DAILY LEADER.

THE ASSASSINATION TRIALS.

What was Proved Against each Prisoner—Resume of the Evidence.

The following resume of the evidence in the assassination trials, showing what was proven against each of the conspirators, is of especial interest at the present juncture:

DAVID E. HAROLD.

The evidence against Harold of having assisted Booth in the assassination, and aided him to escape, was clear. As early as February last he was found to have been in confidential relations with the assassin, and was proved to have been present on several occasions at secret meetings with Booth, Atzerott and others of the conspirators. Once he was at Mrs. Surratt's in company with them. He called with Surratt and Atzerott at the tavern in Surrattsville, and left the two carbines and ammunition which were taken away from the tavern by him and Booth on the night of the assassination. During their flight he acknowledged to Willie Jett and other rebel soldiers that he and Booth were the assassins of Lincoln, and he was captured in the barn with Booth.

GEORGE A. ATZEROTT.

It was shown without a doubt that Atzerott was a co-conspirator in the assassination plot. He, like Harold, made his first appearance at Mrs. Surratt's house in the early part of February, inquiring for John H. Surratt, and was thereafter frequently found in secret communication with Booth and his confederates. To him was assigned the murder of President Johnson at the Kirkwood House; but, notwithstanding it appears that there was no obstacle in the way of its performance, he does not seem to have made any effort to get access to his intended victim on the evening of the 14th of April. On the afternoon of the 14th he was seeking to obtain a horse, the better to secure his own safety by flight after he should have performed the task which he had voluntarily undertaken. He was traced to the Kirkwood House on horseback, about nine o'clock in the evening, but did not remain there long, and was not seen near the house after that hour. He proved false to his confederates, no doubt for want of pluck to do the murder, but is proved to have been in active co-operation with them throughout the night, and to have absconded at daylight the next morning, first throwing away the knife with which he was to have assassinated Mr. Johnson, and disposing of a pistol which belonged to Harold. During the trial Atzerott looked rather unconcernedly on, and at no time evinced a high sensibility of his almost inevitable doom.

LEWIS PAYNE.

The prisoner is known to have been a confederate of Booth, and to have been intimate with John H. Surratt. There has never been the slightest intimation on the part of himself or his counsel to deny his guilt. He went to Secretary Seward's house with the intent to kill him, representing to the servant, as he hurriedly passed by him, that he had brought medicine from Dr. Verdi, the family physician. Before he left the house, he not only stabbed Secretary Seward, but also nearly succeeded in killing Mr. Frederick W. Seward, and inflicted serious wounds upon Mr. Augustus A. Seward, Mr. Frederick W. Hansell and Mr. George F. Robinson, Secretary Seward's nurse. Payne is a native of Florida, and served some time in the rebel army, from which he deserted. He made his appearance at Mrs. Surratt's in the early part of March, when he stated that his name was Wood, and afterward was a frequent visitor at the house, staying there on one occasion two or three days, and participating with John H. Surratt, Atzerott and Booth in the secret consultations. He and Surratt were discovered in the bed-room of the latter, playing with bowie-knives. In this room were also found two revolvers and four sets of spurs, of the same kind as the spurs and revolvers found in Atzerott's room in the Kirkwood House. After doing his bloody work, Payne made his escape from Washington, whither he returned on the evening of the 17th, when he presented himself at Mrs. Surratt's house, dressed as a laboring man, and carrying a pick-ax on his shoulder, saying that he had been engaged to dig a gutter. He was then arrested.

MARY E. SURRATT.

This woman appears to have been cognizant of the intended crime almost from its inception, even if she were not its instigator. Her house had been a refuge for blockade runners, and she was an active participant in overt acts. Her character appears to have been that of general manager. She received and entertained all the prisoners except Dr. Mudd, O'Laughlin and Arnold. With Dr. Mudd she planned the means and assistance for the escape of the assassins. She visited Surrattsville at 5 o'clock on the day of the assassination to see that the carbines, &c., should be in readiness, and informed Lloyd, the tavern keeper, that they would be called for that night. Booth frequently called at her house and held long and confidential talks with her. He was in her company a few minutes on the afternoon of the 14th. When confronted with Payne on the night of his arrest, when he went to her house in disguise, she protested that she had never seen him, and added, "I did not hire him, I don't know him." It was proved that she knew him well, and that he had lodged at her house.

MICHAEL O'LAUGHLIN.

