KING PETER LANDS ON SOIL OF ITALY

Serbian Monarch, Very Ill, Hopes to Return Again to His Soldiers.

NO GOLD, HE SAYS, TO PAY FOR A ROOM AT AN INN

Reluctant to Leave Front, But Crown Prince Persuaded Him to Seek Health.

BRINDISI, Italy, December 25, via Paris, December 27, delayed.—King Peter of Serbia has arrived here on board an Italian cruiser.

The sovereign had refused resolutely until now to leave his army, and it was only at the urgent entreaty of his son, the prince regent, that he at last agreed to go into exile.

The prince pointed out to his father that it would be better for him to preserve his strength, so that he would be able, after his health had been restored, to return to his country at the head of a reorganized army.

Carried Ashore in Chair.

PARIS, December 27.—"King Peter of Serbia was brought from Durazzo to Avlona on an Italian cruiser," says the Journal's Avlona correspondent. "The volage was rough and the king had to be carried ashore in an armchair. It was a tragic and heartrending spectacle.

"An automobile carried the monarch to a secluded inn opposite Italian headquarters, where I called upon him and was shown into the poorly furnished room he occupied. His clear eyes, what depths of bitterness did they conceal! His features, hollowed by suffering, what immense weariness did they betray! That sorrowful countenance was the epitome of the whole tragic epoch.

"The physician who interpreted for me told me that upon his arrival the king asked the price of the room and added that he had no gold to pay for it.

No Longer King, He Says.

"'I am no longer king,' he said. 'I am only Gen. Tootani (this name, which will shelter the king's incognito during the exile, is that of a powerful family of Tirana, to which Essad Pasha belongs).' I give no more orders. It is the crown prince who commands. For the future I am nothing in the government. A soldier, I have only to obey.'

"'And the army, your majesty?' I asked.

"'My soldiers are dropping from hunger and weariment. We must feed them and then, after a few weeks' rest, we shall see!'

"'What are your plans, sire?'

"'I want to go to Saloniki to see my minister of war. If this is possible I shall arrange something. I have got to live to see victory for my people and the triumph of our just cause.'"

War Council at Saloniki.

The Athens correspondent of the Havas Agency sends the following:

"The Serbian minister of war arrived yesterday, and was received today by the premier and the Greek minister of war. A number of Serbian deputies also arrived and held a meeting, at which it was decided to ask the Serbian government where the Serbian parliament could reopen."

FELICITATED BY FRIENDS.

Admiral Dewey Quietly Celebrates 78th Anniversary of His Birth.

Admiral George Dewey, hero of the battle of Manila bay, was seventy-eight years old yesterday, and celebrated the anniversary quietly in the usual way by taking a drive through Rock Creek Park. Although in good health, the admiral avoids excitement and public ceremonies.

Many of his friends called at his residence yesterday, and he received numerous congratulatory messages from others.

San Diego Fair Another Year.

Announcement is made that the Panama-California exposition at San Diego will be continued during 1916, with a number of new features. The San Diegans plan some marked improvements. Many foreign exhibits will be moved down from San Francisco, including the Canadian, French, Italian, Dutch, Russian, Spanish, Swiss, German and Austrian. It is probable that India, Persia and Turkey will be added. Exhibits of the California counties have been secured, and a number of "zone" attractions. The Santa Fe's painted desert Indian village also will remain.

His uncle is the Russian ambassador to Great Britain.

SANTA CLAUS VISITS SOLDIERS AT FRONT

Mild Form of Gayety in Battle-Scarred Arras, Following Heavy Shellfire.

FOLK SONGS IN TRENCHES AND MIDNIGHT MASSES

Battle of Rifles and Machine Guns an Accompaniment—Scenes in British Camp.

ARRAS, on the French front, December 26.—Hundreds of big shells tore the air over Arras all Friday afternoon. The echoes of these were the last compliments of the season, and they had no sooner died away than the life of Arras began to show itself through reopened cellar doors and windows, in preparation for the usual Christmas eve festivities.

The people of the Artois region rise above their actions due to the war, and the spirit of Arras survives among the heaps of ruins.

"It would be really a shame if we hadn't gotten used to it during all these months," said a woman selling postal cards and stationery by a candle light on the first floor of a building three parts open to the sky.

"What we've got to do," the woman continued, "is to hold out for final victory and lasting peace."

Rifle Shots Break Stillness.

