TRAFFIC OFFICER IN DEEP TROUBLE FOR NIGHT RAID

Policeman Cullen Uses Jack Lucas' Car To 'Kidnap' H. F. Reidel

LATTER IS WITNESS IN CITY JAIL EXPOSE

'Guardian of Law' and Ex-Convict Said To Have Attacked Mrs. Reidel

In an automobile stolen from the Schuman garage and owned by Jack Lucas, Police Officer Cullen, wearing his star, accompanied by Charley Cash, an ex-convict, visited the home of H. F. Reidel, 1553 Asylum road, late Saturday night and attempted to drag Reidel into the automobile. Failing in this, according to the statement by Reidel, the pair assaulted Mrs. Reidel while her husband was at the telephone calling for police assistance.

Reidel is one of the principal witnesses against the police department in the prison scandal investigation being carried on by the territorial grand jury. Remembering the beating up administered by some, as yet not announced, thugs recently, as reported in this paper, Reidel is taking no chances and by refusing to leave his house on Saturday night probably escaped Gough's fate.

Lucas Swears to Warrant

The recklessness with which the alleged attempted assault upon Reidel was carried out is shown from the fact that the police officer charged, who was until a few weeks ago one of the guards at the jail, wore his police star where it could be seen and then left his patrol box key in the stolen automobile when it was left, early some time Saturday morning, standing outside the garage.

Yesterday, following the swearing out of a warrant by Mr. Lucas against Cash, charging him with two offenses, larceny and malicious injury—the machine being returned with a smashed fender—Sheriff Rose suspended Cullen and passed the incident up to the civil service commission.

Cullen's excuse in the matter of the automobile is that he did not know it was Lucas', which excuse, considering that he is a traffic officer at the corner which the Lucas machine passes several times daily, is not one that Mr. Lucas accepts cheerfully.

Following his suspension, Cullen is reported to have met Reidel on the street yesterday and to have remarked, "I'll get you yet, you —— ——."

Reidel Damaging Witness

Reidel, who served a term in jail for gross cheat, has been able to corroborate much that has been told by Gough regarding the rotten conditions prevailing in the jail, whereby gambling has been allowed, prostitutes have been given the run of the jail, the prisoners Boggs, McGrath, Lewis and Bowers were free to come and go, although they had pleaded guilty to a serious felony and were awaiting sentence, and the conduct of the police, culminating in the failure of McGrath to return from one of his usual nocturnal strolls, became so wholly rotten that it was common knowledge among all the prisoners.

"I have personally seen the wives of some of the prisoners take whisky flasks from their stockings and the bosoms of their dresses," says Reidel. "I have seen women I knew were from twilei coming and going, without question and without the least attempt at interference. They would not even ask permission at the office to see the prisoners. They would rap at the gate, the guard would open it for them and they would march straight to the hospital, where Boggs, McGrath, Lewis and Bowers were being kept.

Booze Ordered by Telephone

"These men were free to walk into the jailer's office and call up any one they choose on the telephone. Every time they ran short of booze, they ordered it by phone from the Kentucky saloon, and it was always promptly delivered to them, without question by any one.

"There was a good deal of indignation among the other prisoners at the favors shown these men, although none blamed Fern. We all took it for granted that Fern was acting under orders in allowing the drinking and gambling and women. He never said anything, but he looked at times as if he were disgusted at the whole thing. Ponohu, the deputy, didn't seem to care at all. He acted just as if everything was going on as it should.

"What made the men in the jail mad was that when the hold-up men were put in the hospital, they took the mattresses away from the trusties to make up nice beds for the robbers, while they took a man who was sick in the hospital out of his bed to give it to Bowers. The sick man had to sleep on the floor.

"Until the time when the wives of these men commenced to send in their meals from outside, they ate at the jailer's table, which was all set for them."

Reidel Knows Too Much

Reidel has a great deal more to tell concerning jail conditions than is published here. He attributes his knowledge and his readiness to tell the truth as the reason why the attempt to take him out somewhere in an automobile, for some ulterior purpose, and why the assault upon him and his wife were made. Cullen was a guard during the McGrath "imprisonment and escape" episode, being since promoted by Sheriff Rose to a position as traffic officer. Cash, the other one charged in the assault and auto-stealing cases, was serving a two-year term for the forgery at the same time. He has been out of jail only a few days.

