DAILY LEADER.

The Suicide of the Oldest Secessionist in America.

All who were witnesses of the scenes of the Charleston Convention, will remember well the rosy face and keen blue eye, and long, snowy hair of Edmund Ruffin, of Virginia. He was at that time an avowed secessionist, and boasted that he had been one for more than thirty years. Animated by the prospect of the consummation of the hopes of his life, he labored with more than youthful vivacity to defeat all scheme of compromise that might preserve the integrity of the Democratic party; and, as the contest deepened and the quarrel became irreconcilable, his keen eye glittered with joy, and he devoted himself to inflaming the hot blood of the South, and cheering the fiery spirits to a pitch of insolence that he knew would be intolerable.

The Southerners looked upon him as a prophet, and the venerableness of his appearance, and the extreme dignity of his personal bearing, his well-bred style, singularly mixed with the glowing, fanatical zeal that made him importunate in advocacy of his ideas, assisted the illusion with which they pleased themselves and him. It was honorable then, as the master-spirits of the South looked upon it, to have been disunionists for a generation. Those who saw and heard have not forgotten how Edmund Ruffin, of Virginia, was introduced as the distinguished gentleman who had always been 'a traitor," as the Hotspurs of the Gulf States sometimes put it, fancying they were most excellent jokers.

Stories are told of what a "magnificent plantation" he had, how many slaves he owned, what superb wheat-fields adorned his possessions—in short, how rich he was. And there were other stories of the brilliancy of his powers. It was a favorite phrase that he could have held any office he wanted; but, with his principles, of course he couldn't hold office in the Union. It was even whispered that Calhoun could hardly be counted his superior.

The old man triumphed at Charleston. He saw the convention dissolve, and his intensest desire was that the dissolution of the Union was the next thing in order. When the seceders from the Charleston Convention met in Richmond, Edmund Ruffin was there, his long hair, white as lamb's wool, hanging on the collar of his Quaker-cut broadcloth coat, and a large, silver-headed cane in his hand. His activity to defeat the efforts that were made to heal the breach, was incessant, and the measure of success that he attained is well known. He did not engage in the final convulsion at Baltimore, regarding it as beneath the dignity of a true Southern man to follow the Northern delegates, who were determined to nominate Douglas, across the Potomac.

That he looked upon the process of precipitating first the cotton and then the border states into the revolution, with pride and joy, is certain; and when it became clear that there might be an exchange of hostile shots in Charleston harbor, he hastened there to beg that the battle might begin, in order to drag Virginia after the "wayward sisters" already gone, and to get the glory of firing the first gun.—He could not literally fire the first shot of the war, for that had already been done by the cadets of Charleston, aimed at the steamer Star of the West. He did, however, fire the first gun at Fort Sumter, and the Charleston papers were enthusiastic in describing the picturesque old man who had made a long journey to claim, as a reward for a long life spent in the cause of Southern independence, the immortal honor of firing the first gun in the struggle that was to redeem his country. They saw a peculiar, singular and beautiful propriety in the opening of the drama by the venerable Virginian, and when the siege was over the old man received an ovation in Charleston that rivaled the triumph of Beauregard.

The Burning of Idaho City Idaho Territory—Full Particulars—Loss Over a Million of Dollars.

[From the Idaho Statesman, May 20.]

Idaho City was completely destroyed night before last by one of the most destructive fires that has ever visited the mining regions of the western slope. The whole town was consumed from Bear Run to Commercial street, which is nearly to the foot of Main, and from the Bluff to Moore's creek, leaving nothing standing but a few shanties skirting the town.

The fire was, without doubt, the work of an incendiary, as the city had been fired several different times within the last few days; but each time fortunately discovered in season to be extinguished. The flames spread with astonishing rapidity. The town was composed of buildings made exclusively of pine inch boards, and in some cases shakes, covered with cotton lining and paper, to which was added the usual inflammable costing of lamp smoke, so that it burned almost like a train of powder.

