THE APPEAL.

— BEYOND THE RIVER.

Time is a river deep and wide!
And while along its banks we stray,
We see our loved onsawver the tide
Still from our sight away,
Where are they gone—they who return
No more to shed our longing eyes?
They've passed from life's contracted bourne
To land unknown, that lies
Beyond the river.

'Tis full from view; but we may guess
How beautiful that realm must be,
For glimmerings of its loveliness
In visions granted, are we see
The very clouds that cover thee
Their well-wrought pomp for mortal sight,
With gold and purple tinctures glow,
Reflected from the glorious light
Beyond the river.

And gentle airs, renewed, so calm,
Sent sometimes from the viewless sphere,
The moment you drink their breath of balm
And ecstatic sorrow drive the tear
And sometimes lay sifting our ears
Some faint echo that hither floats
The echo of a distant strain,
Or harps and voices blending notes,
Beyond the river.

There are our loved ones in the rest!
They've crossed Time's river—now to meet
Their bound the bubble on its breast,
Nor feel the storms that sweep its shore.
But there pure love can live, can rest—
Their link for us their homes to share;
When we in turn away have passed,
What joyful greetings wait us there
Beyond the river.

THE WEATHER.

November is abominable. It is incomparably mean. It is tactfully dirty and disagreeable, and almost diabolic. Most bad in life mind's eye just such weather which he wrote this moody ballad, viz:

No sun—no moon!
No morn—no noon—
No dawn—no dusk—no proper time of day—
No sky—no earthly view—
No distance looking blue—
No road—no street—no "either side the way"—
No end to any row—
No indication where the Crocuses grow—
No top to any steeple—
No recognition of familiar people—
No courtesies of shaking hands—
No knowing 'em.
No traveling at all—no locomotive—
No notion of the way—no motion—
"No go"—by land or ocean—
No mail—no post—
No news from any foreign coast—
No Park—no Ring—no afternoon gentility—
No company—no visiting—
No warmth—no cheerfulness—no healthful ease—
No comfortable feeling in any member—
No shadow—no shine, no business, no play—
No fruits, no flowers, no leaves, no birds,
November.

An Albanian with the Camanches—His Capture, Detention and Escape.

From the Albany Knickerbocker, November 1st.

We mentioned yesterday that Nelson Lee, who was taken by the Camanche Indians in 1836, reached Albany on Thursday. In March, 1836, Mr. Lee started from Texas for California with a drove of mules. Mr. Lee was accompanied by twenty seven white men. About three hundred miles from Eagle Pass, and on the 23 of April, 1836, the little party from Texas was attacked by two hundred Mexicans and fifty Camanche Indians. This battle lasted for some two hours, and resulted in the victory of the Indians. Of the twenty-eight white men, twenty-four were killed during the engagement. The other four were taken prisoners, and carried to the camp of the Camanches. The names of the four prisoners were William Aiken, of New Orleans, Thomas Smith, of West Tennessee; James Howard, of Patrickie, Texas; and Nelson Lee, now in Albany, and formerly of Jefferson county. Two of the prisoners—Smith and Howard—were massacred the day after the battle. Aiken remained in camp some six days, and was then carried off by the Indians. What has become of him no one knows. He has probably been killed during some war dances. Lee's life was spared because the Indians could not manage a repeating watch which he carried. The watch saved his life.

In the Camanche camp Mr. Lee found no less than twenty-eight captured white women and some thirty or forty white children. A day or two after he arrived in camp they massacred an English woman, named Anna Haskin, in a most cruel manner. They tied her naked to the ground, and then tied her two daughters, Margaret and Harriet Haskin, inflicted the most revolting cruelties upon her. Before Mrs. Haskin was finally dispatched, she was tortured for nearly half a day, during which time the Indians became excited with liquor and danced about her like so many demons. They took sharp pieces of flint and cut her flesh in all possible directions. Mrs. Haskin and her daughters were captured while on their way to the Mormon settlements in the Salt Lake. The daughters still remain with the Indians. Their ages are seventeen and nineteen. Lee made his escape in the following manner: He was accompanying the Chief of the Camanches to a lodge some miles distant.

