HOW BEECHER GOT EVEN.

Made Woman Who Slammed Door in His Face Wish She Hadn't.

Two preachers not long ago were discussing the men who have been shining lights of the metropolitan pulpits, and as a matter of course, Henry Ward Beecher led the procession of reminiscences.

"Beecher was never a conspicuous example of a preacher and pastor combined," said one of the men. "He made the preaching end of the work his chief concern, and left the flock to be pastorized by his assistants.

"But once in a while he would decide that he owed it to his parishioners to make a round of calls. He himself told me the following story of an incident which had occurred on one of these expeditions.

"He had made out a list of names, had got the addresses from the church directory—perhaps an old one—and was taking them in their most convenient order. This brought him to a house in which, according to his list, lived a Mrs. B——.

"It was a very modest house, and when Mr. Beecher rang the bell he had to wait some time for a response. When this did come it was a very irritated one in the person of a woman, who was evidently just from the washtub.

"'Is Mrs. B—— in?' asked Mr. Beecher, in his best manner.

"'Don't live here!' snapped the woman, and slammed the door in his face.

"Mr. Beecher waited quietly on the doorstep until the woman had certainly had time to go back to the basement and to resume her washing. Then he rang the bell again. After a while the door was again opened by the sudsy female.

"'Who said she did?' exclaimed Beecher, and went down the steps and off up the street.

"'And I'm inclined to think,' he chuckled as he told the story, 'that woman will treat a civil question better the next time she meets one.'"

BABY SEAL WAS LONELY.

And Glad to Find a Protector in a Long-distance Swimmer.

From the San Francisco Call.

With a live young fur seal tucked comfortably under his arm, Sydney Cavill, the long-distance swimmer, paraded Market street yesterday. He discovered the animal off Bakers Beach while he was taking a practice swim yesterday. How the animal happened to be in those waters is a puzzle to scientists. It might have been brought in on some ship from the far North or it might have come with its mother from the ice floes of the Arctic.

Cavill, who is in the water every day training for his swim across the bay, was floating peacefully off Bakers Beach when a small head bobbed up alongside him. He did not know what it was, and his first impulse was to head for the shore. Cavill is a fast and strong swimmer, but when he looked behind the head was still close to him and the thing whined mournfully. With his swiftest strokes Cavill pressed for the dry land, and reached the beach exhausted and panting. Close behind him was the strange animal. It crawled out on the sand and followed Cavill, whining plaintively.

Then Cavill saw that the thing was harmless, and, walking over to the animal, he stroked it on the head. The little seal seemed as pleased as a tame animal. Cavill rushed into the surf, and the baby seal followed him, swimming close behind him. Apparently the little waif of the Arctic had adopted him.

When Cavill was tired of swimming for the day he tucked the little red seal under his arm, and the animal whined comfortably. It seemed to realize that it had found a protector. Last night it slept comfortably at the foot of Cavill's bed. Cavill has decided to adopt the seal permanently, and the animal will accompany him on all his swims. It is hard to tell which is the more at home in the salt water, the man or his pet.
