A strong, clean play is "The Shepherd King." Its four acts take David, the boy warrior-ruler, from the flocks of his father to the court of Saul, from the position of the Jewish monarch's favorite musician to the leadership of the hosts of Israel and—at the moment of his greatest triumph—place him on the throne of his people—a man in deeds but still the child of the hills, the youth of the flocks, loyal, fearless, pure of heart and body. The beautiful Bible tale is unfolded logically and effectively. There is nothing to jar; not a note or a word rings discordant, and last night's audience at the Harnois theater was for a while in Palestine. The story is a beautiful one and is well told by Wright Lorimer and his company. The support accorded Mr. Lorimer, who is a conscientious, finished, capable actor, is far better than is expected of the average road production; but, then, there is nothing about "The Shepherd King" that may be classed as mediocre.

A play that pulls at the heart strings is "The Shepherd King," and yet it is not at all a tragedy, even if the custom of the period it represents is allowed full sway at times. Enhanced and made more beautiful is the story of the rise of the Psalmist by the skilful portrayal of two kinds of love—that of man for man and man for woman. The friendship of David and Jonathan, the love of David for Michal, run through the play as a double thread of pure gold, ennobling and strengthening its web and woof. The effect of "The Shepherd King" is good, the air of the play is wholesome—almost holy and never bordering on the sacrilegious.

Effective staging, gorgeous costumes, masterful effects round out the perfection of the play. Mr. Lorimer is an actor who takes not too much upon himself. He is featured in the title role—that is true—but he does not intrude his personality, which is adapted admirably to the part he plays, that of the shepherd boy faithful to his God, his king, his friends and to himself, ever placing farthest from his thoughts the devouring passion of ambition. In his support the work of Miss Frederica Going, as Michal, stands forth the boldest, although to her and to the star is not to be given all the credit for a finished production.

POLLEY TO LEAVE MISSOULA OFFICES

Today H. N. Polley of the Puget Sound freight office force leaves Missoula for the coast. Mr. Polley will enter the employ of the road in Tacoma. He has made a lot of friends while he has been in the office here, and the regret at his leaving is general. His new position promises to be a good one, however, and he has the best wishes of his friends in his new field.

FOOTBALL RALLY.

The students of the Missoula high school held another football rally in the school building yesterday afternoon. Seven members of the famous 1906 team, all of whom are now starring on the varsity, addressed the students. Preparations are complete for the game with Anaconda Saturday, and the local school is sending the best team it has ever had into the game.

WATSON IS DEAD.

London, Oct. 4.—William Watson, chairman of the Cunard Steamship company, died here today. Mr. Watson was born in 1843.

HERE IS SECTION TWO OF "LO" PUZZLE---MANY PRIZES OFFERED

The above is section 2 of The Missoulian's interesting "Lo" puzzle.

The puzzle is in six sections, and the remaining four sections will appear in The Missoulian for the next four days.

It will be necessary for all the readers participating in the series to have all of the sections in order to properly put the puzzle together.

All the participants must cut out the pieces, paste them on a sheet of paper, with their names and addresses on the back of the paper, and in sending the replies must enclose a self-addressed envelope to Contest Editor, Missoulian, not later than 6 p. m. Monday, October 11.

The replies will be numbered in the order in which they are received, and the following rewards will be given: To the first two correct replies, two box seats each, valued at $8; to the next three correct replies, two orchestra seats, valued at $12; to the next four correct replies, one parquette seat each, valued at $4. The winners' names and the complete puzzle will appear Tuesday, October 12.

"Lo" comes direct from Butte for a one day's engagement, October 13, and then goes direct to Seattle, where it plays a three weeks' engagement at the exposition, after which it returns to the Grand opera house, Chicago, for an indefinite period.

Edward P. Temple, who staged those first three wonderful New York Hippodrome productions, did himself proud in staging "Lo." The book and lyrics are by O. Henry, the noted short story writer, and Franklin P. Adams, humorist of the New York Evening Mail, and the music by A. Baldwin Sloan, composer of "Jack and the Beanstalk," "The Mocking Bird," "The Gingerbread Man" and other noted musical plays. The story is taken from O. Henry's famous short story, "He Also Served," which appeared last year in Collier's Weekly. John E. Young, as Johnny O'Day, a Tammany politician, will be supported by Elizabeth Goodall, Dorothy Bromer, Juliette Lange, who, by the way, is a Council Bluffs girl, Annette Hall, Mabelle Meyles, David Kirkland, Robert Wilson, James A. Reynolds, George A. Leonard and other noted musical comedy favorites, besides a chorus of 32 beautiful girls and 18 men in the chorus.

LORIMER ADDRESSES UNDERGRADUATES

PUBLIC TASTE NEEDS ELEVATING, SAYS ACTOR TO UNIVERSITY STUDENTS.

"It is the public taste, not the stage, which needs reforming," was the statement of Wright Lorimer, the actor, before the students of the state university at a special assembly held at 11:30 yesterday forenoon. For nearly an hour the actor talked to the students, telling something of his own life, of his great play, "The Shepherd King," and discussing questions which he invited the students to ask.

Mr. Lorimer firmly believes in the mission of the stage. The unclean play, he said, is successful because the people want it, and not because the actors themselves prefer it. The moral play and the romantic novel, generally the best creations of the playwrights, go by the boards, he said, because the people very often do not support them, while the lower class of plays are usually assured of financial success.

The questions which were propounded by the students were carefully answered by the actor. In his reply to the question, "What is the compensation of the actor?" he portrayed interestingly the life of the stage people.

Mr. Lorimer spoke of the advantage of college training, stating that the strength, firmness of character and determination which were obtained in college combined a means for success on the stage as well as in other vocations.