After the usual systematic shelling died down, rifle shots and the occasional rattle of machine guns were all that broke the stillness of death that settled over the city. The cathedral, where midnight mass was said last year under the thunder of cannon, stood out against the twilight in ragged ruins, like a specter, with crumbling walls of demolished buildings all around, giving the aspect of a gigantic cemetery with decaying headstones.

The rattle of machine guns struck up again, and a few rifle shots rang through the clear air. Toward 8 o'clock the soft strains of an organ were heard from an invisible source. Going through heaps of stone and glass to a chapel entrance, one could see a candle light flickering through the darkness a short distance away. Staff officers, waiting for dinner, led the correspondent for the Associated Press to an adjoining room, which resembled the crater of a miniature extinct volcano.

"If it continues much longer, you are likely to have your dining room also opened to the weather," said the correspondent to the officer.

"That is quite possible," replied a captain, "but the destination of a shell is something over which we haven't found any control yet, have we, lieutenant?" But the lieutenant was absorbed in an illustrated paper, which had just arrived, and made no comment.

Christmas Spirit Manifested.

Santa Claus and the Christmas spirit, notwithstanding the war, were in evidence everywhere along the Artois battle front, where the correspondent passed Christmas eve. They were in the trenches and shelters with the simple soldiers; in the temporary barracks where the traditional Christmas eve theater was replaced by an improvised concert and vaudeville that almost rivaled the best Paris could do in time of peace; in the quarters where the officers celebrated with no less simplicity and dignity, and in the first little church, still defying shell fire, that one finds behind the battle front, midnight mass was celebrated. From the road running almost parallel to the trenches rockets shooting up into the air from both lines recalled the Fourth of July fireworks in America. An officer explained that this was partly due to habit.

"Fuses are set off every night," the officer explained, "even when the moon shines as brightly as tonight; and, besides, the Germans may, as last year, have an idea that we are going at them before morning."

The fuses multiplied at the approach of midnight, and on the stroke of 12 the line as far as the horizon was illuminated as by a long line of brilliant stars. Flashes of different colors could be seen far away to the north, although no reports were heard.

"They are firing away up there around Souchez," a lieutenant explained.

Entertain With Folk Songs.

Several miles up the deep wide ditch, with twelve inches of chalky mud at its bottom, just far enough from the German line to permit tranquil sleep, soldiers entertained each other with simple folk song of their home regions, and examined parcels from home and talked of victory. One soldier read a little note from home, which said: "This year it is I who play father. This year I broke open my savings bank and am sending presents to papa at the front." The soldier didn't explain who the writer was, but his thick, coarse beard failed to hide a touching smile with which he accepted the reversal of Christmas roles.

"They're singing over there," said a soldier, just back from the first-line trench. "They've got an orchestra, and they're shouting to beat all, but it doesn't sound very gay."

Meanwhile, the impromptu concert in the trenches went on in tones that were light, gay and confident. The same phrase was heard in all the toasts given here. It was "Peace through victory."

A little farther from the trenches, in a bombarded barn, covered by an improvised roof, the midnight watch was preceded by a concert, in which the soldiers who joked the military on the stage in peace times reversed the order of things and with the greatest zest caricatured the civilian behind the zone occupied by the armies.

From Trench to Church.

All along the roads in this region two lines passed in different directions. Some with pick, shovel and rifle were going to take their turn in the trenches, while others were going back to the old village church to swell the congregation. Officers, including generals, colonels, captains and lieutenants, with a sprinkling of civilians and many women, were in attendance.

As in the quarters of the soldiers near the trenches, evrything in the attitude of the service brought out the same note: "Peace through victory." A chaplain with the red ribbon of the Legion of Honor on his surplice, who had lost several brothers and has four more in the army, all of whom have been cited in orders of the day, and he himself twice cited for heroic conduct, preached on "Peace Through Victory."

A stretcher bearer, with a military medal, and a grenadier, with a war cross on his breast, sang a Christmas anthem, to the accompaniment of the modest old organ, played by a simple soldier with such a master hand that the strains were quite as inspiring as the best cathedral music. The last note, "Peace on earth, good will toward men," died away as the congregation was filing out of the little church, while in the distance the booming of cannon recalled "No truce for Christmas."

How British Soldiers Celebrated.

LONDON, December 26, 7:43 p.m.—The Reuter correspondent at British headquarters in France sends the following account of how the men spent Christmas:

"Christmas broke over the British western front wet and blowing and altogether cheerless. As the morning advanced the sun struggled through the mists, by the soldiers' dinner time it was quite fine and very mild.