During the tramp they met a party of Indians; the Indians gave the Chief a skin filled with liquor. The Chief drank of the spirits and became excited. Arriving at a creek he dismounted and stooped down to drink. At this moment Lee seized his tomahawk, split his head open and killed him instantly. He then took the Chief's rifle, mounted the Chief's horse and put for Mexico. When he reached Mexico he was completely naked, while his feet and legs were swollen from being cut by the cactus plant, that he could only do some twenty-eight miles a day. The last hundred miles he did on foot, his horse having died from exhaustion. The Mexicans treated him very kindly, and gave him money and clothing to reach home. The clothes he now wears in Albany are those given to him by the Mexicans.

Parks of St. Petersburg.

Bayard Taylor, in his last letter to the Tribune, thus describes the parks near St. Petersburg:

The celebrated summer palace and park of Tsarsko Selo are seven versts beyond Pulkowa. The grounds, which are of immense extent—eighteen miles in circumference, it is said—are always open to the public. Entering the park from the western side, we found ourselves in the midst of gently undulating fields, dotted with groves of fir, ash and birch—an English landscape, were the green a little more dark and fresh. Here was a dairy farm, with cows stable for elephants, and a little further an asylum for possessed horses. The favorite steeds of the Emperor, after his death, are withdrawn from active service, and passing their days here in comfort and indolence. One or two of the horses of Alexander I. are on the list, although their age cannot be less than forty years. At each of these institutions, we received very polite invitations from the servants to introduce ourselves and inspect them. The invitation was sometimes accompanied by the words, 'I am a married man,' or 'I have a family,' which in Russia means, "I should not object to receive a gratuity." I was not a little perplexed, occasionally, until I ascertained this fact. The other day, while standing before the house of Peter the Great, in the summer gardens, a soldier came up to me and said, "pay go into the house, my lord; the keeper is married."

As we advanced toward the palace, the grounds gradually became more artificial in their design and more carefully tended. The world has an impertinent "polish" like imperial velvet; it appeared to have been combed rather than raked. Not a dead leaf was visible on the exquisitely smooth gravel of the walks; not a defective bough had been suffered to remain on the arching avenues of elms. Nature seemed to have taken a Turkish bath and put on a clean Sunday dress. There is not an ill weed, an awkward plant, a frog, toad, snake or bug, in this expensive Eden. Usually a gardener walks after you with a broom, to efface any footprints you may have left behind you, but for some reason or other, we were spared this attention. Wot ums you, if you touch a flower!

Our way led on over straight Dutch canals, past artificial hills and rock-work, through a Chinese village which resembles nothing in China, and under Babylonian hanging gardens, to the front of the palace, which is 1,200 feet in length, and rises from the centre of a long lake, gently sloping down to a lake. Some fine oak trees adorn the lawn; on the top of a granite rock, a bronze nymph is crying over her broken pitcher, out of which rushes a stream of sparkling water; and on the lake Neuffa, greyhounds counter lies at anchor. Arcacle and fortresses in miniature stand on the opposite shore, and on a wooded point stands a Turkish kiosk and minaret, the interior of which is a sumptuous oriental temple, presented by the Sultan. The park beyond the palace, toward the village of Tsarsko Selo, is in even more rigid full dress than that through which we had already passed, and I verily believe that if a leaf gets accidentally twisted in its stem, some one is on hand to set it right again.

Toward evening, we took droskikes and drove to Pavlovsk, which is about three miles to the eastward of Tsarsko Selo. This is, at present, the summer residence of the Grand Duke Constantine, but the park is at all times free to the public. It is of great extent, the aggregate length of the walks being estimated at a hundred miles. Here nature is released from curling-tongs and stays; her graceful form is without pinching her, and her hair is loosened to the wind. For this reason Pavlovsk pleased me better than Tsarsko Selo. Its deep, winding dells, threaded by natural streams; its opulent woods of ash, birch and elm; its unpretentious walks, branching away into neglected forest solitudes, and its open, sunny lawns, sweet with the breath of the half-raked hay, speak of genial culture rather than art.

