EAT LESS AND TAKE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Take A Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night, if you suffer with sick stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jud Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jud Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

The ideal salesman is the Want Ad; direct in method—convincing in argument—and reaching hundreds of customers in one day's work.

SOME INTERESTING DEMOCRATS AT ST.

Like a Ratification Meeting. Wilson's Renomination Meeting on Months Ago—Delegates Glad to Greet Leader Murphy.

THE harmony which the Republicans at Chicago sought for is one thing the Democrats at St. Louis were certain of from the start. The Democratic convention is more of a ratification meeting than anything else. The result at Chicago has been the popular subject at St. Louis. If the Democratic national convention possessed a press agent that loved his art he would be hunting for another job. Tody Hamilton would shake his head over the situation, for there is mighty little publicity met in sweet amity. National Committeeman Marsh of Iowa put the case.

"What we need," he said, "is a rip snorting, knockdown fight, followed by all around handshaking." Flags and signs at headquarters tell that St. Louis has a convention. The New York state delegation has done its best in this respect with its large headquarters on the ground floor directly opposite the national committee's headquarters in the Jefferson. The delegation's name is hung across the whole building, yet in spite of it some persons were confused by a sign in quotation marks directly beneath it, "Prominent Democrats." But closer inspection showed that this was not a boast, but an advertisement of a pamphlet on sale near by.

Two doors away is the flamboyant center of Roger Sullivan's vice presidential boom. Nearby is the headquarters of the Kentucky delegation. The Kentuckians housed themselves over a cafe. Before the Coliseum was fitted up for the convention the presence in one of the streets near by of an efficient looking steam roller was remarked on by many wags.

Murphy Center Figure. When Charles F. Murphy of Tammany Hall arrived he was the central figure in the Democratic convention crowd. He arrived from French Lick Springs, Ind., with Sheriff A. J. E. Smith, Senator Robert F. Wagner and Charley White.

He was surrounded soon after his arrival by a score of newspaper reporters from middle western cities and asked for his opinion of things generally. He did not deviate from his customary aloofness. Mr. Murphy was sketched by a dozen newspaper artists and was beseeched to let a flashlight be taken. He said he preferred to let some one else get the publicity. Mr. Murphy did not spend much time about the hotel lobby. He played golf at French Lick, and he looks much more like an athlete than usual. Sheriff Smith of New York also was a center of attraction. His reputation had preceded him to the middle west, and many of the Democrats from the west sought him out and introduced themselves to him.

Senator Wagner also was busy meeting persons who said they were eager to shake hands with the new Tammany triumvirate—Messrs. Murphy, Smith and Wagner.

Man Without a Candidate. Robert Emmet Burke, delegate at large from Illinois, is a man without a candidate. Elected as a delegate on a "no preference" platform, Mr. Burke is in a quandary because it was certain the name of President Wilson is the only one that will be placed before the convention. Mr. Burke declined to say whom he would vote for, but his fellow delegates agree that his vote would never be recorded.

Just in running up to the Jefferson from the Union station one is told two or three times that one is looking at the largest shoe manufacturing concerns in the United States. A tentative poll discloses twenty-four breweries. Either of these things might be true of Chicago if Chicago had thought of arranging it. But it takes a long walk to find twenty-four saloons, and that is where the difference begins. Between the Jefferson and the Coliseum there are many old-fashioned residences, such as one seen in Richmond, and, though most of them have had shop fronts built into them, they give an air which even the Coliseum's name cannot make reminiscent of Chicago. And while the streets in one direction are numbered in the modern fashion the streets across are named. One of them is Locust street. St. Louis is in the woolery of the old and the new.

Hotels Are Bustles. The pulse of a convention town must be felt in the hotels. In St. Louis one notices that more persons than usual are about, but they do not look more interesting or more interested than usual. And there is something that suggests that they have sought the southern atmosphere of the southern city. Even before the convention a hotel as the Marguilla chairs has the sidewalk for lounging guests. At the Planters Hotel Colonel Owen might still take his nightly three o'clock stroll, across in Sunday night. And even before the Jefferson, which has no visible decorations, one can see the signs of a busy town.

