman above 100 years old sing or play on the piano." Her 100th anniversary was religiously celebrated; and as she traversed the church, leaning upon her son, himself near 80 years of age and weakly, she said to him: "Goodness! how feeble you are! you seem like an old man."

—A Paris letter gives an account of a grand hippophagic banquet given in that city last month by a society which has for its object the introduction of horse flesh as an article of victual. Three horses, aged respectively thirteen, seventeen, and twenty-three years, were killed for this feast, and were served up in the form of horse-soup, boiled horse with cabbage, fillet de horse, hashed horse a la mode, roast horse, and finally horse liver with truffles.

—Galletti, a popular Italian prima donna, lately sang in "Norma" at La Scala, Milan, and a Parisian who was present expressed his astonishment at the enthusiasm the lady's singing evoked. He expressed the opinion to a gray-headed old militaire seated by him that he had never witnessed anything so extraordinary. "Mio signore," replied the soldier, "on this very stage I saw Malibran make her first appearance in 'Norma,' and her success was so prodigious that on the fall of the curtain she was recalled for forty-seven times, and when she refused to come on the forty-eighth time the audience became so infuriated that the military had to be called in and the riot act read before the theatre could be cleared."

The Statue of Virginia Dare.

The Boston journals are enthusiastic over a statue of Virginia Dare, (the first white child of English parents born in America, who became an Indian princess after being captured by the aborigines,) by Miss Lander of Salem. The figure is said to be elegant, the attitude graceful, the mien exhibiting in the highest degree all the charms of womanly beauty and dignity. The form of the girl is partially draped with a net, evidently not of Indian manufacture, and introduced as connecting link between the savage and civilized life.

The history of this statue is quite interesting. It was modelled in Rome in 1859, and finished in marble in 1860, after fourteen months of assiduous labor. It was shipped for Boston in the Souter Johnny, which vessel was wrecked on the coast of Spain after she left Leghorn; and it has been noticed as a remarkable coincidence, that this statue of the first white child born in this country, of European parents, should, in 1860, 368 years after Columbus, in 1492, set sail on his first voyage of discovery to the new world, have been washed ashore in Spain, from a wreck off the harbor of Palos, the very port from which the great discoverer took his departure. The statue was subsequently recovered, but so many were the delays attending the reshipment and so distant the prospect of its arrival here, that it was abandoned to the underwriters. When it finally reached our shores, however, the insurance company gave to the artist the opportunity to reclaim it, and Miss Lander accordingly became the purchaser of her own work, which she has restored to all its pristine beauty, after an exposure of two years, partly in the depths of the ocean, and subsequently to all the effects of its salt sea baptism, until re-opened and regenerated in Spain.
