THE APPEAL.

SCATTER THE GERMS OF THE BEAUTIFUL.

Scatter the germs of the beautiful!
By the wayside let them fall;
That the roaming spring by the cottage gate,
And the vine on the garden wall;
Over the rough and the rude of earth
With a vest of leaves and flowers,
And mark with the opening bud and cup
The march of summer hours.

Scatter the germs of the beautiful
In the holy shrine of home;
Let the pure, and the fair, and the graceful there
In the loveliest instructions
Leave not a trace of deformity
To the temple of the heart,
But gather about its earth the gems
Of nature and of art.

Scatter the germs of the beautiful
In the temples of our God—
The God who starred the spirited sky,
And flowered the trampled sod;
When He built a temple for himself,
And a home for his priestly race,
He reared each arch in symmetry,
And curved each line in grace.

Scatter the germs of the beautiful
In the depths of the human soul,
They shall bud and blossom, and bear the fruit,
While the endless ages roll;
Fraught with the flowers of charity,
The portals of the tomb,
And the fair and the pure about thy path
In Paradise shall bloom.

The Closing Scene of the Bernard Trial.

From the London Times of April 19.h we clip the following account of the closing scene at the trial of Simon Bernard, accused of being an accomplice in the attempted assassination of the French Emperor. The Times says:

The jury retired to consider their verdict, it being then 20 minutes to 3 o'clock. They had been absent upward of half an hour, when the intimation was given that they had agreed upon their verdict. Instantly silence was restored, the prisoner was placed in the dock and the audience waited with breathless interest the announcement which was to decide his fate. After a few moments of anxious suspense, however, it transpired that the jury had not agreed, but that the mistake had arisen probably from their sending some communication to the judges, and the prisoner was again removed from the dock. Then there was another long interval, during which the anxiety of the crowd seemed to deepen as the time wore on. The spectacle which the court then presented was of the most animated and exciting description. The small gallery immediately over the dock, and accessible to the general public, was densely packed. In front of it, sat several well-dressed ladies, who had been unable to obtain more agreeable accommodation in other parts of the building.

All the more favorable seats on the bench, and in its immediate vicinity, had been occupied from an early hour in the morning by persons of rank and station, many of them ladies. Others, as the crisis approached, made incessant application forseven standing room within the precincts of the court, and the complaisance of the ever obliging usher should be taxed to the utmost to comply with their wishes. The members of the bar stood in groupes discussing the incidents of the trial, and speculating on its probable result, as did also the greater part of the audience. On the floor of the court was seen, in conversation with another, a gentleman of prepossessing appearance and manners, an advocate of the French bar, who had defended Pierri on his trial in Paris. Precisely at the clock struck 4, an intimation was given that the jury were returning, and in an instant the loud hum of conversation which had prevailed for upwards of an hour, subsided into profound silence. The prisoner re-appeared in the dock. The Judges entered and resumed their accustomed places on the bench, and the Jury, who had been absent for an hour and twenty minutes, answered to their names as they were called over in the usual way, the prisoner, whose face was flushed with emotion, looking wistfully in the direction of the jury-box, as if to discover, by anticipation, some faint omen of his fate.

Mr. Clark, the Clerk of Arraigns, addressing the jury, said: Gentlemen, are you agreed upon your verdict?

The foreman—We are.

Mr. Clark—How say you? Is Simon Bernard guilty or not guilty?

The foreman—Not guilty.

On the announcement of this decision a scene occurred unexampled, perhaps, in an English tribunal. From the galleries first, and then in an instant afterward from the floor of the court, proceeded a loud shout of exultation. The cheering was again and again repeated—the excitement was contagious—and many of the ladies of quality present waved their handkerchiefs in token of their delight. Vainly did the Lord Chief Justice endeavor by voice and gesture to still the tumult, and as powerless were the stentorian lungs of Mr. Harker, though exerted to the utmost to restore silence. The prisoner, who seemed extremely cool, flourished his pocket handkerchief over his head, and several times attempted to speak.

By this time the verdict had reached the ears of the crowd assembled outside the Old Bailey, and the hurrahs thereon which they raised, and after repeated, could be distinctly heard within the Court. The Judges, unable, and perhaps unwilling to check this spontaneous ebullition of popular feeling, but yet not liking to sanction it by their presence, rose to depart. The look of Lord Campbell at this moment was of itself a study. Slightly ruffled at the defiance which had been shown to his authority, his Lordship still retained his good humor, and seemed disposed to pay the usual homage to the vox populi. It may be reasonably presumed that he could not have been indifferent to the result of a trial in which he had played so conspicuous a part; but whatever his feelings may have been on this point, it was impossible for a spectator to divine them from his countenance.