Reidel says that Cullen and Cash stayed at his place on Saturday night, after both Reidel and Mrs. Reidel had been struck, and there had been a general fight to frustrate the designs of the two men, until the police had actually answered the call for help. The stolen auto was not started away until the other police came in, when they were stopped by Cullen, who said to them:

"No use going in there now. It's all over."

Yesterday morning, when Reidel called upon Sheriff Rose for a warrant against Cullen and Cash, charging them with assault and battery upon Mrs. Reidel, the sheriff told him that Mrs. Reidel would have to swear to the complaint personally. He refused to let Reidel get out a warrant on his own charge.

Cullen Tells His Story

Questioned by Sheriff Rose yesterday, Cullen said that he went to Riedel's house to get an expression of opinion with regard to "certain attempts that were being made to do Jailer Fern dirt," in the matter of the escape of McGrath and the attendant scandal. Sheriff Rose asked Cullen who told him to go and the latter said that he had acted entirely of his own free will. Rose asked Cullen if he had seen Reidel and Cullen said that he had not done so as his wife would not let him. Cullen admitted having had a scuffle with Mrs. Reidel on the veranda of the latter's house. After the scuffle, Cullen, according to his own statement, went away. He admitted to the sheriff that his companion was Charles Cash.

As soon as Sheriff Rose heard of Cullen's escapade yesterday morning, he sent for the traffic officer and questioned him with regard to the occurrences. Cullen said that he had been drinking and that he wasn't quite sure what he had said or done, whereupon the sheriff told him that he could either send in his resignation or face charges before the civil service commission. Cullen said that he would tender his resignation right away.

ADMIRAL LITTLE IN NAVAL COURT

Accused of Neglect of Duty In Accepting Submarine K-2 When Defective

(Associated Press by Federal Wireless.)

BOSTON, November 2—Rear-Admiral William N. Little, U. S. N., retired, was placed on trial here yesterday on the charge of neglect of duty, and entered a plea of not guilty. The admiral is alleged to have accepted the new submarine K-2 on verbal assurance of an official of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company that any defect would be remedied.

The date for the court-martial of Rear-Adml. William N. Little, U. S. N., retired, was set for October 18 but postponed at his request until November 1. Admiral Little went to Washington on October 15, and discussed his case with Secretary Daniels. He said that the date originally set for the trial would not allow him sufficient time to prepare his defense, and the postponement was granted.

The navy department made public extracts from letters of Rear-Admiral Little and Capt. Ridley McLean, judge advocate general, which show the precise character of the charge upon which Rear-Admiral Little is being tried. Rear-Admiral Bradley is serving as president of the court.

"This has been a most painful thing for me to do," said the Secretary in the statement he has issued, "but Rear-Admiral Little accepted this boat (submarine K-2) and said it was all right on the strength of the fact that some officer of the contracting company said it would be made all right. He apparently thought little of it. As a matter of fact, the K-2 has given us infinite trouble.

"No other way exists to get at the bottom of the matter than through an investigation by a court. If the officer is not blamable he will be vindicated. If he is, that will be made clear. He will be given full opportunity to present his side, and if he wants more time to prepare his case he will get it.

"I want every officer of the navy to know that when he makes an inspection it is something to be taken seriously and if he fails to conduct an adequate inspection I shall consider it a grave thing."

In documents relating to the case, Admiral Little is quoted as having said that acceptance of the boat was based on the contractor's agreement "to stand back of the battery for all time as to the alleged careless workmanship." The present navy inspector at the Fore River shipbuilding plant, where the submarine was constructed, reported he was unable to find any written record of the agreement in the files of his office.

PROSECUTION PERMITS KOREAN TO SAVE NECK

With the consent of the prosecution, Hong Hak Sun, a Korean charged with first-degree murder, under an indictment returned against him by the territorial grand jury two weeks ago, withdrew his former plea of not guilty in Judge Ashford's court yesterday and pleaded guilty to a charge of second-degree murder. He will be sentenced by Judge Ashford at nine o'clock on Saturday morning.

Hong shot and killed a fellow Korean a few weeks ago at his home at Kahaluu, this island. He claims that when he returned home he discovered the man there in company with his wife.

Under the law, whoever is found guilty of second-degree murder shall be sentenced to a term of imprisonment not less than twenty years.