SIDE LIGHTS OF LOUIS CONVENTION

Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor, is at St. Louis. He attended his first political convention in Chicago, though he had attended many other conventions of other sorts before. He says solemnly that he had attended dentists' conventions, architects' conventions and conventions of traveling men, but there was something about the Chicago convention, he added, that was different from these others.

Bryan Acting as Reporter. Some people at St. Louis illustrated the tedium they saw in store for them by saying that for the first time since 1896 William Jennings Bryan would not be in a position to get busy at a Democratic convention. But that is a superficial view of a strange circumstance. The sight of Mr. Bryan at a Democratic convention, unable even to speak without a unanimous consent, is a spectacle not to be compared with anything Chicago had to offer.

Mr. Bryan failed to be elected a delegate, and only the joint proxy of a delegate and alternate from his state of Nebraska would entitle him to a seat and voice in the convention. He is at the convention, however, as a reporter, in which capacity he served at the Chicago convention also.

St. Louis has made unusual preparations for the entertainment of her guests, and St. Louis is just the right size for this kind of hospitality—big enough to do it well, small enough to care about doing it. It is even whispered that the prizefight ordinances were to be relaxed a little after the show for the benefit of Tammany's representatives, with their supposed hearty tastes. The story is that some twelve round bouts have been arranged, which Referee Charley White, who is sergeant-at-arms of the convention, should particularly enjoy.

Senator John F. Shafroth of Colorado is an advocate of the adoption of a gauge plank. "Equal suffrage is an evolution in Democratic government and because of its justice is sure to triumph," declared Mr. Shafroth.

Bill Sapp a Modest Man. It may be announced absolutely and exclusively that Colonel Bill Sapp, head of the Kansas delegation, positively would not accept the nomination for vice president and has never so much as thought of seeking the presidential nomination, at least not at the 1916 convention. Bill Sapp had started for the Jefferson elevator when he was flagged by a reporter, and he told the reporter so himself.

"This is a hard one," Colonel Sapp was informed, "that pressure which you will be unable to withstand will be brought to bear upon you, and therefore the convention will compel you to accept the vice presidency. In view of these facts, will you let us know for publication something about the things that you stand for, Colonel Sapp?"

"I am unalterably against prohibition in any form, state or national, first, last and always," cried Colonel Sapp, with vehemence. "And you may also say, my friend, that Colonel William F. Sapp of Galena, Kan., national committeeman from the great state of Kansas, a state, my friend, which geographically, metallurgically, agriculturally, intrinsically and as an actuality is the hub of this glorious Union—you may tell the culture and civilization in your state that, second to prohibition, Colonel Sapp of Galena is unalterably opposed to granting suffrage to the fair daughters, the wives, the mothers and the female aestheticians of this our glorious nation."

The chief amusement a delegate enjoyed in arriving at St. Louis was inspecting the Coliseum at Washington and Jefferson avenues, a mile from the Hotel Jefferson.

The old Planters hotel, one of the most famous inns in the world, is a center for convention visitors. Many southern delegates, bowing to tradition, are at the Planters and sip their toddies and enjoy the fragrance of mint juleps.

It is generally accepted at St. Louis that the present intention of President Wilson is not to make any campaign trips, although he undoubtedly will make a number of speeches during the summer and autumn. He has accepted invitations to speak in New York on June 30 and St. Louis on July 4 at the dedication of the new headquarters of the American Federation of Labor. Probably he will go to Philadelphia on June 25 and to Detroit early in July for meetings of advertising men.

Mr. Wilson probably will re-arrange official notification of his renomination at Shadow Lawn, the estate he has taken for the summer in New Jersey. Although he plans to remain in Washington until Congress adjourns, probably he will make a brief visit to Shadow Lawn for the occasion.