It is said that in two hours from the time the alarm was given, the whole burnt district was a smoking field of ashes and cinders. All attempts to describe the confusion and consternation of the people are fruitless. The spread of the fire was so rapid that in the great majority of instances there was no time to save anything from the wreck. Added to the terrible destruction of property was the most disgraceful system of thieving and robbing that can be imagined. In fact, it is generally believed that the fire was set for the purpose of plunder.

As soon as the alarm became general, thousands of men could be seen running in all directions, with one or two sacks of flour, a box of candles, a bundle of clothing, or anything that suited them. One man, who witnessed the scene, remarked that it was stealing on the grandest scale he ever dreamed of. A band of ruffians of a hundred or two would assist in clearing a store of its contents and land them at a safe distance from the burning buildings, when at the word "ready" each man would seize as much as he could carry and make off with it. It was a perfect revel of larceny. One of our merchants, who had a very large lot of flour stored there, had succeeded in removing it out of the way of the fire, but had to go to the store for a few minutes, found, on returning to his pile, that about three hundred bummers were lugging it away, and they continued till it was all gone. But few persons have arrived from there since the conflagration, and there has been no mail or express, consequently we have been able to learn but few particulars. Every hotel in the city was destroyed, also the Forrest Theater.

We understand the county records of Gotoe county were saved. Fire proof cellars did much to mitigate the losses of merchants, though it is said that all the cellars did not stand the fire.

A gentleman who left there yesterday morning, says that men were already clearing away the burning brands to make room for new buildings. Coffee was for sale at different places at fifty cents a cup, and small rolls of bread at a dollar each. Before this time a new town is springing up on the site of what was once Idaho city.

No correct estimate of the loss can be made, but we have heard it set down at over a million dollars.

The exciting contest at the fair in Chicago, between the friends of Sheridan and Sherman, for the magnificent gold-mounted pistol, given for "the best General" finally closed Tuesday night, the vote standing: Sheridan, 879; Sherman, 447; with two or three hundred scattering. Sheridan kept ahead the first two weeks, Sherman's friends got the start last week, but Tuesday the Sheridan men rallied in force and took the prize by an overwhelming majority. The silver-mounted pistol was voted to Brigadier General T. O. Osborn, of Chicago, late Colonel of the Thirty-ninth Illinois.—The magnificent $500 sword in the Philadelphia department in Union Hall has not as yet been awarded, but it is hoped that it will be voted to General Logan.

JEFF. DAVIS HAS BEEN CAUGHT. The war is now about played out, Great changes have been wrought, Our gallant boys are coming home; Jeff Davis has been caught. Huzza! huzza! now hang your banners out, Huzza! huzza! let all the people shout. The way the rebel chief was caught Is laughable indeed; He tried to run in petticoats, But he did not succeed. Huzza! huzza! hang all your banners out, Jeff Davis has been caught, let every one now shout. Our boys did think it very strange, A woman should retreat With a great bowie-knife in hand, Until they saw his feet. Huzza! huzza! our boys have got a good excuse; 'Twixt gaiter shoes and stogy boots they know the difference. Oh, crinoline, we think you fine, For you would not conceal The flying rebel President, When he did show his heel. Huzza! huzza! there's nothing half so fine To show a foot and ankle off, its so well raised crinoline. Your days are numbered now, old Jeff, You surely cannot hope, Or have a better end in view, Than the end of a stout rope. Huzza! huzza! Jeff Davis has no shoe; In setting up all his accounts, just keep his crimes in view. The boys who caught Jeff Davis, We'll welcome one and all, And treat them to a fine new suit AT ISAAC'S UNION HALL! Huzza! huzza! Sing the starry banner out, Our gallant boys are coming home, let all the people shout. The Largest and Best Stock of Fashionable Clothing in the West, at the Lowest Prices, at Isaac A. Isaacs's Union Hall. Sole Agency for the sale of Singer's Celebrated Sewing Machines, Starr's Automatic Freeman, and Strong's Patent Army Trunk and Bed Combined. Cor. Superior and Union streets. Look out for the Giants. my25
