The Manchester Journal.

THURSDAY, MARCH 13, 1873

The President called up extra session of the Senate to act on certain measures deemed necessary for the country.

Gen. Dix has stayed the sentence of Foster till the 20th; whether he will get a further reprieve it is impossible to tell. Stokes' case has not yet come before the Supreme Court.

The latest despatches in regard to the New Hampshire election give the vote for Governor in nine hundred and thirty towns give Straw 24,971, Weston 21,853, Blackmer 876, and Mason 466. Relative gains and losses show a Republican net loss of 908.

It is a bad practice to speak ill of the dead, but we must say that the last Congress did more foolish things according to the amount of business done than any preceding Congress for a long series of years. To cap the climax of foolishness they voted to increase their salary, and to apply it to the past two years, which will give each member about $5,000 of the people's money. The members voting themselves the money were chiefly Southern and Western, though Butler of Mass took an active part. No Vermont man was in the nefarious scheme. The members voting for it could only have done it on the ground that their reputation was as bad as possible before, and nothing could make it worse.

THE AGRICULTURAL MEETING.

The meeting of the Vermont Board of Agriculture, at Adam's Hall, Factory Point, last Thursday and Friday was well attended, many of our prominent farmers being present and some of them taking part in the discussions.

It may not be generally known that "The Board" was created by an act of the Legislature in 1870, for the purpose of improving the Agriculture, Manufactures, and Mining of the State, and the sum of $2500 was appropriated to pay the expenses of the Board. Last fall an attempt was made to abolish the Board, but the effort failed.

It has been the object of the present members of the Board to hold meetings in each county of the State for the purpose of awakening a new interest among the farmers, with a view to the introduction of improvements and the diffusion of more general intelligence in regard to the science of farming, for agriculture in its greatest perfection is a really scientific pursuit and ought to be encouraged as such. We hope the Board will be continued and, at least, double the money given it, in order that its sphere of usefulness may be broader, and its labor more effective.

The meeting on Thursday was opened by Loveland Munson, Esq., who gave a short appropriate address of welcome and closed by nominating W. R. Dean, Esq., for Chairman. Mr. Dean was duly elected, and called upon C. G. Pringle, who read an interesting paper on the History and Culture of the Potato. Mr. Pringle was suffering from indisposition and was obliged to read in a low tone, but his paper was listened to with marked attention.—Prof. Collier of Burlington, Secretary of the Board, followed with an address on Agricultural Chemistry. His lecture was purely scientific, but contained many practical hints of value to the farmer. In the evening Hon. F. D. Douglass, of Whiting, read an admirable paper on Butter Making. He uses deep pails instead of pans for setting milk, and they are placed in water kept by the application of ice, at the temperature of about 60°. He showed that the labor was not as great as by the old method, that he got a larger amount of butter, that it was of a better quality, and that milk in the hottest weather could be kept until spring if desired. His butter of the past season was kept until January and sold in market for 37 and 40 cents, about 5 cents higher than the highest market quotations.

Friday morning Hon. A. B. Halburt of Essex read a paper on "Highways," and Z. E. Jameson, Esq., of Irasburgh gave an address on "Grass." In the afternoon Mr. Sumner of Brandon gave his experience in raising turkies, by which he raises the largest gobblers in the world, and Dr. T. H. Hoskins of St Johnsbury gave an address on the Science and Practice of Manuring. In the evening Mr. J. H. Putnam, of Grafton read a paper on Fruit Growing and Mr. Douglass read a paper on Ice Houses.

We would be glad, if space permitted, to give an extended report of all the proceedings, as they were all interesting and profitable to farmers and others.

CORRESPONDENCE.

JACKSONVILLE, Feb. 26th, 1873.

Mr. Editor:

We can now appreciate, that Florida is really the land of flowers, as the cultivated gardens and fruit trees are in full blossom, and the woods are full of wild flowers. We had the pleasure, a few days since, of visiting our friend Colonel Hardie's famed Honey Moon Nursery. We not only found the Colonel a courteous and interesting gentleman, but a practical and instructive fruit grower. The grounds are supplied with a great variety of ornamental trees and shrubs, as well as fruit, such as oranges, lemons, figs, bananas, strawberries, peaches, pears, etc., and a large strawberry field, and ten thousand peach trees in full bloom the middle of February, to a Vermonter at least, is a beautiful sight.

