THE APPEAL.

Old Hundred.

If it be true that Luther composed that tune, and if the worship of mortals is carried on the wings of angels to Heaven, how often has he heard the declaration, "They are singing Old Hundred now." The solemn strain carries us back to the times of the Reformers—Luther and his devoted band. He, doubtless, was the first to strike the grand old chords in the public sanctuary of his own Germany. From his stentorian lungs they rolled, vibrating not through vaulted cathedral roof, but along a grander arch, the eternal heavens. He wrought into each note his own sublime faith, and stamped it with that faith's immortality. Hence it cannot die. Neither men nor angels will let it pass into oblivion.

Can you find a tomb in the land where sealed lips lay, that have not sung that tune? If they were gray old men, they had heard or sung "Old Hundred." If they were babies, they smiled as their mothers rocked them to sleep, singing "Old Hundred." Sinner and saint have joined with endless congregations where it has, with and without the pealing organ, sounded on the sacred air.

The dear little children, looking with wondering eyes on this strange world, have lisped it. The sweet young girl, whose tombstone told of sixteen summers; she whose pure, innocent face haunted you with its mild beauty, loved "Old Hundred," and she sang it, closed her eyes and seemed communing with the angels who were soon to claim her. He whose manhood was devoted to the service of God, and he who with the white hand placed over his labouring breast, loved "Old Hundred;" and though sometimes his lips only move, way down in his heart, so soon to cease its throbs, the holy melody was sounding. The dear white-haired old father, with his tremulous voice, how he loved "Old Hundred." Do you see him now, sitting in the venerable arm chair, his hands crossed over the head of his cane, his silvery locks floating off from his hollowed temples, and a tear stealing down his furrowed, furrowed cheeks, that thin, quivering, faltering sound, now bursting forth, now listening for in vain? If you do not, we do; and from such lips, hallowed by four score years' service in the master's cause, "Old Hundred," sounds, indeed, a sacred melody.

You may fill your choirs with Sabbath prime donnas, whose daring notes emulate the steeple and cost most as much, but give us the spirit-stirring tones of the Lutheran hymn, sung by old and young together. Martyrs have hallowed it; it has gone up from the bed of the saints. The old churches, where generation after generation have worshiped, and where many scores of the dead have been carried and laid before the altar, where they gave themselves to God, seem to breathe of "Old Hundred" from the vestibule to tower top—the air is haunted with its spirit.

Think a moment of the assembled company who have at different times and in different places joined in the familiar tune! Turong upon throng—the strong, the timid, the gentle, the brave, the beautiful, the rapt faces all beaming with inspiration of the heavenly sounds.

"Old Hundred!" king of the sacred band of "ancient airs!" Never shall our ears grow weary of hearing or our tongues of singing Christ who we get to Heaven, we know not what the first triumphal strains that welcome us may be:

"Be thou, O God! exalted high!"

THE POPE AND MISS DIX.—The famous American reformer of the treatment of the insane, Miss Dix, gives the following interesting particulars of her visit to Rome and the Pope:

"I visited the lunatic asylum, and my heart revolted at the sight. I did not see sick persons whom man should pity, unfortunates whom we should endeavor to cure; they were brutes in chains, the dens of which seemed never to have been cleaned. Several days after my visit to the lunatic asylum, I was presented to his holiness the Pope, who knew the object of my travels. The Pope asked me in the most friendly manner whether I had yet visited the asylum at Rome? I had the courage to answer, 'Yes; and I am convinced that your holiness has not yet paid it a visit.' Pio Nono quickly raised his head, and only answered with an expressive, attentive look. I understood him, and related to him, in a voice full of emotion, all the horrors and barbarism I had witnessed. I ventured, trembling without myself, to hold expression on the unchristian treatment of the unhappy beings. The respect-commanding man of Christendom listened with earnest attention, and said briefly, after I had concluded, 'Come again in a week's time.'

And I then left his presence. My anxiety was unbearably great. The Protestant, the stranger, had perhaps risked too much. Although I was conscious in my inermost heart of my good intentions, I yet passed a sleepless night and a day, of the most inward agitation. It created a deep sensation when the Holy Father, two days after I had been presented to him, suddenly, while taking one of his drives, stopped before the gate of the lunatic asylum, and opened an hour in it. The week had passed, and I stood, as I had been commanded, in the Vaccican before the Pope. In a manner as grave as it was calm, Pio Nino said to me: I have appointed a commission charged to lay before me a proposition concerning the management of a lunatic asylum, conformably to the rules of humanity and morality, in the shortest time possible. When you visit Rome again, your just and pious wishes will have been fulfilled. I thank you for your counsel in this matter. May Heaven bless you!' I bent my knee, deeply moved, not before the head of Catholic Christendom, but before the wise Prince and the good man."

But having determined to sell, I offer the Negroes in families—for cash; and the Land one third cash, the balance in two equal installments, on a credit of two and three years, bearing eight per cent. interest—the Land to be divided into tracts to suit purchasers, if so desired.

A portion of the land and slaves are under mortgage to secure a debt of about eight thousand dollars to J. W. Moon, of New Orleans.

J. E. Appersonn is manager upon the place, and to him, and to C. L. McKee, of Mount Holly, Union county, I refer persons who wish to examine the property. I expect to be on the place, or be that time, (October,) by the middle of December next.