PRACTICAL JOKING.—"A few days since," writes an attorney, "as I was sitting with Brother C——, in his office, in Court Square, a client came in and said:

"'Squire D——, W——, the stabler, has ed me dreadfully, yesterday, and I want to come up with him.'

"'State your case,' says D——.

"'I asked him how much he'd charge me for a horse to go to Dedham. He said one dollar and a half. I took the team and when I came back he said he wanted another dollar and a half for coming back, and made me pay it.'

"D—— gave him some legal advice, which the client immediately acted upon as follows: He went to the stables and said:

"'How much will you charge me for a horse and a wagon to go to Salem?'

Stabler replied—"'Five dollars.'

"'Harness him up.'

"Client went to Salem, came back by railroad, went to the stabler, saying:

"'Here is your money, paying him five dollars.

"'Where is my horse and wagon?' says W.

"'He is at Salem,' says client, 'I only hired him to go to Salem.'

☞ MRS. AMELIA PINKHEY, one of the most accomplished ladies of Annapolis, Maryland, died on the 4th inst., in the 80th year of her age. The Annapolis Gazette says:

"Her industry was wonderful. The records of the State Department bear evidence of a skill in penmanship, and a capacity for business rarely met with in women. After her 70th year, she wrote 1,500 closely-written pages, full of the stories of her rich mind and cultivated taste, solely for the perusal and gratification of those who cheered the last years of her bodily suffering. When past her seventieth year, she wrote in six weeks, 500 verses of poetry on the subject of the Queens of England, without the erasure of a line or change of a word.

SERVANTS AND HELP.—One of those "English muffs, ye know," came over into "the States" the other day, from Canada. He took lodgings at Mrs. Partington's, a bordering village, which shall be nameless. He had dinner, and among those who sat at the table with him, was the waiting-maid, whom he designated as "servant;" but he received an indignant correction from the landlord: "We call our servants, sir, helps. They are not oppressed; they are not Russian serfs." "All right," said the blood Britisher. "I shall remember." And he did; for in the morning he awoke the whole house by calling out, at the top of his voice, which was like the tearing of a strong rag, "Help! help!—water! water!" In an instant every person equal to the task rushed into his room with a pail of water. "I am much obliged to you, I am sure," he said, "but I don't want so much water, ye know; I only want enough to shave with." "Shave with!" said the landlord; "what did you mean by calling 'Help water! we thought the house was a fire." "You told me to call the servants 'Help,' and I did; did you think I would cry water when I meant fire?"

DANCING THEIR RAGS OFF.—Two unsophisticated country lasses visited Niblo's, in New York, during the ballet season. When the short-skirted, gossamer-clad nymphs made their appearance on the stage, they became restless and fidgetty.

"Oh Annie!" exclaimed one, sotto voice.

"Well, Mary."

"It ain't nice. I don't like it."

"Hush, the folks will notice you."

"I don't care; it ain't nice, and I wonder why aunt brought us to such a place."

"Hush, Mary, the folks will laugh at you."

After one or two flings and a pirouette, the blushing Mary said:

"Oh, Annie, let's go; it ain't nice and I don't feel comfortable."

"Do, hush, Mary," replied the sister, whose own face was scarlet, though it wore an air of determination, "it's the first time I ever was at a theatre, and I suppose it will be the last, so I am just going to stay it out if they dances every rag off their backs."

A WOMAN ASKING $6,000 FOR A KISS.—The court room in Danbury, Conn, was crowded on Thursday to see justice done between a lady and gentleman from Westport, the former claiming to have been damaged $6,000 by a kiss from the latter. Some seventy witnesses were present. The breach was finally healed without the aid of lawyers, much to the chagrin of numerous sympathizers on both sides.