Bernard at length made a successful attempt to be heard, and, addressing the Jury, said, with much vehemence of manner—Gentlemen—That verdict is an expression of the truth. I am not guilty, and it proves that in England there is and always will be liberty, which will crush tyranny, whatever and wherever it may be. All honor to an English Jury. [Renewed cheering.]

The prisoner was then removed from the dock.

A POLITE BOY.—The other day we were riding in a crowded car. At one of the stations an old gentleman entered and was looking about him for a seat, when a lad, ten or twelve years of age, rose up and said, "take my seat, sir." The offer was accepted, and the infirm old man sat down. "Why did you give us your seat?" he inquired of the boy. "Because you are old, sir, and I am a boy," was the quick reply. The passengers were very much pleased and gratified. For my part, I wanted to seize hold of the little fellow and press him to my bosom. It was a respect for age, which is always praiseworthy.

ELECTION FOR JUDGE.—We have heard from all the boxes in this county but one—the results being for Moore, 760; Wood, 168; and Graham, 42. Moore is re-elected, no doubt, by an overwhelming odds—every return, coming in from other counties, swelling his tremendous majority.—Florence Gazette.

A GOLDEN WEDDING.—Com. Broughton, the editor of the Norfolk (Va.) Herald, celebrated the 50th anniversary of his marriage on Friday evening. A large company, including children and grand-children, was present on the occasion, and an interesting address was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Armstrong. The worthy couple are now 71 years of age.

Labor-Saving Machines.

Important to Planters & Millers.
FELTON'S IMPROVED
Self-Sharpening Portable Grist Mill.
An Improvement on all Other Patents.

THIS is one of the most valuable inventions of the day, possessing all the qualifications requisite to make it valuable to the farmer. It is designed to supply a want that has long been felt by that portion of community. It is so simple in construction, that any person of ordinary skill can run it and keep it in order. The grinding surfaces are of the most durable character, harder than any tempered steel, and not liable to get out of order. It will grind wheat, corn, oats, buckwheat, drags and spices, crush and grind corn and cob admixtly, or shelled oats and corn, and cob may be well ground together. The small size frame mill, with two-horse power, will grind from five to eight bushels of superior corn meal per hour, and from eight to ten bushels of good feed for stock, and requires but little attention, and may be run by gid-bell without increase of expense. The large size grinds mill will grind over twice that amount per hour. The meal is not heated in grinding—a valuable feature. Prices are, for small size $125; large size $200. We have the right to sell the States of Tennessee, Kentucky, and a portion of Texas. A rare chance is here offered for connexions and responsible parties will be engaged in the sale of Mills.

County and State rights sold on accommodating terms. All orders, communications, and applications for Rights and Mills addressed to us will be promptly responded to.

THE attention of Cotton Planters is respectfully called to the above superior Gins, manufactured by R. Carver & Co., East Brookfield, Mass. Under a recent improvement, the Carver Gins are regarded as the best now in general use. Their superiority needs no commendation from us, as thousands are now in successful operation in the Southern country.

We have on hand fifty Gins, embracing all the different sizes and numbers of saws.

Also 10 and 12 inch screpnel bolts, washers, &c., complete, all of which we offer for sale on the most reasonable terms and time.

PLANTERS!
Look well to Your Interests and Purchase only the Best Machines.
FELTON'S
SELF-SHARPENING
Portable Grist Mill.
EVERY PLANTER HIS OWN MILLER.

THIS is one of the most valuable inventions of the day, possessing all the qualities necessary to make it of the greatest service to every planter, and is destined to become universally adopted and used by all who want long rot in every part of the country. It occupies only 2 feet by 3, and weighs 200 pounds.

The great distinguishing characteristics are, its simplicity, durability, utility and small cost, requiring but little in order.

IT IS THE ONLY MILL IN THE UNION THAT WILL GRIND CORN AND COB IN THE EAR, WHICH MAKES AN INVALUABLE FEED FOR STOCK.

It is adapted to steam, water or horse power, grinding to perfection wheat, corn, oats, buckwheat, drugs and spices; grinds with two horse power five to eight bushels per hour of the finest quality of meal for family use, and the heaviest of grists; meal for stock, and never heats the meal—a valuable feature.

It contains more good qualities than all other mills combined, and is sold upon its merits, and satisfaction rewards every intelligent miller of its great use and practicability. We challenge the world for a trial before competitors, of any other mill ever invented. Hundreds of the mills are in use in different parts of the United States and all give entire satisfaction.

Land Warrant Stolen.

ON the 24 day of April, instant, there was stolen from me in the city of Memphis, a certain Land Warrant for 80 acres of land issued by the United States to Jacob Rutman under the act of 1855, for services in the War of 1812, number of said Warrant not recollected. All persons are hereby cautioned against trading for said Warrant as a caveat has been entered in the General Land office, and a warrant has been issued for one besides the proper owner. The Land Warrant was assigned in blank by the said Rutman to me. LEWIS A. NOBLE,