Jacksonville and its Hotels are now at their zenith. It is Manchester in August—magnified. Now is their harvest, and the reapers are numerous.

Church Fairs seem quite popular here. Last night we attended one at the National Hall, given by the ladies of the Ocean Street Presbyterian Church, which was a grand affair, the Hall being well filled with the youth and beauty of the city, and the tables loaded with tempting eatables, fancy work and Florida curosities, one of the most attractive tables being from the St. James Hotel, superintended by Miss Norcross of Boston. One of the main features of the Fair was a New England Kitchen of olden times. We should judge it was a success—financially. But we must not fail to notice a similar occasion last week, in the same Hall, given by the ladies of the African M. E. Church, which was not to be outdone by their white Neighbors in the attractiveness of the tables, the music by the brass band, and the polite attention and general style of its lady managers. We have seldom spent a more enjoyable evening.

A word for the St. James which is doing a splendid business. With its present management, considering the comfort of its many distinguished guests and the pockets of the owners, it is, I think, a success. E. P.

ST. AUGUSTINE, FLA., March 3, 1873.

Editor Manchester Journal:

We started from Jacksonville at 9 o'clock a. m., Saturday, on the Lizy Bake up the St. Johns river 65 miles to Tocoi, where we found the St. Augustine Railroad. We procured our tickets and packed ourselves, 27 in number, into the car, which is about half as large as a common Horse Car, the motive power being horses and mules.—This being the last train they connected horses, after tying up the harness (where it was considered unsafe) with strings. We got under way at 2 o'clock. The road is 15 miles long, nearly all the way through pine woods and cypress swamps. The track is hard pine rails considerably worn, but the driver considers it safe to trot his horses, without regard to shaking the filling out of the passengers teeth. We arrived here at 5:30, which they consider fast time. St. Augustine being the oldest town in America, it is visited by nearly every one who comes to Florida. There are three very good hotels and they are all full. The Old Fort and the City Gate, which were built or commenced in 1620, also, the old Spanish Cathedral, are built of Corkonia which is a composition of small shells quarried on the Beach in blocks to suit the builders, and is very durable. The old streets are very narrow. Charlotte Street which runs from the old Gate the entire length of the town, is 13 feet wide between buildings. Some of the buildings having piazzas on the 2d story, leaving only 5 or 6 feet between. Of course we went through the Fort, and all over the town; attended mass in the old Spanish Cathedral, and found it very interesting, but don't hanker to live here. E. P.

EAST DORSET, March 10, 1873.

Mr. Editor:

Having devoted some little time of late to the collecting of California statistics, and information, I here send you a few items, which may be of interest to some persons whose attention has not been called in this direction.

The State of California contains 150,000 square miles of area; or, in other words, it is larger than the great States of New York and Pennsylvania, together with all New England.

This immense tract of country with four or five times as much more, was ceded to the United States by Mexico in the year 1848. Gold was discovered in California the same year. Since which time its mountains and valleys yielded $92,1 millions of the precious metal.

The gold excitement having in a measure subsided, men are opening their eyes to the fact that California is not merely the Eldorado of the miner, but that in addition to its golden treasure it possesses a remarkably mild and delightful climate, soft Italian skies, magnificent mountain scenery with rich and fertile valleys. Surpassing any of the older States in the luxuriance and variety of its production, California is now being sought as the Arcadia where man may fitly establish his hearthstone, for himself and his children after him. The camp of the miner is rapidly disappearing, and in its place springs up the well built village with its churches and school houses. Law and order prevail to-day, where yesterday Statutes were unknown and protection was found only in the strong right arm. There the agriculturist is producing his butter, cheese, wool, apples and pears, as in New England; or his wheat, corn, rye, oats, barley, peaches, plums, and cherries, as in the Mississippi Valley; or in selected locations, his rice, cotton, tea, coffee, tobacco, grapes, figs, oranges, lemons, bananas, and almonds as in the sunny South. There also his strawberries ripen, and his roses bloom each month in the year. Though farming in California is yet in its infancy the surplus of wheat alone, for the year 1872, over and above the amount required for home consumption amounted to over $10,000,000.

