THE RECORD OF THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES.

OMISSIONS SUPPLIED.

DR. QUININE MERCER.

The editor of the Times, in his paper of the 11th inst., claims to be a refugee from rebel oppression, and publishes a letter recommending him to the Secretary of the Treasury for an office, to corroborate the claim. This portion of the Kentucky record of this base imposter has a very fair appearance. It is for that reason that he essays to make it prominent. He has nothing, however, to say about the imposition he played on the people in Kentucky in the publication of the "Dollar Southerner," a namby pamby literary paper which he tried to recommend to the support of Southern readers as a Southern production, which should be encouraged instead of Northern papers, some of which, he said, "every now and then showed its cloven foot, and proved to be of the genuine ABBY FOTSON, WENDELL PHILLIPS, LLOYD GARRISON school—impudent, officious, insidious and slanderous; disseminating the most outrageous falsehoods against the people of the very section where they get their best patronage. The Southerner flourished for awhile, if his lying editorials are to be credited, "like a green bay tree." Subscriptions poured in from Mississippi and Alabama, and from old Virginia, and he was constrained to invoke Heaven's blessings on the fair ladies of Charlottesville. This was a part of his system, as it is now in the case of the Times, to hoodwink the public, and create the belief that he was prospering. The upshot of the Southerner enterprise was, its premature death. It died of too much mercy, and numerous citizens of Kentucky, who had paid him in advance, are to this day complaining of the manner in which he diddled them.

There is another chapter in his record, of which he seems to be oblivious. In 1861, while he was handing round his hat and soliciting alms as a refugee from the tyranny of Lloyd Tilghman, he received a contribution in the shape of a mail agency. This afforded him an opportunity to speculate. His cupidity, ever keen, always grasping, suggested the idea of doing a big thing. The Southern Confederacy needed quinine—thousands of its ragamuffin soldiery might die if that drug were not supplied. Humanity as well as cupidity justified an attempt to send the drug to the sufferers. So Blifil and Black George coalesced. Sam Mercer, United States Mail Agent, and Jim Rowland, the rebel Provost Marshal at Hopkinsville, Ky., entered into an arrangement whereby each might be profited, and the rebel fever and ague patients furnished with quinine. The following letter from the godly—or godless—Sam, on the subject, originally appeared in the Louisville Journal, but we copy it as it appeared in the Nashville Daily Press, of September 22, 1864.

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky., Nov. 15, 1861.

Dr. Rowland: I am at a loss to know what to do in reference to our business, in consequence of the departure of L. from Madisonville. Let me make a suggestion for your consideration. Suppose you get W. C. to come with a hack full of passengers, or something else. I can easily pass him beyond the pickets with the package under Government seal. He can then break it open, if you wish to see that all is right; the goods, of course, must be paid for when he receives them. In consequence of a report of the occupation of Madisonville by the foes, I disposed of the larger portion, but can get plenty more—as much as you want—and will send you 300 oz quinine in the first lot. Tennessee money is worthless here and elsewhere. I cannot use it at 50 per cent. discount, so you must excuse me from taking it. I am compelled to use it here. I get 3 per ct (Kentucky funds) and you shall have it at the same, which will give you a splendid profit.

Let me know immediately what you will do, and, if you have given out the idea, please mention it to some one who can do it. I do not apprehend any check for four or five weeks yet.

Your friend, S. C. M.

Now is'nt this a "pretty kettle of fish"? Here is a poor refugee, charitably appointed to office by the general Government, and aiding its enemies, by smuggling quinine to them under the broad seal of the Government!—Why the wretch, if he had his due would be serving the country at Alton with other smugglers.

And this fellow has the impudence to assail J. B. Bingham, the Editor of the Memphis Bulletin, a confidential friend and agent of Gov. Johnson—a gentleman who has done the Union cause good and efficient service in our State Conventions, and on the Union Central Committee. Why, the miserable mendicant and stipendiary is not worthy to loose the latches of Bingham's shoes. He has been a fawning sycophant so long, and licked so abjectly the feet of men in office about the State Capitol, he misconceives human nature, and thinks all men like himself. He may, by fraud and imposture, deceive members of the Legislature who know him not. Others he can not.

With these remarks, the publishers of the Union, upon whom he was once imposed, but who refused a second attempt of the kind, with scorn, let him pass for to-day.

IODINE
As a remedial agent has long been in use, and its virtues are familiar to all.
PARKER'S
IODINISED OIL,
OR IODINE LINIMENT,
IS so prepared, that while all the benefits to be derived from the use of Iodine are not only preserved but greatly enhanced by the addition of other excellent ingredients, the unpleasant discoloration of the skin consequent upon the use of Iodine, either in the form of a tincture or an ointment, is entirely avoided.
As Proprietors of this article we feel warranted in saying that as a ready remedy for all the ailments wherein a good liniment is required, this preparation cannot be surpassed.
For Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Tetter, Ring Worm, or any Eruption of the skin, it is a Specific Remedy.
It cures Sprains or Bruises;
It cures Sore Throat;
It cures Headache or Toothache;
It cures Neuralgia;
It cures Chapped Hands;
Or Rough Skin;
It cures Corns
Or Bunions;
It cure Sore
Nipples or
Caked
Breast.
Each day the testimony of those who are using it bears evidence to its efficacy. As an application for Horses nothing can be better. It is now being used in almost all the Livery Stables in St. Louis, and in a majority of them has superseded the use of any other liniment. Prepared only by WM. B. PARKER & CO., corner of Broadway and Carr Sts., St. Louis.