HUNGRY PROOF.—Bowell, the biographer and worshiper of Dr. Johnson, observing to the latter that there was no instance of a beggar dying for want in the streets of Scotland—"I believe, sir, you are very right," says Johnson, "but this does not arise from the want of beggars, but the impossibility of starving a Scotchman."

☞ A rich man one day asked a man of wit what sort of a thing opulence was?

"It is a thing," replied the philosopher, "which can give a rascal the advantage over an honest man."

CARSON'S PUMP SHOP,

On Second Alley,

BETWEEN UNION AND MONROE,

THE undersigned would respectfully inform the citizens of Memphis and the surrounding country, that he continues his business at the old stand, and the numerous customers living at a distance in the country for their past patronage in the line of business, which business has been carried on uninterruptedly for twenty years, and pending on the Chain-Pump alone, and still believing them to be the best pump in use, when modes of good materials and proper workmanship, that the same has been not made and put up, however as there are places where the Chain Pump is not in use, and as there are many living of the "olden times," who still think that there are other Pumps in use superior to the Chain Pump. I have determined to add to the labor of all kinds of Pump repairing or shipping to order, any kind of a Pump that this market can furnish. I have therefore, employed an experienced hand to work for me, I have from the East, who will attend to putting up and repairing all kinds of Iron Pumps. He is also prepared to make any kind of PLUMBING, all of which I will warrant; and when I say warrant, I mean what I say, and say what I mean.

I have also, the best and most approved machinery to a number of my Chain Pumps with entire success. I have also used large lumber wheels on Hand Chain Pumps with equal success. In one case I have used the wooden Link Chain and Turned Rotter, which is quite expensive, but it "finds not sorry."

"SHILOH IN PARVO."

I have recently invented a CHAIN PUMP BOX, combining two simple, separate and distinct Pumps, adapted for double tenements, (and double price) two pumps can draw water from this box at the same time, by having an extra rotter and lever. I would prefer being no bolt in the partition, wall or fence, large enough for an ear of corn, or cat, chicken or goose to pass through, but if any lover desires it, I would prefer concerning he Pump, to F. G. Sinclair and J. E. Williams & Co.

N. B.—I am prepared to ship Pumps on orders in short notice, up or down, easter west of the Mississippi river

CARSON'S PUMP SHOP,

On Second Alley,

BETWEEN UNION AND MONROE,

THE undersigned would respectfully inform the citizens of Memphis and the surrounding country, that he continues his business at the old stand, and the numerous customers living at a distance in the country for their past patronage in the line of business, which business has been carried on uninterruptedly for twenty years, and pending on the Chain-Pump alone, and still believing them to be the best pump in use, when modes of good materials and proper workmanship, that the same has been not made and put up, however as there are places where the Chain Pump is not in use, and as there are many living of the "olden times," who still think that there are other Pumps in use superior to the Chain Pump. I have determined to add to the labor of all kinds of Pump repairing or shipping to order, any kind of a Pump that this market can furnish. I have therefore, employed an experienced hand to work for me, I have from the East, who will attend to putting up and repairing all kinds of Iron Pumps. He is also prepared to make any kind of PLUMBING, all of which I will warrant; and when I say warrant, I mean what I say, and say what I mean.

I have also, the best and most approved machinery to a number of my Chain Pumps with entire success. I have also used large lumber wheels on Hand Chain Pumps with equal success. In one case I have used the wooden Link Chain and Turned Rotter, which is quite expensive, but it "finds not sorry."

"SHILOH IN PARVO."

I have recently invented a CHAIN PUMP BOX, combining two simple, separate and distinct Pumps, adapted for double tenements, (and double price) two pumps can draw water from this box at the same time, by having an extra rotter and lever. I would prefer being no bolt in the partition, wall or fence, large enough for an ear of corn, or cat, chicken or goose to pass through, but if any lover desires it, I would prefer concerning he Pump, to F. G. Sinclair and J. E. Williams & Co.

N. B.—I am prepared to ship Pumps on orders in short notice, up or down, easter west of the Mississippi river