In the U. S. Census reports of products for 1869 this young State is shown to have produced more wheat rye and barely to the acre sown, than any other State in the Union. Kansas and Nebraska are the only states which outstripped it on corn to the acre.—California also appears to have more cattle, hogs, and sheep than any other State in proportion to inhabitants.—This State also had on the first day of January, 1873, twenty savings banks holding an average of $797,37 for each depositor, while at the same date the savings banks of the State of New York held but $217,79 for each depositor.

Twenty-five years ago hardly three vessels a year entered the harbor of San Francisco, while in the year just passed 3670 vessels—including steamers—passed in at the Golden Gate—Tonnage 1,237,257.

In 1850 California contained 92,697 inhabitants, in 1870 it numbered 560,647 inhabitants. Of this population 3500 are natives of our own Green Mountain State. 37,000 are Yankee born. Nearly 24,000 are from the State of New York, while Pennsylvania finds there 11,000 of her sons and daughters. So we will not think it strange that California should at this early day, make a fair show of good society, made up of intelligent and enterprising Eastern people, who give tone and character to the institutions of the State.

The Public School System of California is modeled after that of the State of New York. Large tracts of valuable land have been donated for school purposes. The amount raised for school expenses of 1872 was $2,000,000. There is a State Board of Education, State and County Superintendents etc.—Thorough qualification is required of teachers. Each district is provided with globes, maps, charts, etc. There are also graded schools, a normal school and university; in all of which tuition is free. Continued willful disobedience or habitual profanity and vulgarity are causes of expulsion.

There are in California 744 libraries other than private, containing 159,625 volumes. Two hundred newspapers and phamphlets are published in the State.

Of churches, there are thirty Baptist, forty Congregational, seventy-nine Presbyterian, forty-five Episcopalian, one hundred and eighty-four Methodist, thirty Christian, one hundred and sixty Roman Catholic, and seven Jewish.

The climate of California is much more equable than that of the Mississippi Valley or of the Eastern States. The changes from heat to cold are neither great nor frequent.

With the exception of high up on the Sierras, some peaks of which are snow capped the year round, the average temperature of Northern California is 63°, the same as Vermont; while the average winter temperature is 43° being 22° warmer than Vermont in winter. Average temperature of Southern California 70°, winter 19°. Immediately on the coast in both Northern and Southern California the average difference between summer and winter is only 11°. This is one secret of the marvelous tropical production of that region.

On the important question of health, death is everywhere, taking for its own all ages and conditions. But, from the best information I can obtain, California is as healthy as any other State, and more so than many of them. The United States tables of mortality from information collected with the last census are I believe not yet published. The reports of 1860, make in California one death to one hundred and two living, and in Vermont for the same time one death to every 93 living. Typhoid fever and consumption are much more prevalent in Vermont than in California. While scarlatina and pneumonia are most common in the latter State. At Santa Barbara, Cal., the hottest day was 94° and the coldest day 42° above. Population 2982. Mortality for the year one death to every hundred and five inhabitants. In Dorset, Vt. for the same year there was one death to every fifty one inhabitants; and in Bennington County one to every sixty-five.

There is room for a few more people in California if they go quick. There are several million acres of good unimproved farm lands yet in government hands for sale, and millions more in the hands of Railroad Corporations for sale and settlement, on reasonable terms. Though California has six times as many inhabitants as it had in 1850, it still has but three to the square mile, while Vermont has thirty two to the square mile, and Massachusetts one hundred and eighty-seven to the square mile.

I must not forget to mention for the benefit of sportsmen, that game is abundant on foot and on the wing throughout the Pacific slope.

Distance from here to San Francisco 2200 miles—time seven days.

Yours Truly,

F. FIELD.

The World's Dispensary, founded by Dr. R. V. Pierce, in Buffalo, N. Y., for the treatment of all chronic, lingering diseases, as well as for the manufacture of his Celebrated Family Medicines, is probably one of the largest medical establishments in the world. Besides the hundreds of cases that consult Dr. Pierce personally at the above establishment, many more are successfully treated at a distance by letter, the necessary medicines being forwarded by mail or express. One of the largest buildings in Buffalo is wholly occupied by the Doctor's immense business. His valuable professional services may be secured by addressing him and enclosing stamp for reply and a printed list of questions to be asked in describing case. 6i3
