Auction Sale

Of Building Lots in the City of Johnsonville.

ON THURSDAY, FRIDAY and SATURDAY, May 11th, 12th and 13th, we will offer for sale on the premises, a large number of Building Lots in the Town of Johnsonville,

Town of Johnsonville,

a published plan of which can be seen at our office, and at the principal Hotels, and other public places, in this city. Being slightly located on the East bank of the Tennessee river, 12 miles from the capital, and at the terminus of the Nashville and Northwestern Railroad, a distance of 71 miles from that City; surrounded, as it is, by a rich and productive country, and being in almost constant communication with many of the most important commercial cities of the North and Southwest, should not an element day, become equally of vast importance. Such an opportunity for a safe and profitable investment is not seldom offered. We are the sole agents for the sale of this town, and are fully authorized and empowered by grant titles to purchasers.

The Nashville and North-Western Railroad will be thoroughly repaired in the course of a few days, when regular trips will be made between this city and Johnsonville. A liberal trade permit has been granted.

We will also offer at the same time about 200 acres of rich and heavily timbered land, lying in the immediate vicinity of the town.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Of Saturday's operations, the Tribune's correspondent says: At 7 a. m. the 5th corps was again in motion, passing to the left, along White Oak road, to join Sheridan, executing the difficult movement of marching by flank, in the enemy's presence, withdrawing divisions in the rear of each other and marching them off successfully from right to left. The left division, Crawford's, executing the same movement by brigades. While this was taking place the 2d corps moved toward White Oak road by a more direct route, and established a connection with the right of the 5th corps. Meanwhile Sheridan, with four cavalry divisions was passing around the left of the whole army, going through Dinwiddie C. H., and towards the South Side railroad, with his usual rapidity.

The force that drove Crawford and Ayres across Gravelly Run, however, at once turned their attention to him, moving rapidly to the right, and after a desperate conflict he also was forced back to within one mile of Dinwiddie C. H., but finally, being joined by Warren's corps, he again took the offensive, and drove the rebels, capturing a position known as the 5 forks, together with about 400 prisoners and several batteries of artillery. He was then joined by Miles' division, of the 2d corps, and pushed westward for the South Side road, which he soon reached and took position on.

The 5th corps, supporting the cavalry, also took 15 guns and about 200 prisoners, enabling Sheridan to drive back the force which, on Friday, checked his advance, near Dinwiddie C. H.

On receiving this news it was determined to give the enemy no time to send troops to their right, and, at once, a simultaneous attack was ordered, all along the lines, by the 9th, 6th, 24th and 2d corps.

An order was given about nine o'clock at night, and in less than an hour a furious assault began on the rebel entrenchments in front of their several commands, resulting in the enemy being driven in confusion from their first into the second line of works, with a loss of over 5,000 prisoners, several forts and about twenty pieces of artillery.

The Second Corps was engaged slowly in their front, and in spite of the terrible fire of musketry poured into their ranks behind their works, succeeded in maintaining their new line, several hundred yards in advance of the line they occupied in the morning. The 6th Corps occupied the centre of our line, connecting with the 24 corps at Hatcher's Run, and its right going to the left of the 5th corps.

Before daylight Sunday morning, the rebels made a furious assault in the position of this line, driving a portion of the 3d brigade from their earthworks, and capturing about 100 men. Their success, however, did not last long. The 36th Pennsylvania, by a gallant charge, drove them beyond their first line of works.

A sharp fire was kept up all day by both sides. Owing to the hot fire by our sharpshooters, the enemy was unable to work his guns, consequently, very few casualties occurred to our side from shells. Our batteries, however, replied incessant fire into their entrenchments.

There was little fighting in front of the 5th corps until night, when considerable shelling occurred. Quiet also reigned in front of the 9th corps. So matters stood until 10 o'clock, when the 2d corps was started into sharper activity by a few shots on their front, soon swelling into battling volleys. The batteries joined in the chorus, and firing spread rapidly to the front of the 24th corps, and on to the 5th. Then away to the right until it reached the 5th about 11 o'clock, at which time the fighting was at its height. Presently cheers broke out on the front of the 24 as the fire slackened by the 2d. The fire had nearly ceased along the whole line, but at 4 in the morning it suddenly broke out again nearer than ever to the 24 corps, while sharp artillery practice was heard far to the right, and again the crash of battle spread from end to end of the lines. At 5 o'clock the battle was raging fiercely, but our colors were advancing all along the line.

The World's correspondent repeats the attack on the Petersburg defences. It was to take place on Friday morning at 4 o'clock, but the failure on our left was doubtless the cause of postponement.