NIGHT RAID MADE ON CHAMBERS OF FEDERAL JURISTS

Drawers In Desks of Judges Clemons and Dole Are Broken Open

PRIVATE PAPERS THERE ARE RUMMAGED THROUGH

Bourbons May Have Wanted To Learn If Judge Dole Sought Reappointment

Breaking into Judge Clemons' chambers on the third floor of the Model Building, Fort street, which houses all the departments of the United States court for Hawaii, someone unknown or, if his identity is known, it is being kept a deep secret, broke open several drawers in the judge's flat-top desk, rummaged through private papers and otherwise played havoc with the dignity and order of the office.

All this happened either late Friday night or Saturday morning, but every official in the building has kept uncommonly silent in regard to the "burglary." When asked over the telephone last night, Foster L. Davis, acting clerk of the federal court, knew nothing about the occurrence and refused to speak on the subject. Judge Dole did not deny knowledge of the story, but referred The Advertiser to Judge Clemons. Judge Clemons was out at a dinner.

Judge Dole's Room Entered

The plot thickens.

Judge Dole's chambers also were visited on the same night and the prowler also took a fancy to go through the private papers kept there. Just what the motive for the visit was is not known. At least, none is given. It is generally known that no money is kept in the chambers of the federal court judges. That whoever rummaged the place was after some particular "scrap of paper," probably a cable message or two, is surmissed. There is a possibility that some one interested sought to learn the contents of some cable or cables received, say, from Washington, and probably also sought to learn what answers, if copies had been kept, as is usually the case, had been sent.

Went Through Transom

The double door leading from the hallway to Judge Clemons' chambers was found wide-open Saturday morning and in the same manner was found the door leading from Judge Clemons' room into the court room proper. The transom above the big door was open. It is surmised that the prowler entered through the transom and descended by way of the bookcases which line up the walls. The accumulated dust on the bookcase below the transom shows indications of having been disturbed, but no clear marks remained. After going through the papers the "burglar" opened the door from the inside and walked out. He forgot to close the door after him.

Nothing Missing Is Report

Nothing appears to be missed from among the papers in Judge Clemons' rooms. This was learned definitely yesterday. Nothing could be learned in regard to the papers in Judge Dole's rooms, just across the hallway from Judge Clemons' chambers.

That an official investigation is under way, has been ascertained. No person, however, in the building is suspected. The night visitor is believed to have been a man from the outside. Had the purpose of the night exploration been to secure monetary plunder, it is argued, he would have visited either the clerk's office on the same floor or the marshal's office on the lower floor. As far as could be learned neither office was disturbed, although both were gone over for signs when the work upstairs was discovered.

Appointment At Bottom

At the bottom of the whole thing, it is believed, was anxiety in certain Bourbon quarters over the pending federal court appointment. Somebody wanted to learn, if possible, what Judge Dole "was up to" and broke into the federal court chambers, getting into Judge Clemons' offices first by mistake, and then tackling the desk of Judge Dole.

JURY DISAGREED IN SILVA LIQUOR CASE

After spending five hours in attempting to agree on a verdict, the jury which heard the testmony in the case of the Territory against Manuel de Silva, charged with and tried for selling liquor without a license, reported a disagreement to Judge Ashford yesterday and was discharged, a mistrial being entered. The setting of the case for its second trial will come up at a later date. Roy D. Schlemmer and John H. Fischer were the witnesses for the prosecution, while Silva took the stand alone for the defense. Deputy City Attorney Carden prosecution and J. Alfred Magoon appeared for Silva.

PUBLIC HEALTH OFFICER IS ON WAITING ORDERS

Dr. Duncan A. Carmichael, senior surgeon of the United States public health service, is on waiting orders until November 15, according to word reaching here yesterday from Washington. He came here in 1898 and was quarantine officer of Honolulu. It is presumed that his being placed on waiting orders is because of illness or that it presages his early retirement.

SUICIDE ABOARD STEAMER VENTURA

First-Cabin Passenger Hangs Himself Off Port With His Necktie

H. P. Edwards, a first cabin passenger by the steamer Ventura, arriving yesterday morning, was found dead in his stateroom at six fifteen o'clock yesterday morning while the vessel was off port. He killed himself by hanging while the Ventura was between Makapuu and Koko Head about 5:30 o'clock. He committed suicide within the three-mile limit, otherwise the county coroner would have had no jurisdiction.