To this prisoner appears to have been assigned the murder of General Grant; but whether he failed to make the attempt from lack of courage, from disinclination or from missing the opportunity, does not appear. General Grant was announced to visit the theatre, but suddenly and unexpectedly took the cars to Philadelphia. Atzerott made the remark the next day, when it was reported that General Grant had been shot, that, "probably it is the fact, if he was followed by the man that was to do it." O'Laughlin was clearly shown to have been in conspiracy with Booth. He was found lurking in the hall of Secretary Stanton's house on the night of the 13th of April, evidently watching the movements of General Grant, who was Secretary Stanton's guest, that he might be able with certainty to identify him. During the day and night before, he had been visiting Booth, and on the night and at the very hour of the assassination was in position at a convenient distance to aid and protect Booth in his flight, as well as to execute his own part of the conspiracy by inflicting death upon General Grant, who, happily, was not at the theatre nor in the city, having left the city that day. O'Laughlin is an ordinary looking individual, with a full face, black eyes, high forehead, bushy black hair, of luxuriant growth, pale face, black eyes, slight black whiskers, delicate silky moustache and thin goatee; weight about 130 pounds.

EDWARD SPANGLER.

The prisoner does not appear to have been in the conspiracy at an earlier period than a few hours before the commission of the crime. He was recognized as being one of three men in company with Booth in front of the theatre, and was heard that day to promise Booth assistance. His participation appears to have been in preparing the means of escape by keeping the passage-way clear on the stage, and by closing the door after Booth had passed through, so as to retard the movements of pursuers. Standing at the door after Booth had passed out, he exclaimed, "Hush, don't say anything about it;" He appears to have been Booth's drudge, sometimes taking care of and feeding his horse. During the progress of the trial his bearing was somewhat stolid. He is of short, thick stature, full face, showing indications of excessive drink, dull, gray eyes, unsymmetrical head, and light hair, closely cut.

SAMUEL ARNOLD.

Arnold was proven to have been at one time in full communion with the conspirators. He was well known to Booth, and that Arnold and Booth quarrelled, and that Arnold and Booth quarrelled, and the former withdrew from the conspiracy. The prisoner afterward went to Fortress Monroe and took a situation in a sutler's store, where he remained till his arrest, two days after the assassination. Arnold was at one time in the rebel service. He is about thirty years of age, five feet eight inches in height, dark hair and eyes, clear light complexion, and an intelligent and prepossessing appearance.

SAMUEL A. MUDD.

Dr Mudd was shown to have been in the full confidence of Booth as long ago as last November. He had a suspicious meeting with Surratt and Booth at the National Hotel in January. He introduced Booth to Surratt. Booth visited him at his room in the Pennsylvania House. Booth and Harold fled to his house directly after committing the murder. He dressed Booth's broken leg, and assisted the escape into Lower Maryland of the latter and Harold. Three days afterward, when called upon by the officers, he denied that he knew either of the criminals. When arrested on the Friday following, he prevaricated, lied outright, and finally admitted that he knew Booth. He said that he first heard of the assassination on Sunday at church, and it was shown by abundant proof that he was at Bryantown on the day preceding, (Saturday,) at an hour when the populace was all excitement, the town guarded by and full of soldiers, and every man, woman and child in the place had not only heard of the murder, but knew the name of the assassin. Of Dr. Mudd's being an accomplice in the assassination there can be no shadow of doubt. In appearance Mudd is described as being five feet ten inches in height, slender in form, hair red or sandy, and of thin growth, pale, oval, intelligent face, blue eyes, high forehead, rather prominent nose, thin lips, and a red tuft of hair upon his chin.

JEFF. DAVIS HAS BEEN CAUGHT.

The war is now about played out,
Great changes have been wrought,
Our gallant boys are coming home;
Jeff Davis has been caught.
Pluck! huzza! now hang your banners out,
Huzza! huzza! let all the people shout.

The way the rebel chief was caught
Is laughable indeed;
He tried to hide in petticoats,
But he did not succeed.
Huzza! huzza! hang all your banners out,
Jeff Davis has been caught, let every one now shout.

Our boys did think it very strange,
A woman should retreat
With a great bowie-knife in hand,
Until they saw his feet.
Huzza! huzza! our boys have got good sense;
'Twixt gaiter shoes and stogy boots they know the difference.

Oh, crinoline, we think you fine,
For you would not conceal
Too fleing rebel President,
When he did show his heel.
Huzza! huzza! there's nothing half so fine
To show a foot and ankle off, like well raised crinoline.

Your days are numbered now, old Jeff,
You surely cannot hope,
Or have a better end in view,
Than the end of a stout rope.
Huzza! huzza! Jeff Davis has no shoe;
In settling up all his accounts, Jeff Davis has no crinoline in view.

The boys who caught Jeff Davis,
We'll welcome one and all,
And treat them to a fine new suit
At ISAAC'S UNION HALL!
Huzza! huzza! fling the starry banner out,
Our gallant boys are coming home, let all the people shout.
