THE NEXT SENATE.

Senator Peffer Says the Populists Will Help the Democrats if Necessary.

The recent events in the west indicate that the democrats will have enough members in the next Senate to reorganize that body without outside aid. Still, if that aid should become necessary it is pretty well settled that the populist Senators will vote with the democrats. Senator Peffer gave utterance to such a statement yesterday. "On the question of the organization of the Senate," said Mr. Peffer, "as in all other things, I, for one, intend to be independent. While that is true, I regard it as my duty to put no obstructions in the right of way to which I regard the democrats to be entitled by reason of the popular verdict in the recent election. Hence, in my own case, I would regard any action on our part which would prevent the complete supremacy of the democrats as unwise. I want to do nothing that could be construed as being in their way in any respect, for I think the democratic party ought now to have entire responsibility for the government and for all legislation, that they may show to the country what they propose to do and that we may judge it fairly."

"But will the populists vote with the democrats in the reorganization of the Senate if their votes become necessary to effect that reorganization?" was asked the Senator.

"So that I may not be misunderstood," replied Mr. Peffer, "let me say that whichever party has a majority in the Senate, independently of the populists, it ought, in my judgment, to be permitted to organize the body as that majority sees proper. So far as legislation is concerned, I think nothing should be put in the way of the democrats so as to enable them to do what they have promised to do. I believe in majority rule, and I would not personally put anything in the way of the majority party in the Senate reorganizing it. I would rather assist the democrats in carrying one of their party measures, after having protested against it, if it was in opposition to my judgment as to what ought to be done, than to prevent them from giving their work to the people."
