IRISH DELEGATES

union lines, but if their country is not freed of foreign control and exploitation, and quickly, many of them declare that, in sheer defense of their own lives, they will be compelled to set up local Soviet governments, and refuse longer to produce wealth for their oppressors.

The Revolution.

Ireland for the first time in more than 100 years is absolutely cut off from England, its regularly elected members of parliament having with few exceptions refused to go to Westminster. They are attempting under the guns of the English soldiers, to hold orderly sessions in the Mansion house in Dublin.

There is a military organization of approximately 200,000 men of fighting age, poorly equipped as to arms, and without artillery. They appear to be well officered, and seemingly maintain a perfect organization, engaging in daily drills and frequent maneuvers. Upon all sides may be heard declarations that they are ready to fight and die for the right of self-determination, no matter how great the odds against them may be.

The killing by the British government of these 200,000 men would not settle the Irish problem. Those below the fighting age, and even the children of Ireland, are singing "The Soldier's Song," shouting "Long live the republic," and trying to enlist in the revolutionary movement.

English Testimony.

Mr. Erskine Childers, an English writer of high repute who served Great Britain throughout the war in the royal naval flying corps, coming out a major, made the following declaration in regard to the Irish situation in the London Daily Herald of May 26, 1919:

"I could bomb a crowd from an airplane with a better conscience (and more skill) than engage in this cold blooded, systematic condemnation of respectable people to the rigors and ignominies of jail life—to loss of health, loss of business and career, too often to loss of life; not for breaking the moral law, but in very truth for obeying that universal law which impels men worthy of the name of men to become free.'

Lord Cavendish Bentinck, a unionist member of the house of commons, within the last month declared upon the floor of that body, that England was not governing Ireland but was engaging in a mere scuffle with the Irish people.

The lord chancellor of England in an official report to the house of lords, within the last fortnight, made the confession that the vast majority of the people of Ireland were now in open rebellion against the rule of the British government.

Right Honorable Herbert H. Asquith, former prime minister of Great Britain, made the following statement upon June 2, 1919, which appears in today's London Daily Mail:

"Lord French is at present viceroy of Ireland, which today is the darkest of the dark spots on the map, not of Great Britain but of the world."

Demand for Investigation.

All of the charges herein made are based upon the actual observation of the signer while in Ireland, or upon the statements of men and women of unimpeachable character who are prepared to make direct legal proof of every crime and atrocity set forth.

The government of Great Britain, up to this time, has measureably succeeded in hiding the details of these atrocities from the peace conference and the people of the world. From time to time, when crimes and atrocities are forced into publicity, they are met in three ways:

(a) Some distinguished English statesman or high official, usually one without personal knowledge of the facts, solemnly denies the truth of the charges.

(b) The British press impressively and unanimously denounces the charges as false, and carries many communications from the persons claiming to have knowledge of the facts, and bearing testimony to their falsity.

Urge Appointment of Commission.

In order that the peace conference may act in the light of knowledge of the conditions, and be fully advised as to the effort of England to keep the people of Ireland in subjection by military power and violence, in contravention of the principles for which the peace conference was convoked, we respectfully urge the appointment of a commission to ascertain the facts and report the same to the peace conference, and respectfully submit the following alternative suggestions as to its formation and appointment:

(a) That an impartial committee be appointed by the peace conference authorized to sit in the cities of Dublin and London to take testimony as to the facts herein set forth.

None of the members of such committee to be residents or citizens of Great Britain, Ireland, or any of the countries under the domination of Great Britain, or over which that country claims to exercise a protectorate or control.

(b) That a committee of seven be selected immediately in the manner following:

The prime minister of England shall select three members; the elected representatives of Irland, including unionists, nationalists and republicans shall, by a majority vote, select three members of said committee; that the six members thus selected shall agre upon a chairman, who shall be a resident and citizen of the United States, France, Italy, or Japan. In case of inability or failure to agree upon a chairman, the selection shall be made by the supreme court of the United States. That the government of Great Britain and the elected members of parliament from Ireland, as aforesaid, shall each have the right to select its own counsel, to conduct the examination of witnesses and assist in the investigation, the only restriction being that counsel so selected shall be reputable members of the legal profession in good standing in the country of which he or they are citizens.

We sincerely urge that if the peace conference refuses a hearing to the people of Ireland, in these circumstances, the guilt for the commission of these monstrous crimes and atrocities, as well as for the bloody revolution which may shortly come, must, from this time forward, be shared with Great Britain by the members of the peace conference, if not by the peoples whom they represent.

Respectfully submitted.
AMERICAN COMMISSION OF IRISH INDEPENDENCE.
Frank P. Walsh, Chairman.
E. F. Dunne.
