MEMPHIS APPEAL.

BURIAL OF THE BEAUTIFUL.

Where shall the dead and the beautiful sleep?
In the vale where the willow and cypress weep;
Where the wind of the west breathes its softest sigh,
Where the silvery stream is flowing nigh.
And the pure, clear drops of the rising sprays
Glitter like gems in the bright moon's rays—
Where the stars twinkle and may never dapple
Night's tears over the form we mourn so well—
In the vale where the sparkling waters flow;
Where the fairest, earliest violets grow;
Where the sky and the earth are softly fair,
Bury her there—bury her there! Bury her there—bury her there!

Where shall the dead and the beautiful sleep?
Where will flowers bloom in the valley deep;
Where the sweet voices of springtime softly rail,
In purity, over the sleeper's bier?
Where is heard the voice of the sinless dove,
Bemoaning her absent, truant love;
Where no column proud in the sun may glow,
To mock the heart filled in wailing below;
Where pure hearts are sleeping, forever blest;
Where wandering Peri love to rest;
Where the sky and the earth are softly fair,
Bury her there—bury her there!

"UNION MEN" IN THE SOUTH.

Certain parties having been deputed by the Post Office Department at Washington, to hunt up acceptable people in the South, upon whom to bestow the emoluments of postal offices, the following deplorable accounts of the search have been sent in:

From W. L. Kelly, Special Agent for Miss.

"As instructed, I called upon Gov. Humphreys and stated my business, and received from him the discouraging prediction that no citizen of the State, fit to handle mail, could be found in Mississippi, who would or would take the oath of office. He was pleased, however, to give notice to the General Assembly, then in session, of the Department's desire to extend mail facilities to the State. This opinion of the Governor, I am satisfied, is, or was, a part of the programme of the makers of political options of the South, to keep every man in line, and attach to the acceptance of office under the United States, with the present oath, something of dishonor. Some seemed to act as though the course would compel the Congress to modify the oath.

"I am satisfied that, but for the pestilent spirit, more than two-thirds of the offices should have long since been filled. As it was, I soon became satisfied that no one could be safely recommended for office which had small salaries attached, for though feeling a willingness to take the oath might be evinced, to-morrow, intimidated by public opinion, it would be declined. As it was, I forwarded to the Appointment Office petitions and recommendations for postmasters at over one hundred offices, embracing nearly every county seat in the State."

From P. H. Woodward, Special Agent for Ga.

ATLANTA, GA., Jan. 1, 1866.

* * * *

"In forwarding nominations for postmasters to the Appointment Office, I have used increased care to name only such candidates as I was assured could take the oath. Some having received appointments, decline to take the prescribed oath on grounds apparently frivolous—as the feeling and chattering of Confederate soldiers without pay. Others—Union men—decline because unwilling to acknowledge to their neighbors the unpopular fact that they gave no voluntary aid to the rebellion. While we have secured many excellent men for postmasters in this State, the stringency of the oath is depriving the Department of others, whose services would be invaluable."

From D. B. Parker, Special Agent for Va.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
RICHMOND, Jan. 1, 1866.

Hon. G. W. McClellan, Second Assistant Postmaster-General:

Sir—I have the honor to make the following report of operations during the month of December, eighteen hundred and sixty-five:

A considerable portion of my time has been spent in travelling over the different mail routes in the State, and in doing what I could to systematize mail matters upon those routes, as well as to induce the people living upon the line of routes now under contract to apply for the reopening of their post offices, and the recommendation of suitable persons for postmasters. But in this the people see, in many cases, the to them insurmountable obstacle of the testoath, or "iron clad," as many are pleased to term it.

In this connection, it may be proper for me to state, as the result of my observation, that there are persons in nearly every neighborhood who could take the oath prescribed, but such persons are frequently so scorned and despised for their sentiments that they would hardly be likely to be recommended for the position of postmaster. I do not wish to be understood as applying this state of feelings to all cases, and to every neighborhood, for I think it rather the exception to the rule.