W. Miller, sharer of Edwards' stateroom, discovered the body of the latter, the necktie being tied to the key of a porthole. Miller turned out for a stroll on deck at five o'clock and on returning to his cabin about six o'clock found Edwards dead. Edwards' razor was laid out, evidently for use had the necktie failed.

Edwards, according to Miller, had been greatly depressed since leaving San Francisco, and Sunday was the first time that he had appeared on deck. Deceased told Miller that he was going to Sydney, that he had had a great deal to worry him, and that yesterday was his thirty-ninth birthday.

Left Letter To Brother

Edwards left a letter addressed to his brother, Capt. Raymond Sheldon, U. S. A., 1824 Republic building, Chicago. With the letter was a note requesting that the letter, which was unsealed, be forwarded to the address on the envelope. Captain Sheldon is attached to the Eighteenth Infantry, with an office at State and Adams streets, Chicago.

The letter contained references to personal and financial troubles and stated that the writer was going to attempt to establish his name and fortune. The writer also referred to his children who, he said, would be left without a father's love and care.

The letter was turned over to Coroner Asch by J. W. Robertson, manager of the shipping department of C. Brewer & Co., who refused to make it public, wishing that the coroner do that.

Edwards' personal effects included $24.10 in cash. His personal belongings were new and apparently had been purchased shortly prior to the departure of the steamer from San Francisco.

Letters and Messages

Among the effects was a letter addressed to "H. P. Edwards," from his wife, advising him to start life anew.

A wireless message from Captain Sheldon was received aboard the Ventura, conveying best wishes and love and a hope that the recipient's new venture would be crowned with success.

A letter was found, written from Orange, New Jersey, by the thirteen-year-old daughter of the dead man. The letter mentions having heard from her father from San Bernardino and Cutario, California, and contained many expressions of endearment.

An inquest on the body of Edwards was held yesterday afternoon, the testimony taken dealing with the finding of the body. The inquest was continued until one o'clock this afternoon, in order that the testimoy of W. Miller, who shared the cabin with deceased, and who stopped off here, may be obtained.

Miller summoned stewards when he found the body and then called Dr F. W. Townsend, ship's surgeon, who tried to revive Edwards, but found him dead. He evidently had been hanging one-half to three-quarters of an hour.

Doctor Townsend, Capt. J. H. Dawson of the Ventura and the stewards were summoned as witnesses at the inquest yesterday afternoon. Miller remained at the dock an hour or so on advice of Purser Robert S. Acheson, but, as he was not summoned, he left the dock. He was a Honolulu passenger.

LAWSUIT ON MAUI HAS AUTO THRILL

Litigation Over Land Tenancy Results In Cross-Country Race and 'Battle'

Over in Maui there is a lawsuit involving land tenancy which is called the Yip Lan case. Yip Lan and a band of followers lay claim to land tilled by Toyosaki Kiyamoto near Kula.

Last week it developed from a case to a battle—after a fashion—with all the melodramatic thrills of a movie. There was a cross-country automobile race by rival attorneys and a fight for possession of the place, but there the thrills ceased and it became a case again with the court room once more the setting.

The automobile race had its origin in court action setting aside a temporary injunction restraining the Yip Lan contingent from interfering with the property.

Enos Vincent, attorney for the Chinese, immediately departed in his machine for his clients, intending to put them in possession of the land. Eugene Murphy, attorney for the Japanese, started in his machine about the same time to advise his client. En route he passed Vincent, but soon had a breakdown and Vincent regained the lead. Abandoning the car, Murphy ran to the home of his client.

Murphy instructed the Japanese to resist any attempt of the Chinese to take possession. Vincent arrived with his Chinese and told them to take possession. Words grew heated and Murphy struck Vincent, it is said. But Sheriff Crowell arrived and mediated so successfully that a truce was declared. Then the scene shifted to the court room, where another injunction was issued against the Japanese and a receiver appointed and thus ended the battle of Kula.

JUDGE DOLE WILL GET ANOTHER TERM ON FEDERAL BENCH

This Is Latest Advice With Reference To Local United States Court

BOURBON PLUM-HUNTERS AGAIN 'DOUBLE-CROSSED'

Replying To Query By Department of Justice, Jurist Says He Will Serve

Hon. Sanford B. Dole will be reappointed senior judge of the United States district court of Hawaii.

