THE APPEAL.

Arrest of two Jewish Rabbis for Selling Lottery Tickets.

Yesterday afternoon Rabbi Lassin, the leading rabbi of the Jews in this city, came to the Mayor's office, with one Aaron Friedmann, and stated that certain rabbis were engaged in illegal and immoral practices; that many of his people were poor, and upon investigating the cause, found that they were largely purchasing lottery tickets of rabbis, whom he named, and that he was anxious to have the business stopped.

Mr. Friedmann then made affidavits, setting forth that for more than a year he has been in the habit of purchasing lottery tickets of Rabbi Abraham Joseph Asch, at 20 and 22 Mott street, and that Asch is agent for Prussian, Saxon, and Hamburg lotteries in this city; and that about three weeks ago he bought a ticket in a lottery of Saxony, which was begun; also that Rabbi Moses Levi, 253 Broome street, is agent for Asch, and has been in the habit of selling tickets for a year or more.

Warrants were issued for the apprehension of the parties, and Sergeant Berney, with a squad of men, made a descent upon Asch, while another squad waited upon Levi. The sergeant found Asch in his synagogue, 78 Allen street, dressed in a white robe and red cap, standing before a lighted candle, surrounded by some four hundred of his people, to whom he was teaching Hebrew. When the officer made known his errand the utmost horror and indignation was manifested by the Jews. They exclaimed loudly against the sacrilege of dragging a priest from an altar of the holy temple, and declared that he should not be taken, at the same time rushing forward to his defense. But the officers were too prompt in their movements for the people, and hurrying him out locked him up in the station-house.

The party proceeded to his residence, which they searched. The wife and daughter of the rabbi having been warned, had turned the furniture upside down, probably destroying the tickets; but some were left, which they tore up and attempted to eat. They were determined that the house should not be searched, and attacked the officers with great spirit. At last a little daughter of the rabbi ran up to the sergeant and said:

"Oh, don't hurt my mother, and I will tell you where the tickets are."

"Well," said the sergeant, "where are they?"

"In the synagogue, under the altar."

The sergeant immediately returned to the synagogue. The Jews declared they should not enter, and made a stout resistance, but the officers forced their way in and searched under the altar, but no tickets were found. If any had been kept there they had been removed.

The officers who arrested Levi were also resisted unsuccessfully.

During the night hundreds of Israelites visited the station house, demanding the release of the prisoners, and exclaiming that it was a sacrilege to arrest a rabbi, who could do no wrong.

The prisoners were this morning taken before the Mayor, whose office was also thronged with Jews. They said it would have been better for the man who made the complaint had he never been born. The rabbis were held to bail in the sum of $1,000 each to answer the charge in the Court of General Sessions.—New York Post.

THE ATLANTIC CABLE.—A Scotch paper has a letter from a correspondent, seemingly familiar with the operations of Professor Thomson at Valentia Bay, which gives some information respecting the condition of the Atlantic cable. According to this writer, the Professor and his assistants have completely lixed the principal injury at two hundred and eighty miles from the shore; that the cable is there encaded of two inches of its gutta percha insulation, and the copper wire exposed to the action of the salt water; that the injury is irreparable, for though it can be covered with oxidation, by transmitting to it a strong current of positive (copper) electricity, the oxide is soluble in water, and washes off almost as rapidly as it is formed; and this weary operation is at the expense of the copper wire, which is eaten away by it. The only results, according to this writer, are these: the fault can be mended temporarily at the expense of the wire, or the wire can be preserved, and the fault allowed to increase.

He says also that the few words received at Valentia a little while ago, were but a "continuance of the capricious and uncertainty which have given so much annoyance since a few days after the cable was landed;" and that at the time of his writing, October 21, "the usual alternating positive and negative currents are being sent in, so that the conductor must give way soon, either entirely or in part; if only one of the wires corrodes through and falls upon the outer sheathing, communication will be wholly cut off."

A NEGRO RUNNING FOR REPRESENTATIVE IN MAINE.—An election for Representative, to fill the place of Wm. Chase, resigned, took place in Portland, Me., on the 18th inst. Neal Dow, the great temperance and negro-equality champion, and a colored man named Peter Francis, were the principal competitors. There being but an indifferent selection of candidates, comparatively few votes were cast; but the people generally preferred the white man to the Republican of a darker shade, and so "temperance and freedom" triumphed by a majority of 772 votes. How Neal Dow could have conscientiously lent himself to defeat so rare an opportunity for the practical elevation of the colored race, we can't conjecture.