The plan of this last part of the action was this: Gen. Ord, on the receipt of Sheridan's victory at Five Forks, immediately dispatched couriers in connection with the telegraph testing to his headquarters, to each of the corps commanders, requiring them without loss of time to open with both artillery and infantry upon the works of Petersburg. Sheridan, it will be remembered, attained his success by half past 7 o'clock Saturday night—at 9 Grant hearing it, and before 12 our columns had passed the picket line and came on their way to the rebel entrenchments—Parke on the right, Wright in the centre, and Ord on the left, marched almost at the same instant. The 9th corps (Wright's) were arranged in double line of battle, and without ceremony they threw themselves in the ditch and up the parapet. The contest was short though terrible, and a desperate hand to hand conflict occurred. The deadly bayonet and the impulsive and fatal crashes of musket and revolver; the crossing of swords; the volley now and then when our troops poured an enfilading fire up and down the inside of the parapet. The yells and groans, the galloping of couriers to and fro from end to end of the lines. In places the ditches were heaped with living and dying combatants, tumbled together promiscuously, but every now and then northern cheers told how the conflict went. On each side the 6th corps the rain was the same. Opposite Fort Hell the rebels had a fort called Fort Heaven, at which they fought like Satan's legions.

NEW YORK, April 4.—A fire occurred this afternoon in the factory of Sanders & Co. The roof fell in, and it is reported from 4 to 5 men, mostly firemen, were burned in the ruins.

CINCINNATI, April 4.—The whole Union ticket was elected yesterday by about from majority. Only two thousand votes polled at Colerabus; the Union men elected six out of the nine councilmen.—Vote for Mayor lost.

At Dayton the entire Union ticket was elected.

WASHINGTON, April 4, 11:15 a.m.—General Bix: The following particulars, dated City Point, April 4, 8 o'clock, give the latest information from the front.—General Weitzel telegraphs from Richmond that of Railroad stock, he found there 28 locomotives, 44 passenger and baggage cars, and 106 freight cars.

At 3:30 this morning, Gen. Grant, from Sutherland station, 10 miles from Petersburg towards Burkeville, telegraphed that Gen. Sheridan had picked up 1500 prisoners to day. From three to five thousand more have been gathered up by our troops. The majority of the arms that were left in the hands of Lee's army are now scattered between Richmond and where his troops now are. The country is also full of stragglers. The line of retreat is marked with artillery, ammunition, burned or charred wagons, caisons, ambulances, &c.

E. M. STANTON, Sec'y of War.

FORTRESS MONROE, April 3, via BALTIMORE, April 4.—The mail steamer Decatur arrived from City Point at three o'clock this morning, and brings additional particulars of the great struggle.

Petersburg was occupied by our own troops at three o'clock Monday morning. Our gunboats were all well up the James river, and it was thought that a fight had taken place with the rebel iron clads.

Large fires were seen up the James to night towards Fort Darling, and in the vicinity of other rebel works, from which it was inferred that Lee was abandoning his works, and retreating from his long established lines.

An immense number of prisoners have been captured, and are variously estimated at from fifteen to eighteen thousand.

Prisoners are constantly arriving at City Point, and it is estimated there was fifteen thousand there.

This morning, when the steamer left, a salute was being fired by all the war vessels at the Point.

The steamer Cossack arrived here to-day with a large number of Union prisoners, including Gen. McLaughlin and the men of his brigade captured with him by the the rebels in the assault on fort Steadman. Such was the haste of the rebels in hurrying the Union prisoners through Richmond on Sunday, that in many cases many were not even paroled. The returned prisoners say that in coming through Richmond on Sunday they saw manifest indications of the evacuation of that city. The street were alive with people of all classes, conditions and ages, manifesting intense excitement. All the Union prisoners in Libby prison were ordered to be exchanged by the rebel authorities, and were hurried through the city of Richmond towards the various landings in the greatest possible haste.

New York, April 4.—A fire in Brooklyn this morning, by the falling of the wall and roof of the burning building, it is ascertained, twenty firemen were precipitated into the ruins.

The Herald's correspondent says General Warren was relieved of his command on Saturday, by order of Gen. Sheridan. The cause was generally understood to be tardiness or refusal to obey orders by charging the rebel lines.

Gen. Warren and staff passed to the rear, stopping but a few moments at Grant's headquarters.

St. Louis, April 4.—The steamer Bertrand, bound for Fort Benton, upper Missouri, with a valuable cargo, sunk above Omaha, on Saturday. The boat and cargo are a total loss. The boat was valued at $50,000.

The entire radical city ticket, was elected yesterday, by three thousand majority.