This was learned yesterday and the story comes from an authoritative source. It is known that the department of justice in Washington has cabled to Judge Dole. He has been asked whether he would be willing to accept a reappointment. The judge has answered that he will. Judge Dole's second term will expire on December 16.

It is understood that those opposed to his reappointment and who favor the appointment of some malihini, three or four of whom are now on the ground being groomed by different factions of the local Democratic party, have assiduously circulated for some time past the story that the judge was to retire from the bench and would not accept a reappointment. Judge Dole had been noncommittal on the subject, however, until lately, when information was given out that he would be willing to continue in office if he were offered the opportunity.

News Causes Change in Plans

Several candidates have been mentioned as prospective successors to Judge Dole, among these being Jeff McCarn, Horace W. Vaughan, the district attorney and his new assistant; Circuit Judge Stuart, Circuit Judge Ashford and Frank K. Pittman, the last mentioned being a very recent arrival here.

Since it became learned that Judge Dole would not retire from the bench unless someone else was given the appointment, a change of front has taken place among the Democratic factions in Honolulu.

Mr. Vaughan, on whose first appearance in Honolulu it was learned was to succeed McCarn, was more recently spoken of as a likely successor to Judge Dole. The talk that he will succeed McCarn was revived stronger than ever yesterday, with the added information that this change will not wait for the end of the year, but will be made almost immediately, McCarn to return to Nashville, Tennessee, where he will be made a wheelhorse for President Wilson's renomination in the next presidential campaign.

Frank K. Pittman a Factor

All talk, it is said, of either Judge Ashford or Judge Stuart succeeding Judge Dole has, within a very short time, simmered down next to nothing. The latest factor in the field was, therefore, Frank K. Pittman, who arrived here a few weeks ago with the avowed purpose, properly press-agented, to engage in the practise of law. It was given out that Mr. Pittman had decided to locate in Honolulu on account of his wife's health, but Mr. Pittman made no move seeking to be admitted either in the federal court or the territorial supreme court to practise law in this Territory.

May Go to Washington

On Saturday Mr. Pittman informed The Advertiser that he and his family were returning tomorrow in the Wilhelmina to the Coast, having received information of the serious illness of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Coleman, in Sacramento. He added that as soon as it would be convenient, he and Mrs. Pittman would return to Honolulu. It was rumored yesterday that while Mr. Pittman may be going to Sacramento, it is quite likely that his ultimate destination is Washington. Yesterday he showed considerable interest when the probability of Judge Dole's reappointment was discussed in his hearing.

HAWAIIAN WOMANHOOD INTERESTS MAGAZINES

Covers of at least two magazines soon may bear pictures of Hawaiian types of young womanhood. Letters received yesterday by the Hawaii Promotion Committee from two of the leading magazines said the suggestion of the committee for the change from the mainland type was being considered.

One magazine has turned the suggestion over to its artists and another is desirous of receiving pictures from local artists on the assumption that Hawaiian painters, being more familiar with the subjects, can draw truer to life.

Replies from other magazines are expected soon by the promotion committee.

PLANTATION LABORERS WILL RECEIVE BONUSES

More than $700,000 will be paid out to sugar plantation workers in a few days as bonus. The bonus to each man will be at a rate of 20 per cent of his earnings. This year's bonus exceeds the total of the three other bonus periods. With bonuses to those not employed in manual labor the amount is expected to be about $1,000,000.

ANOTHER OFFENSIVE AGAINST SUEZ CANAL

(Associated Press by Federal Wireless.)

PARIS, November 2.—A Rome despatch, quoting the Tribune of Rome, says the Germans have prepared a new offensive in conjunction with the Turks against the Suez Canal.

The British, this despatch says, are making gigantic preparations to meet the attack along the channel. All land adjacent to the canal has been flooded and the forts stand up barely above the water line.

Gunboats are being used to carry supplies to the forts, it is said.

FORM OF GOVERNMENT RESTS WITH CHINESE

(Associated Press by Federal Wireless.)

PEKING, November 1.—China has definitely rejected the proposals of Japan, Britain and Russia for a postponement of the decision upon a change in government to the monarchy form. Tsao Yu Lin, vice minister of foreign affairs, today informed the American legation that the decision upon the form of government rests with the people.
