A REMARKABLE CONGRESS

President Harrison Thinks the Billion Dollar Body of the Above Description.

He Makes a Public Defense of All Its Partisan Proceedings.

Pleased with Himself as the Head of the Party—Abolish Chairmanship of Apologetics.

NEW YORK, March 20.—The Tribune's Washington correspondent had an interview with President Harrison just before he left on his recent pleasure trip, and tells his story in the following words:

While standing upon a rug in front of an open fire with his hands deeply buried in his pockets, the president talked in a direct and forcible fashion about the work of the administration during the winter congress just gone, and incidentally upon the work of the future. The president was first asked what he thought of the work of the Fifty-first congress.

He said: "In many ways it has been most remarkable. Its work has been of the most important character. It has been done in the face of tremendous criticism, and the legislation evolved has been the outgrowth of fierce contentions. The result is one that will stand well in history, and one which the country will approve.

"The principle of majority rule has also been asserted in a marked degree, and the adherence to that rule is, in my judgment, the one principle which will preserve the institutions of our country."

The president added, in following out this line of thought: "That the majority shall rule is an underlying principle of our institutions. It is what has contributed in the past to our security, and it is the only guarantee in the future for our safety. The minute you pass from that and concede minority rule you go to chaos and confusion. Some of the fiercest contentions in congress have been made in a vain attempt upon the part of the minority to control the action of the majority."

The president was asked if he thought the republicans would make the issues involved in the election bill prominent in future campaigns. The president said: "You will find therein the same principle—a guarantee of the rule of the majority. It will not do for the people of any section to say that they must be let alone, that it is a local question to be settled by the states whether we shall have honest elections or not.

"This might be said if it were not for the fact that the principle is at issue in the national elections, and that the inequality upon the floor of the house of representatives is so great that it cannot be ignored. Whether it shall become the dominant issue in an immediate campaign or in the near future is a question for the public to determine."

I asked the president if he was pleased with the aid given by congress to the shipping interests of the country with a view to carrying out the reciprocity policy of the administration. The president said: "Yes, I am very much pleased. What was passed by congress was about all I thought was practical, and all that could be safely accomplished as a preliminary step.

"In attempting anything new it is important to be conservative and avoid extremes. I have always thought it best to begin with steamship lines. They afford swift and rapid transit. They have the carrying of the government mails and are important elements in bringing us in touch with the countries with which we are seeking to improve our trade relations."

The president was asked if he did not think that the tariff issue for the present was ended so far as the republican party was concerned, and that as a party it should resist further agitation of the subject for at least a time. The president said, in reply to this: "Most decidedly I think there should be no more agitation upon this subject until the McKinley bill has been fairly tried. It has been charged with numerous faults.

"There is no reason why its workings should be prejudiced by malevolent predictions. The bill has been already long enough in operation to indicate that much that was charged against it is untrue. A period should be permitted to pass long enough to test fairly the character of the measure. Then if it can be shown by such fair and impartial trial that it has faults let them be eliminated, but until such period is passed there should not be any further agitation of the tariff question."

I asked the president if he did not hold to much the same opinion concerning financial legislation. The president said: "I do not think we need any more financial legislation for the present. What we have, too, should have its period of trial. I do not see any present or near future necessity for further financial legislation. I have favored silver coinage up to the point where I thought it could be safely used. It is not always easy to determine exactly the danger point.

"It is best, however, to be conservative, and I think we have gone about as far at present in the direction of the free coinage of silver as can be done for the best interests of silver. To go further might result in depreciating it. The depreciated dollar's first mission is to go out and cheat some workman in the payment of his day's wages. It is the poor man who feels first the ill effects of a depreciated currency."

The president was asked about the reciprocity policy of the administration, and he said: "I have been engaged for the last few days in considering the various subjects of treaty under this policy. I have been doing what I could to urge along and develop the possibilities which I see in this new extension of our trade. I believe that this policy will result in great good."

At the close of the talk I asked him what he thought of the future of the republican party. The president said that there was already a strong reaction in favor of the party, and that the future would show that it was upon the side of good government and modern progress and well merited the confidence of the country. In expressing this opinion the president said emphatically: "I think it is about time to abolish the chairmanship of apologetics for the republican party."

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known, as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to cleanse the system gently in the springtime, or in fact, at any time, and the better it is known the more popular it becomes.

IF A BODY MEET A BODY

the result is a collision, whether "coming thro' the rye," or not. Life is full of collisions. We are constantly colliding with somebody or something. If it isn't with our neighbors it is with some dread diseases that "knocks us off the track" and perhaps disables us for life. Women especially it seems have to bear the brunt of more collisions and afflictions than mankind. In all cases of nervousness, bearing-down sensations, tenderness, periodical pains, sick headache, congestion, inflammation, or ulceration and all "female irregularities" and "weaknesses," Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription comes to the rescue of women as no other medicine does. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee, from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money paid for it will be refunded. Erastus D. Edgerton, plaintiff, vs. William B. Reed, defendant.

The state of Montana sends greeting to the above named defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above named plaintiff in the district court of the First judicial district of the state of Montana, in and for the county of Lewis and Clarke, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after service on you of this summons, if served within this county; or, if served out of this county, but in this district, within twenty days; otherwise within forty days, or judgment by default will be taken against you, according to the prayer of said complaint.

This action is brought to recover the judgment of this court, in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant, for the sum of four thousand seventy-four and 64-100 dollars, together with interest thereon at the rate of one per cent. per month from the 15th day of April, A. D. 1890, upon a certain promissory note bearing date on the said 15th day of April, A. D. 1890, for said sum of $4,074.64, bearing interest at the rate of one per cent. per month from date until paid, due ninety days after date, made, executed and delivered by defendant to this plaintiff, which said note is not now due, but for the reason that the said defendant is about to dispose of his property subject to execution, for the purpose of defrauding his creditors, this plaintiff institutes this suit prior to the maturity of said note.

Also for the sum of $400, being a reasonable attorney's fee as provided for in said note, and for costs of suit.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will take judgment against you by default for the said sum of $4,074.64, together with interest thereon at the rate of one per cent. per month from the 15th day of April, A. D. 1890, for the sum of $400, attorneys' fees, and for costs of suit.

Given under my hand and the seal of the district court of the First Judicial district of the state of Montana, in and for the county of Lewis and Clarke, this 19th day of May, A. D. 1890.