"The day was uneventful in the trenches. Plenty of good fare was provided and conditions were as comfortable as possible amid the waterlogged environments.

"Among the troops in reserve and billets, Christmas was celebrated with more thoroughness. The enemy seemed satisfied to spend his Chirstmas quietly, and there was no intention in the British lines, if the Germans manifested no desire to be aggressive, to force them into hostile activity. On the other hand, every preparation had been made to meet the least tendency to 'strafing' in a vigorous manner.

"Hence, comparative quiet lay upon the fire-withered zone. During the afternoon every available acre of meadow in the rear of the lines was taken possession of for foot ball.

In the trenches themselves there was much hearty singing, ranging from what the French call 'that melancholy hymn, Tipperary,' to "A che la Morte.'

German Voices Heard.

"In places where the enemy lines skirt the British closely the guttural chanting of the Germans was borne athwart the shrill song of the southeaster, and was invariably the signal for a deeper outburst of chorusing on the part of our men to drown the sound.

"Overtures toward fraternizing by the Germans were but slight and faint hearted, as though their rejection was a foregone conclusion.

"There appears to be a general sense of relief among the soldiers that Christmas is over. The spirit of the season is so completely out of harmony with the grim atmosphere of the trenches, and contrasts born of reminiscences are not of a cheerful order.

"'We don't want to stop and think more than we can help,' said a Highlander. 'We just want to get on with it, so that we may sooner be finished.'"

E. E. Montgomery's Death Accident.

Coroner Nevitt yesterday concluded his investigation of the death of Earl E. Montgomery of Montgomery, W. Va., who died Saturday as a result of gas poisoning, and gave a certificate of accidental death. The deceased was an automobile dealer, the police were told, and he was here to purchase automobiles. His brother, Luther Montgomery, reached here yesterday afternoon and arranged to take the body to West Virginia.

Abe Martin Says:

If it wuzn't fer th' folks who are born with silver spoons in ther mouths where would we git all our house-t'-house canvassers?

Some folks pay ther respects like it wuz takin' ther last cent.

RED CROSS PHYSICIANS SAFELY OUT OF SERBIA

American Relief Schooner Albania Arrives at Gallipoli From Durazzo.

ROME, December 25 (delayed).—Dr. G. W. Mendelson, an American Red Cross physician, arrived here today with several other doctors from Serbia and Albania. They explained that they had sent other American doctors to Durazzo, Scutari and Cetinje, these being the only ones left in that region. Dr. Mendelson and his companions plan to leave next week for America by way of Bordeaux.

The American schooner Albania, with William Willard Howard of New York, secretary of the Albanian relief fund, on board, arrived at Gallipoli today. The Albania came from Durazzo, having transported the Austrian and Bulgarian consuls and the Austrian colony, numbering forty-four persons. From these refugees it was learned that the Greeks destroyed 275 villages in South Albania and that the Serbians razed twenty-five others, driving out the population. Mr. Howard distributed flour in Durazzo to all needy persons, irrespective of nationality or creed.

FAMOUS OARSMAN KILLED.

Le Blanc Smith, Cambridge Sculler, Shot While at the Front.

LONDON, December 27.—R. C. Le Blanc Smith, the famous Cambridge University oarsman, has been killed in action in the recent fighting in northern France. He represented the Cantabs three times in the university boat race. At Eton he met with many successes and twice represented the College at Henley. He rowed in the Cambridge coxswainless fours in 1910, 1911 and 1912; won the Colquhoun sculls in 1912 and with C. V. Buxton carried off the Magdalene pairs in 1913.

His death makes the sixteenth Oxford and Cambridge Rowing "Blue" to fall in the war, the others being W. H. Chapman, S. P. Cockrell, P. M. Maitland, S. M. Bruce, R. W. Somers-Smith, G. A. Fisher, B. R. Winthrop-Smith, H. M. Goldsmith, O. A. Carver, G. E. Fairbairn, E. G. Williams, H. J. S. Shields, C. F. Burnard, R. W. Fletcher and G. S. Maclagan.

Railway Sued for $20,000 Damages.

The City and Suburban railway of Washington is named defendant in a suit to recover $20,000 damages, filed in the District Supreme Court, by Richard E. Brooks, a sculptor, who says he was deprived for six weeks of an income from his profession of $250 per week. The plaintiff says he was injured at 13th and G streets northwest June 2 last, by being struck by a car. Attorney R. B. Dickey represents the petitioner.