In the sparsely settled portions of the State, I find that many of the smaller offices was established for the convenience of one or more families only. Seemingly there was no rule corresponding with that observed in other sections of the country, which governed the establishment of postoffices.

The railroad lines of communication in the State are still laboring under many disadvantages, but have all shown a laudable desire to render every possible facility for the transportation of the mails.

D. B. PARKER, Special Agent.

From the Round Table.

INCENDIARY PUBLICATIONS.

There is, indeed, a gloomy prospect before us, and we may well despair if the moral sentiment of our people will tolerate the publication in our periodicals of such articles as that entitled "A Freedman's Story," commenced in the February number of the "Atlantic Monthly." The authentic history of the lives of incendiaries, highwaymen, and murderers, or the autobiographies and dying confessions of murderers, have not heretofore figured in the class of literature which the moral and more intelligent portion of our reading people have delighted to patronize. This story is introduced by a regular contributor of the magazine, and published professedly to show the fitness of the negro to exercise the elective franchise; and if the story of this negro be true, there are few white men in the country that excel him in hardened villainy. Yet this contributor holds him up as a model man, and by his intimations we are to conclude that should the merited halter be meted out to this instrument of the devil the writer will place him on his saints' calendar second only to John Brown.

This negro in his youth prating for freedom, fearful of being sold away, could not pack his bundle and leave, but wantonly provoked a quarrel with his master and hurt him badly, that he might have an excuse to run away. He went to Pennsylvania, lived a lawless life, in which he gloried in crimes no less than murder; converted a publican to abolitionism by setting fire to his barn in the night and watching it burn; he also set fire to the house of another Pennsylvanian in the night and saw it burn "beautifully," while he with his companions waited and watched to shoot the owner by the light of the flames when they should drive him out. So far has this "Freedman's Story" progressed. For the sake of our country, for the sake of the poor and suffering negro, and for Christianity's sake, let us have no more of this. These incidents, which the contributor to the Atlantic Monthly assumes as this man to relate so boastfully, happened before the war; let us hope that the acts of such a fiend under the barbarous license of war may never be made public.

It is a terrible wrong to the negro to hold up so depraved a being as a worthy and well-deserving model representative of the African race, and to publish such a story approvingly in a magazine that holds the position that the Atlantic does. Its tendency is to encourage the lawless in their lawlessness, and, as in this case, to imbue them with the notion that they are instruments in the hands of Providence for the working out of their own desires and passions. It also tends to increase the prejudice which exists against the negro race, encourages the shiftless and evil-minded to engage in riotous proceedings, and thus subjects them to the risk of becoming the victims of popular vengeance, that is not apt to discriminate between the good and the bad. The Atlantic Monthly has been the professed champion of the negro's cause, and it is certainly its duty to aid the great number of negroes that are striving to better their condition, and not to publish and praise one who, if his tale be true, should have been hung for his crimes in any portion of the State of Massachusetts, had they been committed within the jurisdiction of any of its courts.

☞ We have noticed in some of our exchanges, lately, advertisements "Divorces legally procured without trial," "Private consultations on divorces," etc. Western papers give some explanation of these notices. The Fort Wayne Gazette remarks that the annulling of marriages has become an immense business in Indiana, and asserts that "associations have been formed in the larger cities, with agencies throughout the Western States, especially in Indiana, to procure divorces for all imaginable persons, and for all imaginable causes, or for no cause whatever."

The St. Louis Dispatch thus describes the method of procedure: "It is done in this wise. A man in New York gets tired of his wife, and wishing a divorce, calls on the agency in that city, and arranges simply the fee he is to pay. All else is all in the agency. The case is sent to an Indiana lawyer, who commences proceedings, alleging in the complaint a half a dozen sufficient causes, no one of which is true; the case is referred to another of the same class of lawyers, who reports, without hearing a word of evidence in favor of the divorce; the court sees it is all right on the record, and unsuspectingly confirms the proceedings, and decrees the divorce. A copy of the record is forwarded to the New York agency, and the injured husband who has been toiling at home with his unsuspicious wife, coolly informs her that he has procured a divorce, and desires her to find another home and make way for the new wife."
